Held, that a change of entity occurred resulting in a new and distinct corporation and that as the property acquired for stock, including surplus and undivided profits, was paid in prior to January 1, 1914, pursuant to section 207 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1917, the tangible property received by the O Company may be included in invested capital at its actual cash value as of January 1, 1914, to the extent that such value is not in excess of the par value of stock or shares specifically issued therefor.

I (22)—3-39: L. O. 1081.

INCOME TAX—SECTION 331, REVENUE ACT OF 1918.

Section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 is not made inapplicable because of the fact that a control of 50 per cent or more in the trade, business, or property reorganized, consolidated, or transferred subsequent to March 3, 1917, does not remain in any of the previous owners, provided such control does remain in the same persons or any of them.

Where section 331 applies to the transfer of assets from one corporation to another, the assets transferred shall be valued, for invested capital purposes, in accordance with the provisions of section 326, provided such values do not exceed the allowed value, for invested capital purposes, of the assets if such assets had not been transferred.

Article 941 of Regulations 45 should be amended to conform herewith.<sup>1</sup>

The question has arisen as to whether article 941 of Regulations 45 contains the correct interpretation of section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918.

Section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 provides as follows:

Sec. 331. In the case of the reorganization, consolidation, or change of ownership of a trade or business, or change of ownership of property, after March 3, 1917, if an interest or control in such trade or business or property of 50 per cent or more remains in the same persons, or any of them, then no asset transferred or received from the previous owner shall, for the purpose of determining invested capital, be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed under this title in computing the invested capital of such previous owner if such asset had not been so transferred or received: Provided, That if such previous owner was not a corporation, then the value of any asset so transferred or received shall be taken at its cost of acquisition (at the date when acquired by such previous owner) with proper allowance for depreciation, impairment, betterment, or development, but no addition to the original cost shall be made for any charge or expenditure deducted as expense or otherwise on or after March 1, 1913, in computing the net income of such previous owner for purposes of taxation.

Article 941 of Regulations 45, which interprets section 331, reads:

Art. 941. Where a business is reorganized, consolidated, or transferred, or property is transferred, after March 3, 1917, and an interest or control of 50 per cent or greater in such business or property remains in any of the previous owners, then for the purpose of determining invested capital each asset so transferred is valued (a) as if still in the possession of the previous owner, if a corporation, or, if not a corporation, (b) at its cost to such previous owner, with proper adjustments for losses and improvements. This provision is accordingly concerned with the computation of invested capital for the taxable year, while section 330 of the statute is chiefly concerned with the determination of invested capital for the prewar period.

The validity of article 941, in so far as it provides that section 331 applies only when an interest or control of 50 per cent or more remains "in any of the previous owners," has been questioned.

The following hypothetical case, which is merely illustrative of actual cases which have arisen, has been presented. The N corporation transfers to O corporation, subsequent to March 3, 1917, tangible property in exchange for 20 per cent of its stock. Seventy-five per cent of the stock of corporations N and O is owned by the same individual but the corporations are not affiliated.

It is apparent in this case that an interest or control of 50 per cent or more in the property does not remain after the exchange "in any of the previous owners," inasmuch as the N corporation, the previous owner of the asset, owns only a small proportion of the outstanding stock of the O corporation. Thus, if article 941 correctly interprets this section of the statute, the O corporation can include in invested capital the actual value of the property exchanged, subject to the limitations contained in section 326, even if such value is in excess of the allowable value for invested capital purposes of the property to the N corporation.

Section 331, however, limits the amounts to be included in the invested capital of the new owner if an interest or control in the property of 50 per cent or more "remains in the same persons or any of them." In the case stated above it is apparent that, by virtue of stock holdings, a control in excess of 50 per cent in the property transferred "remains in the same persons," i. e., the stockholders of the N and O corporations.

Article 941 of Regulations 45, therefore, is incorrect, in so far as it provides that in order that section 331 be applicable an interest or control of 50 per cent or more in the property exchanged must remain in the previous owners.

Article 941 provides further that where section 331 applies the property transferred, if transferred by a corporation, is valued, for the purpose of determining invested capital, as if still in the possession of the previous owner.

The provisions of article 941 on this point can be most clearly shown by application to a specific case: The N corporation, which owned 50 per cent of the outstanding stock of the O corporation, transferred subsequent to March 3, 1917, unimproved real estate, which cost it $100,000 but which at the time of the exchange, due to a decrease in market value, was worth only $20,000, to the O corporation in exchange for stock. Under the provisions of article 941 the asset so transferred should be valued, for the purpose of determining the invested capital of the O corporation, "as if still in the possession of the previous owner." That is, the O corporation should include in invested capital, on account of the asset transferred, $100,000, the allowable value of the asset, provided for invested capital purposes, to the N corporation, in spite of the fact that the actual cash value of the asset at the time of the exchange was only $20,000.

Section 326 provides that invested capital includes "the actual cash value of tangible property other than cash, bona fide paid in for stock or shares, at the time of such payment * * *." Section 331 makes an exception to this general rule in the case of a change of ownership of property between corporations subsequent to March 3, 1917, where an interest or control of 50 per cent or more remains in the same persons, and provides that in such case the property transferred shall not be allowed a greater value, for invested capital purposes, "than would have been allowed * * * in computing the invested capital of such previous owners * * *." In the case stated above, the asset paid into the O corporation for stock should be included at its actual cash value at the time paid in, under the provisions of section 326 unless the case falls within the exception covered by section 331. This latter section merely provides, however, that an asset so transferred shall not be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed the previous owner, if a corporation, and is, therefore, by its own terms, inoperative unless the actual cash value of the property at the time of the exchange is in excess of the allowable value of the property, for invested capital purposes, in the hands of the previous owner. Inasmuch as the actual cash value of the asset transferred, in the instant case, was $20,000, a lesser amount than the allowable value of the asset, for invested capital purposes, in the hands of the N corporation, section 331 is not operative. Therefore the O corporation should include in invested capital, under section 326, $20,000, the actual cash value of the asset at the time paid in for stock.

It is concluded that:

(1) Section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 is not made inapplicable because of the fact that a control of 50 per cent or more, in the trade, business, or property reorganized, consolidated, or exchanged, subsequent to March 3, 1917, does not remain in any of the previous owners, provided such control does remain in the same persons, or any of them.

(2) Where section 331 applies to the transfer of assets from one corporation to another, the assets transferred shall be valued, for invested capital purposes, in accordance with the provisions of section 326, provided such value does not exceed the allowable value, for invested capital purposes, of the assets, if such assets had not been transferred.

Article 941 of Regulations 45 should be amended to conform herewith

Revenue Act of 1917.

Recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that the reincorporation of the appellant company in 1914 under the laws of the State of Y did not constitute such a reorganization as would permit that company to claim a greater amount of statutory invested capital for the year 1917 than would have been allowed had that company continued to operate under the charter granted by the State of Z, be sustained, and that it be held that such a reorganization did take place in 1902 and the appellant company's statutory invested capital for the year 1917 be recomputed upon the basis of the values existing at the time of such reorganization.

The Committee has had under consideration the appeal of the M Company from the action of the Income Tax Unit in reducing the amount of invested capital claimed by the appellant for the year 1917. The question at issue and the facts in the case are stated in a memorandum of the Unit as follows:

The question is: Shall the taxpayer be permitted to include in invested capital a paid-in surplus of 15x dollars (net) representing the excess of actual value of tangible assets over the par value of stock issued therefor at the time of the alleged reorganization December —, 1914, and also include in invested capital good will in the amount of 20 per cent of the outstanding stock on March 3, 1917?

Facts:

The business was established in 187— by A. He conducted it individually until 189—, when the M Company (the first M Company by that name) was organized with an authorized capital stock of 4x dollars.

In July, 1902, the M Company (of Z) was organized, with an authorized capital stock of 40x dollars, acquiring the business and good will of the first M Company of Y. It was at the time immediately prior to the organization of the M Company of Z that the item of good will made its appearance on the books of the old M Company. The item of good will did not appear in the balance sheet of the M Company of Y in January, 1902, but was set up in the July balance sheet at  $18\frac{1}{2}x$  dollars. Immediately thereafter the business was transferred to the M Company of Z. At the time of creating the item of good will on the books of the old M Company the stock was not increased but an asset of good will was created and a corresponding credit was made to surplus.

The M Company of Z continued in business until 1914, in the meantime increasing its capital stock to 50x dollars.

Under date of December —, 1914, the present M Company of Y was organized, with an authorized capital stock of 50x dollars. This stock was issued to the shareholders of the predecessor M Company of Z share for share. The assets of the old company were transferred to the new company and continued on its books without change in value.

In its return the taxpayer claimed invested capital computed as follows:

	Dollars.
Capital stock.....	50x
Surplus earned since 1902.....	12x
<hr/>
Add under Schedule B—Paid-in surplus at date of organization of second M Company of Y in 1914 based on excess of actual value of tangible assets over book value at that date.....	15½x
	77½x
Deduct under Schedule C—Excess of book value of good will over 20 per cent limitation.....	8½x
Depreciation not charged off.....	¾x
	9¼x
	68¼x
Add under Schedule D—Additional issues of stock during taxable year	16x
	84¼x
Invested capital.....	84¼x

The Income Tax Unit, by letter of April —, 1919, recomputed the invested capital as follows:

	Dollars
Capital stock.....	50x
Surplus earned from December, 1914, to Dec. 31, 1916.....	8¼x
<hr/>
Additions under Schedule D for additional capital stock issued during taxable year.....	16x
	74¼x

The elimination of paid-in surplus was based on the theory that, granting the values claimed by the company for its tangible assets at date of organization in 1914, it followed that the entire stock of 50x dollars was issued for tangible property and that the paid-in surplus, therefore, represented intangible assets and could not be allowed. See article 63, Regulations 41, which permits a paid-in surplus only with respect to tangible property.

The Income Tax Unit, by letter of June —, 1920, made a further adjustment in the company's invested capital, the reason therefor not being pertinent to the present inquiry. Said letter adhered to the former action in the disallowance of good will.

It is appropriate at this step to invite attention to the fact that the record indicates that the Advisory Tax Board passed upon the item of paid-in surplus, the decision being adverse to the taxpayer. A formal ruling by the Board, however, does not appear in the record.

The company has rebutted the finding that the paid-in surplus represented intangible assets. In this connection see pages 8 and 9 of the brief showing that the opening entries on the books in 1914 recite that the capital stock of the M Company, then organized, was issued specifically for good will in the amount of  $18\frac{1}{2}x$  dollars, and furthermore that the certificate of issue of capital stock filed with the State of Y discloses that  $18\frac{1}{2}x$  dollars of the 50x dollars of capital stock was specifically issued for the asset good will.

In rendering its tax returns for the year 1917 the appellant took the position that there had been a reorganization of the company in 1914 and that the value of the assets transferred to it by the M Company of Z at the time of such transfer should be taken as a basis for the establishment of the amount of statutory invested capital allowable in the computation of its profits tax liability for the year 1917. The Unit in disallowing a portion of the amount of invested capital claimed for that year took the position that inasmuch as the assets of the M Company of Z were taken over by the new M Company of Y without any change in value and without any change in business or amount of capitalization, with the stockholders of the new M Company of Y the same as those of the M Company of Z, there was no such reorganization in 1914 as would permit the M Company to value its assets for invested capital purposes at a greater amount than would its predecessor company be permitted to have valued its assets had it continued to operate under the charter granted by the State of Z.

As appears from the records in the case, the surrender of the M Company's Z charter and its acquirement of a Y charter effected merely a change in domicile and charter without any accompanying change in business, capitalization, surplus, or stock ownership, and therefore the Committee, adhering to the opinion expressed by it relative to a very similar case previously considered, as set forth in A. R. R. 16 (C. B. 2, p. 312), recommends that the action of the Unit in holding that the reincorporation of the M Company in 1914 under the laws of the State of Y did not permit that company to claim a greater amount of statutory invested capital for the year 1917 than would have been allowed had that company continued to operate under the charter issued by the State of Z, be sustained.

However, as shown by the records, there was a decided change in capitalization as well as a change in domicile and character in 1902 when the M Company surrendered its first Y charter and reincorporated under the laws of the State of Z. At the time of such surrender the company was capitalized at 4x dollars, and it was reincorporated with an authorized capital of 40x dollars. Taking this fact into consideration, the Committee is of the opinion that a reorganization took place in 1902, and that the company's statutory invested capital for the year 1917 should be recomputed upon the basis of the values existing at the time of such reorganization, with particular care given to the ascertainment of the value of the good will of the company as of July —, 1902, the date upon which it appears the said reorganization was effected, and to the ascertainment of the value of the leaseholds, if any, which were transferred by the first M Company to the M Company of Z on that date.

In view of the foregoing, the Committee recommends that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that the reincorporation of the M Company in 1914 under the laws of the State of Y did not constitute such a reorganization as would permit that company to claim a greater amount of statutory invested capital for the year 1917 than would have been allowed had that company continued to operate under the charter granted by the State of Z, be sustained, and that it be held that such a reorganization did take place in 1902 and that the company's statutory invested capital for the year 1917 be recomputed upon the basis of the values existing at the time of such reorganization.

Recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring the appellant to file amended returns for the taxable years affected pursuant to Treasury Decision 3220 (C. B. 5, p. 285), be sustained.

The Committee has carefully considered the oral appeal of the M Company from the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring it to file amended returns for the taxable years affected, pursuant to the provisions of Treasury Decision 3220. [¶865 herein.]

The M Company was organized under the laws of the State of Y in 1897 and its charter expired in accordance with its terms in September, 1917. The corporation commissioner of the State of Y having held that under section 6705 of the State of Y Laws the existence of a corporation could not be continued by the filing of supplemental articles of incorporation, the M Company was organized September, 1917, with an authorized capital stock of 30x dollars, which was the same as that of the original company. The stock of the new company was issued to the stockholders of the original company share for share, and all the assets of the old corporation were thereupon transferred to the new corporation at their market value as of September, 1917, and such value was utilized in the preparation of the tax returns of the company. Under date of February —, 1922, demand was made upon the company that it file amended returns for the taxable years affected by the use of such increased invested capital in accordance with the provisions of Treasury Decision 3220 (C. B. 5, p. 285).

Owing to the peculiar circumstances existing in this case the appellant was allowed to file an oral appeal, and argument by its representatives was heard by the Committee on April —, 1922. It is contended by the appellant that the purpose and intent of section 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, and section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, were to prohibit the inflation of the invested capital of a corporation through a voluntary reorganization, and that these sections should not apply to a case like the present, in which the reorganization or change of ownership was wholly involuntary and due solely to the expiration of the charter of the original corporation. It was admitted by the representatives of the appellant at the oral hearing that the assets of the original corporation were never actually distributed to the stockholders but were transferred directly by deed of the original corporation to the new corporation.

• Section 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, provides:

That in the case of the reorganization, consolidation, or change of ownership of a trade or business after March 3, 1917, if an interest or control in such trade or business of 50 per centum or more remains in control of the same persons, corporations, associations, partnerships, or any of them, then in ascertaining the invested capital of the trade or business no asset transferred or received from the prior trade or business shall be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed under this title in computing the invested capital of such prior trade or business if such asset had not been so transferred or received, unless such asset was paid for specifically as such, in case or tangible property, and then not to exceed the actual cash or actual cash value of the tangible property paid therefor at the time of such payment.

The same provision, with certain modifications which are not here material, was enacted as section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919.

Section 6699 of the State of Y Laws provides that:

All corporations that expire by limitation specified in their articles of incorporation, * * * continue to exist as bodies corporate for a period of five years thereafter, if necessary for the purpose of prosecuting or defending actions, suits, or proceedings by or against them, settling their business, disposing of their property, and dividing their capital stock, but not for the purpose of continuing their corporate business.

Supplementary Bulletin Rulings.

An examination of section 6705 of the State of Y Laws leads the Committee to concur in the opinion of the corporation commissioner of the State of Y that the existence of the original corporation could not have been continued by the filing of supplemental articles of incorporation, and that, therefore, the M Company constituted a new and separate corporation, but under the provisions of section 6699 the assets of the original corporation did not upon the expiration of its charter automatically revert to the stockholders, but the corporation continued for the purpose of winding up its affairs, and in accordance with the powers thus continued to it, its assets were conveyed to the new corporation.

Without attempting to characterize the proceedings in this case, it is clear that there was a change of ownership of a trade or business" or "a change of ownership of property," occurring after March 3, 1917, and not only 50 per centum but 100 per centum of the interest or control remained in the same persons. This case, therefore, clearly falls within the language of both sections 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, and section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, and it does not appear to the Committee that it is outside the purpose and intent of those sections. The sections of the statutes themselves contain no exception in the case of an involuntary change of ownership and it seems clear the intent of Congress was to prevent the increase of the invested capital of a corporation by including therein appreciation in the value of its assets upon a change of ownership which was nominal and not substantial.

The Committee, therefore, finds that the appeal in this case is without merit and accordingly recommends that the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring the M Company to file amended returns for the taxable years affected, pursuant to Treasury Decision 3220, be sustained.

Revenue Act of 1918.

A did not hold an interest or control of 50 per cent or more of a predecessor company except perhaps momentarily and as a mere incident or step in a reorganization. A held but an interest or control of approximately 36 per cent in the old company and he held an interest or control of approximately 80 per cent in the new company. Under the circumstances the provisions of section 331 are not applicable in computing the invested capital of the new corporation.

The Committee has carefully considered the appeal of the M Company from the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that the provisions of section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 are applicable in computing its invested capital for the 10-month period ended August —, 1920, and in accordance with that holding reducing its invested capital, as reported for that period, by the amount of 331.3x dollars.

On various dates prior to October —, 1919, A, then the owner of approximately 36 per cent of the total outstanding preferred and common stock of the M Company, secured from the other stockholders an option to purchase all of their holdings in that company. A's purpose in securing such options was to reorganize the company under the laws of the State of Z and to secure control of the new company. Upon the securing of these options by A on all the remaining shares of stock outstanding, the owners of these shares turned them over to a trustee to be held in their interest until the sale thereof was consummated. A at the time of securing these options did not have sufficient personal funds wherewith to exercise these options. He purposed to close the options by purchasing this stock with funds obtained through the sale of securities of the new company. Accordingly, on September —, 1919, A entered into an agreement with the N Company, bankers, wherein it was provided, among other things, that A should, at his own expense, cause the M Company to be reorganized in such a way that either said company or a new company to be organized should have outstanding at the conclusion of the reorganization the following: 300x dollars par value 7 per cent bonds, 7y shares (par value $——) of 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, and 20y shares of the par value of $—— each, or without par value as the bankers might elect, of common stock. No par value shares of common were eventually issued. A agreed to sell and the bankers agreed to purchase outright all of the 300x dollars par value of bonds, the said 7y shares of preferred stock, and 6y shares of common stock for 436x dollars in cash, delivery of said securities and payment therefor to be made at the office of the bankers on November —, 1919.

On October —, 1919, the M Company, a State of Z corporation, was organized, and on the same date its board of directors, at their first meeting, voted to purchase the assets and business of the old corporation and in consideration of such acquisition authorized its officers to execute and deliver an instrument assuming each and all of the debts, liabilities, contracts, obligations, and undertakings of every kind and character of the old company, and in addition thereto to issue to the stockholders of the old company 300x dollars par value of the first mortgage 7 per cent serial gold bonds, 7y shares of 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, and 20y shares of common stock without par value.

On November —, 1919, the stockholders of the old company voted to sell the business and assets of the company to the company of the State of Z for and in consideration of the purchase price stated in the preceding paragraph. On the same date the old company executed a deed conveying all its business and assets to the new company. Simultaneously with the execution of the deed the following acts were performed by the parties interested in the reorganization:

(a) The State of Z company issued to A the entire issue of 300x dollars par value of bonds, 7y shares of the par value of $—— each of preferred stock, and 20y shares of no par value common stock.

(b) A assigned all of the securities of the State of Z company issued to him, except 14y shares of no par value common stock, to the N Company, and received in payment thereof 436x dollars in cash.

(c) The total cash received by A, 436x dollars, and 7y shares of the O Company were paid over to the other stockholders of the old company, thus closing the options to purchase their holdings in the latter company. All stock certificates were surrendered to the old company and a single certificate for the entire authorized issue of capital stock of the old company, except directors' qualifying shares, was issued to A. It was following the issue of this certificate that the meeting of the stockholders of the old company took place, at which the sale of the company's assets was authorized and the minutes of which meeting show that A was present as the owner of all the outstanding stock except qualifying shares, to which fact the Unit draws attention as evidence that A held an interest and control of more than 50 per cent in the old company prior to the reorganization.

After a thorough consideration of all the foregoing facts, the Committee finds that A did not hold an interest or control of 50 per cent or more in the predecessor company, except perhaps momentarily and as a mere incident or step in the reorganization. It was stated by appellant company's representatives at the hearing that the thing which led up to the reorganization was the inability of A and his father, who virtually exercised a control of the corporation through his (the father's) wife's holding of more than 50 per cent of the common stock, to agree on questions of business policy necessitating the retirement of one of them from the company. As A's father virtually owned the O Company, he chose to devote his future endeavor to that company, leaving the future of the M Company in the hands of his son. It was because of A's father's action that the son was required to give up his holdings in the O Company in part payment of his mother's holdings in the M Company. Looking at the transaction after the whole reorganization scheme had been accomplished, the Committee finds that whereas A held but an interest or control of approximately 36 per cent in the old company, he held an interest or control of approximately 80 per cent in the Z State corporation. Under the circumstances, the Committee is constrained to hold that the provisions of section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 are not applicable in computing the invested capital of appellant company.

Accordingly, it is recommended that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that the provisions of section 331 of the Revenue Act of 1918 are applicable in computing the invested capital of appellant company be reversed, and the appeal in that respect be sustained.

5-20-723: O. D. 395.

The fact that a company is entitled to the benefit of section 337 will not disqualify it for special treatment under section 328, neither can the fact that it is entitled to the benefit of section 337 be used as a basis for claiming special treatment under section 328. If a corporation falls within the class specified in section 327, the tax will be determined under the provisions of section 328. The effect of section 337 is to limit the amount of tax attributable to the profit made on the sale of mines, oil and gas wells discovered by the taxpayer and can only be applied after the tax computed on such profit has been computed without the benefit of this section.

37-20-1190: O. D. 658.

The limitation provided in section 211 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1918, with respect to the tax attributable to the sale of mines, oil or gas wells, of any interest therein has no application to the tax on profits realized from the sale of oil and gas produced in the operation of such wells.

01. The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

TITLE III.—WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX FOR 1921.

[Expires by limitation December 31, 1921.]

PART I.—GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

1000 Sec. 300. That when used in this title the terms "taxable year," "fiscal year," "personal service corporation," "paid or accrued," and "dividends" shall have the same meaning as provided for the purposes of income tax in sections 200 and 201.

[Definitions of terms, extracted from Sections 2, 200, and 201 of the Revenue Act of 1921.]

["Taxable year" and "Fiscal year."]

1001 (1) The term "taxable year" means the calendar year, or the fiscal year ending during such calendar year, upon the basis of which the net income is computed under section 212 or section 232. The term "fiscal year" means an accounting period of twelve months ending on the last day of any month other than December. The first taxable year, to be called the taxable year 1921, shall be the calendar year 1921 or any fiscal year ending during the calendar year 1921.

Copyright 1923, by The Corporation Trust Company.

[“Personal Service Corporation.”]

1002 (5) The term “personal service corporation” means a corporation whose income is to be ascribed primarily to the activities of the principal owners or stockholders who are themselves regularly engaged in the active conduct of the affairs of the corporation and in which capital (whether invested or borrowed) is not a material income-producing factor; but does not include any foreign corporation, nor any corporation 50 per centum or more of whose gross income consists either (1) of gains, profits, or income derived from trading as a principal, or (2) of gains, profits, commissions, or other income, derived from a government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

[“Government Contracts.”]

1003 (11) The term “government contract” means (a) a contract made with the United States, or with any department, bureau, officer, commission, board, or agency, under the United States and acting in its behalf, or with any agency controlled by any of the above if the contract is for the benefit of the United States, or (b) a subcontract made with a contractor performing such a contract if the products or services to be furnished under the subcontract are for the benefit of the United States. The term “government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive” when applied to a contract of the kind referred to in clause (a) of this subdivision, includes all such contracts which, although entered into during such period, were originally not enforceable, but which have been or may become enforceable by reason of subsequent validation in pursuance of law.

[“Paid or incurred” and “Paid or accrued.”]

1004 (4) The term “paid,” for the purposes of the deductions and credits under this title, means “paid or accrued” or “paid or incurred,” and the terms “paid or incurred” and “paid or accrued” shall be construed according to the method of accounting upon the basis of which the net income is computed under section 212.

[“Dividends.”]

1006 (b) For the purposes of this Act every distribution is made out of earnings or profits, and from the most recently accumulated earnings or profits, to the extent of such earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913; but any earnings or profits accumulated or increase in value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, may be distributed exempt from the tax, after the earnings and profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, have been distributed. If any such tax-free distribution has been made the distributee shall not be allowed as a deduction from gross income any loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of his stock or shares unless, and then only to the extent that, the basis provided in section 202 exceeds the sum of (1) the amount realized from the sale or other disposition of such stock or shares, and (2) the aggregate amount of such distributions received by him thereon.

1007 (c) Any distribution (whether in cash or other property) made by a corporation to its shareholders or members otherwise than out of (1) earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913, or (2) earnings or profits accumulated or increase in value of property accrued prior to March 1, 1913, shall be applied against and reduce the basis provided in section 202 for the purpose of ascertaining the gain derived or the loss sustained from the sale or other disposition of the stock or shares by the distributee.

1008 (d) A stock dividend shall not be subject to tax but if after the distribution of any such dividend the corporation proceeds to cancel or redeem its stock at such time and in such manner as to make the distribution and cancellation or redemption essentially equivalent to the distribution of a taxable dividend, the amount received in redemption or cancellation of the stock shall be treated as a taxable dividend to the extent of the earnings or profits accumulated by such corporation after February 28, 1913.

1009 (e) For the purposes of this Act, a taxable distribution made by a corporation to its shareholders or members shall be included in the gross income of the distributees as of the date when the cash or other property is unqualifiedly made subject to their demands.

1010 (f) Any distribution made during the first sixty days of any taxable year shall be deemed to have been made from earnings or profits accumulated during preceding taxable years; but any distribution made during the remainder of the taxable year shall be deemed to have been made from earnings or profits accumulated between the close of the preceding taxable year and the date of distribution, to the extent of such earnings or profits, and if the books of the corporation do not show the amount of such earnings or profits, the earnings or profits for the accounting period within which the distribution was made shall be deemed to have been accumulated ratably during such period. This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921.

PART II.—IMPOSITION OF TAX.

1011 Sec. 301. (a) That in lieu of the tax imposed by Title III* of the Revenue Act of 1918, but in addition to the other taxes imposed by this Act, there shall be levied, collected and paid for the calendar year 1921 upon the net income of every corporation (except corporations taxable under subdivision (b) of this section) a tax equal to the sum of the following:

First Bracket.

1012 20 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the excess-profits credit (determined under section 312) and not in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital;

Second Bracket.

1013 40 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital.

1014 (b) For the calendar year 1921 there shall be levied, collected, and paid upon the net income of every corporation which derives in such year a net income of more than $10,000 from any Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, a tax equal to the sum of the following:

1015 (1) Such a portion of a tax computed at the rates specified in subdivision (a) of section 301 of the Revenue Act of 1918*, as the part of the net income attributable to such Government contract or contracts bears to the entire net income. In computing such tax the excess-profits credit and the war-profits credit which would be applicable to such calendar year under the Revenue Act of 1918* if it had been continued in force, shall be used;

1016 (2) Such a portion of a tax computed at the rates specified in subdivision (a) of this section as the part of the net income not attributable to such Government contract or contracts bears to the entire net income.

1017 For the purpose of determining the part of the net income attributable to such Government contract or contracts, the proper apportionment and allocation of the deductions with respect to gross income derived from such Government contract or contracts and from other sources, respectively, shall be determined under rules and regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary.

1018 (c) In any case where the full amount of the excess-profits credit is not allowed under the first bracket of subdivision (a), by reason of the fact that such credit is in excess of 20 per centum of the invested capital, the part not so allowed shall be deducted from the amount in the second bracket.

[Maximum Tax Limitation.]

1019 Sec. 302. That the tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301 shall in no case be more than 20 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of $3,000 and not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of $20,000; and the limitations imposed by section 302 of the Revenue Act of 1918* (upon taxes computed under subdivision (c) of section 301 of that Act) are hereby made applicable to taxes computed under subdivision (b) of section 301 of this Act. Nothing in this section shall be construed in such manner as to increase the tax imposed by section 301 of this Act.

*The War-Profits and Excess-Profits Tax Title (III) of the Revenue Act of 1918 is reproduced, followed by the regulations bearing thereon, beginning on page 301.

[Partial Personal Service Corporations.]

1020 Sec. 303. That if part of the net income of a corporation is derived (1) from a trade or business (or a branch of a trade or business) in which the employment of capital is necessary, and (2) a part (constituting not less than 30 per centum of its total net income) is derived from a separate trade or business (or a distinctly separate branch of the trade or business) which if constituting the sole trade or business would bring it within the class of "personal service corporations," then (under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary) the tax upon the first part of such net income shall be separately computed (allowing in such computation only the same proportionate part of the credits authorized in section 312), and the tax upon the second part shall be the same percentage thereof as the tax so computed upon the first part is of such first part: Provided, That the tax upon such second part shall in no case be less than 20 per centum thereof, unless the tax upon the entire net income, if computed without benefit of this section, would constitute less than 20 per centum of such entire net income, in which event the tax shall be determined upon the entire net income, without reference to this section, as other taxes are determined under this title. The total tax computed under this section shall be subject to the limitations provided in section 302.

[Exempt Corporations.]

1021 Sec. 304. (a) That the corporations enumerated in section 231 [¶1059] shall, to the extent that they are exempt from income tax under Title II, be exempt from taxation under this title.

1022 (b) Any corporation whose net income for the taxable year is less than $3,000 shall be exempt from taxation under this title.

1023 (c) In the case of any corporation engaged in the mining of gold, the portion of the net income derived from the mining of gold shall be exempt from the tax imposed by this title or any tax imposed by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917, and the tax on the remaining portion of the net income shall be the same proportion of a tax computed without the benefit of this subdivision which such remaining portion of the net income bears to the entire net income.

[Specific Exemption in Relation to Tax for less than 12 months.]

1024 Sec. 305. That if a tax is computed under this title for a period of less than twelve months, the specific exemption of $3,000, wherever referred to in this title, shall be reduced to an amount which is the same proportion of $3,000 as the number of months in the period is of twelve months.

Part III.—Excess-Profits Credit.

1025 Sec. 312. That the excess-profits credit shall consist of a specific exemption of $3,000 plus an amount equal to 8 per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year.

1026 A foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] shall not be entitled to the specific exemption of $3,000.

Part IV.—Net Income.

1027 Sec. 320. That for the purpose of this title the net income of a corporation shall be ascertained and returned for the taxable year upon the same basis and in the same manner as provided for income tax purposes in Title II of this Act.

Part V.—Invested Capital.

1028 Sec. 325. (a) That as used in this title—

1029 The term “intangible property” means patents, copyrights, secret processes and formulae, good will, trade-marks, trade-brands, franchises, and other like property;

1030 The term “tangible property” means stocks, bonds, notes, and other evidences of indebtedness, bills and accounts receivable, leaseholds, and other property other than intangible property;

1031 The term “borrowed capital” means money or other property borrowed, whether represented by bonds, notes, open accounts, or otherwise;

1032 The term “inadmissible assets” means stocks, bonds, and other obligations (other than obligations of the United States), the dividends or interest from which is not included in computing net income, but where the income derived from such assets consists in part of gain or profit derived from the sale or other disposition thereof, or where all or part of the interest derived from such assets is in effect included in the net income because of the limitation on the deduction of interest under paragraph (2) of subdivision (a) of section 234, a corresponding part of the capital invested in such assets shall not be deemed to be inadmissible assets;

1033 The term “admissible assets” means all assets other than inadmissible assets, valued in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (a) of section 326 and section 331.

1034 (b) For the purposes of this title the par value of stock or shares shall, in the case of stock or shares issued at a nominal value or having no par value, be deemed to be the fair market value as of the date or dates of issue of such stock or shares.

[Computing “Invested Capital.”]

1035 Sec. 326. (a) That as used in this title the term “invested capital” for any year means (except as provided in subdivisions (b) and (c) of this section):

1036 (1) Actual cash bona fide paid in for stock or shares;

Copyright 1923, by The Corporation Trust Company.

1037 (2) Actual cash value of tangible property, other than cash, bona fide paid in for stock or shares, at the time of such payment, but in no case to exceed the par value of the original stock or shares specifically issued therefor, unless the actual cash value of such tangible property at the time paid in is shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner to have been clearly and substantially in excess of such par value, in which case such excess shall be treated as paid-in surplus: Provided, That the Commissioner shall keep a record of all cases in which tangible property is included in invested capital at a value in excess of the stock or shares issued therefor, containing the name and address of each taxpayer, the business in which engaged, the amount of invested capital and net income shown by the return, the value of the tangible property at the time paid in, the par value of the stock or shares specifically issued therefor, and the amount included under this paragraph as paid-in surplus. The Commissioner shall furnish a copy of such record and other detailed information with respect to such cases when required by resolution of either House of Congress, without regard to the restrictions contained in section 257;

1039 (4) Intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares prior to March 3, 1917, in an amount not exceeding (a) the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, (b) the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or (c) in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding on March 3, 1917, whichever is lowest;

1040 (5) Intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares on or after March 3, 1917, in an amount not exceeding (a) the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, (b) the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or (c) in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year, whichever is lowest: Provided, That in no case shall the total amount included under paragraphs (4) and (5) exceed in the aggregate 25 per centum of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year; but

1041 (b) As used in this title the term "invested capital" does not include borrowed capital.

1042 (c) There shall be deducted from invested capital as above defined a percentage thereof equal to the percentage which the amount of inadmissible assets is of the amount of admissible and inadmissible assets held during the taxable year.

1043 (d) The invested capital for any period shall be the average invested capital for such period, but in the case of a corporation making a return for a fractional part of a year, it shall be the same fractional part of such average invested capital.

[Special Cases Subject to Special Tax.]

- 1044 Sec. 327. That in the following cases the tax shall be determined as provided in section 328:
- 1045 (a) Where the Commissioner is unable to determine the invested capital as provided in section 326;
- 1046 (b) In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083];
- 1047 (c) Where a mixed aggregate of tangible property and intangible property has been paid in for stock or for stock and bonds and the Commissioner is unable satisfactorily to determine the respective values of the several classes of property at the time of payment, or to distinguish the classes of property paid in for stock and for bonds, respectively;
- 1048 (d) Where upon application by the corporation the Commissioner finds and so declares of record that the tax if determined without benefit of this section would, owing to abnormal conditions affecting the capital or income of the corporation, work upon the corporation an exceptional hardship evidenced by gross disproportion between the tax computed without benefit of this section and the tax computed by reference to the representative corporations specified in section 328. This subdivision shall not apply to any case (1) in which the tax (computed without benefit of this section) is high merely because the corporation earned within the taxable year a high rate of profit upon a normal invested capital, nor (2) in which 50 per centum or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable year (computed under section 233 of Title II) consists of gains, profits, commissions, or other income, derived on a cost-plus basis from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

[The Special Tax Applicable to the Special Cases.]

- 1049 Sec. 328. (a) That in the cases specified in section 327 the tax shall be the amount which bears the same ratio to the net income of the taxpayer (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for the taxable year, as the average tax of representative corporations engaged in a like or similar trade or business, bears to their average net income (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for such year. In the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] the tax shall be computed without deducting the specific exemption of $3,000 either for the taxpayer or the representative corporations
- 1050 In computing the tax under this section the Commissioner shall compare the taxpayer only with representative corporations whose invested capital can be satisfactorily determined under section 326 and which are, as nearly as may be, similarly circumstanced with respect to gross income, net income, profits per unit of business transacted and capital employed, the amount and rate of war profits or excess profits, and all other relevant facts and circumstances.

1051 (b) For the purposes of subdivision (a) the ratios between the average tax and the average net income of representative corporations shall be determined by the Commissioner in accordance with regulations prescribed by him with the approval of the Secretary.

1052 (c) The Commissioner shall keep a record of all cases in which the tax is determined in the manner prescribed in subdivision (a), containing the name and address of each taxpayer, the business in which engaged, the amount of invested capital and net income shown by the return, and the amount of invested capital as determined under such subdivision. The Commissioner shall furnish a copy of such record and other detailed information with respect to such cases when required by resolution of either House of Congress, without regard to the restrictions contained in section 257.

Part VI.—Reorganizations.

1053 Sec. 331. That in the case of the reorganization, consolidation, or change of ownership of a trade or business, or change of ownership of property, after March 3, 1917, if an interest or control in such trade or business or property of 50 per centum or more remains in the same persons, or any of them, then no asset transferred or received from the previous owner shall, for the purpose of determining invested capital, be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed under this title in computing the invested capital of such previous owner if such asset had not been so transferred or received: Provided, That if such previous owner was not a corporation, then the value of any asset so transferred or received shall be taken at its cost of acquisition (at the date when acquired by such previous owner) with proper allowance for depreciation, impairment, betterment or development, but no addition to the original cost shall be made for any charge or expenditure deducted as expense or otherwise on or after March 1, 1913, in computing the net income of such previous owner for purposes of taxation.

Part VII.—Miscellaneous.

[Returns on Fiscal Year Basis.]

1054 Sec. 335. (a) That if a corporation (other than a personal service corporation) makes return for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, the war-profits and excess-profits tax for the taxable year 1921 shall be the sum of: (1) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under the Revenue Act of 1918,* which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1920 is of the entire period, and (2) the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period. Any amount heretofore or hereafter paid on account of the tax imposed for such taxable year by the Revenue Act of 1918 shall be credited towards the payment of the tax as above computed, and if the amount so paid exceeds the amount of such tax, the excess shall be credited or refunded to the corporation in accordance with the provisions of section 252 of this Act.

*The War-Profits and Excess-Profits Tax Title (III) of the Revenue Act of 1918, reproduced, followed by the regulations bearing thereon, beginning on page 301.

1055 (b) If a corporation (other than a personal service corporation) makes a return for a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, the war-profits and excess-profits tax for the portion of the year falling within the calendar year 1921 shall be an amount equivalent to the same proportion of a tax for the entire period computed under this title, which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period.

1056 Sec. 336. That every corporation, not exempt under section 304, shall make a return for the purposes of this title. Such returns shall be made, and the taxes imposed by this title shall be paid, at the same times and places, in the same manner, and subject to the same conditions, as is provided in the case of returns and payment of income tax by corporations for the purposes of Title II, and all the provisions of that title not inapplicable, including penalties, are hereby made applicable to the taxes imposed by this title.

[Sale of Mines, Oil or Gas Wells.]

1057 Sec. 337. That in the case of a bona fide sale of mines, oil or gas wells, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration and discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the tax imposed by this title attributable to such sale shall not exceed 20 per centum of the selling price of such property or interest.

1058 Sec. 338. That this title shall take effect as of January 1, 1921.

If return is made on either of such bases, all returns thereafter made shall be upon the same basis unless permission to change the basis is granted by the Commissioner.

1075 (b) In any case in which a tax is assessed upon the basis of a consolidated return, the total tax shall be computed in the first instance as a unit and shall then be assessed upon the respective affiliated corporations in such proportions as may be agreed upon among them, or, in the absence of any such agreement, then on the basis of the net income properly assignable to each. There shall be allowed in computing the income tax only one specific credit computed as provided in subdivision (b) of section 236.

1076 (c) For the purpose of this section two or more domestic corporations shall be deemed to be affiliated (1) if one corporation owns directly or controls through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees substantially all the stock of the other or others, or (2) if substantially all the stock of two or more corporations is owned or controlled by the same interests.

1077 (d) For the purposes of this section a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] shall be treated as a foreign corporation: Provided, That in any case of two or more related trades or businesses (whether unincorporated or incorporated and whether organized in the United States or not) owned or controlled directly or indirectly by the same interests, the Commissioner may consolidate the accounts of such related trades and businesses, in any proper case, for the purpose of making an accurate distribution or apportionment of gains, profits, income, deductions, or capital between or among such related trades or businesses.

1078 (e) Corporations which are affiliated within the meaning of this section shall make consolidated returns for any taxable year beginning prior to January 1, 1922, in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as provided by the Revenue Act of 1918 [for which see page 314].

Consolidated Returns for Year 1917.

1079 Sec. 1331 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. (a) That Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917 shall be construed to impose the taxes therein mentioned upon the basis of consolidated returns of net income and invested capital in the case of domestic corporations and domestic partnerships that were affiliated during the calendar year 1917.

1080 (b) For the purpose of this section a corporation or partnership was affiliated with one or more corporations or partnerships (1) when such corporation or partnership owned directly or controlled through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees all or substantially all the stock of the other or others, or (2) when substantially all the stock of two or more corporations or the business of two or more partnerships was owned by the same interests: Provided, That such corporations or partnerships were engaged in the same or a closely related business, or one corporation or partnership bought from or sold to another corporation or partnership products or services at prices above or below the current market, thus effecting an artificial distribution of profits, or one corporation or partnership in any way so arranged its financial relationships with another corporation or partnership as to assign to it a disproportionate share of net income or invested capital. For the purposes of this section, public service corporations which (1) were operated independently, (2) were not physically connected or merged, and (3) did not receive special permission to make a consolidated return, shall not be construed to have been affiliated; but a railroad or other public utility which was owned by an industrial corporation and was operated as a plant facility or as an integral part of a group organization of affiliated corporations which were required to file a consolidated return, shall be construed to have been affiliated.

1081 (c) The provisions of this section are declaratory of the provisions of Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917.

Incorporation of Individual or Partnership Business.

1082 Sec. 229 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That in the case of the organization as a corporation within four months after the passage* of this Act of any trade or business in which capital is a material income-producing factor, and which was previously owned by a partnership or individual, the net income of such trade or business from January 1, 1921, to the date of such organization may at the option of the individual or partnership be taxed as the net income of a corporation is taxed under Titles II and III; in which event the net income and invested capital of such trade or business shall be computed as if such corporation had been in existence on and after January 1, 1921, and the undistributed profits or earnings of such trade or business shall not be subject to the surtaxes imposed in section 211, but amounts distributed on and after January 1, 1921, from the earnings or profits of such trade or business accumulated after December 31, 1920, shall be taxed to the recipients as dividends; and all the provisions of Titles II and III relating to corporations shall so far as practicable apply to such trade or business: Provided, That this section shall not apply to any trade or business, the net income of which for the taxable year 1921 was less than 20 per centum of its invested capital for such year: Provided further, That any taxpayer who takes advantage of this section shall pay the tax imposed by section 1000 [Capital Stock Tax] of the Revenue Act of 1918 as if such taxpayer had been a corporation on and after January 1, 1921.

1084 (1) If 80 per centum or more of the gross income of such citizen or domestic corporation (computed without the benefit of this section) for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or for such part of such period immediately preceding the close of such taxable year as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and

1085 (2) If, in the case of such corporation, 50 per centum or more of its gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States; or

1086 (3) If, in the case of such citizen, 50 per centum or more of his gross income (computed without the benefit of this section) for such period or such part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States either on his own account or as an employee or agent of another.

1087 (b) Notwithstanding the provisions of subdivision (a) there shall be included in gross income all amounts received by such citizens or corporations within the United States, whether derived from sources within or without the United States.

1088 (c) As used in this section the term "possession of the United States" does not include the Virgin Islands of the United States.

1093 Sec. 1332 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. (a) That if either subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act is by final adjudication declared invalid, there shall, in addition to all other taxes, be levied, collected, and paid on the net income (as defined in section 232) received during the calendar years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921, by every personal service corporation (as defined in section 200) included within the provisions of such subdivisions, a tax equal to the taxes imposed by Titles II and III of the Revenue Act of 1918 and, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921, by Titles II and III of this Act.

1094 (b) In such event every such personal service corporation shall, on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the date of entry of decree upon such final adjudication, make a return of any income received during each of the calendar years 1918, 1919, 1920, and 1921 in the manner prescribed by the Revenue Act of 1918 (or in the manner prescribed by this Act, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921). Such return shall be made and the net income shall be computed on the basis of the taxpayer's annual accounting period (fiscal year or calendar year, as the case may be) in the manner provided for other corporations under the Revenue Act of 1918 and this Act.

1095 (c) If either subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act is so declared invalid, claims for credit or refund of taxes paid under both such sections shall be allowed, if made within the time provided in subdivision (f) of this section.

1096 (d) In case the claims for credit or refund, filed within six months from such date of entry of decree, represent less than 30 per centum of the outstanding stock or shares in the corporation, the amount of taxes imposed by this section upon such corporation shall be reduced to that proportion thereof which the number of stock or shares owned by the shareholders or members making such claims bears to the total number of stock or shares outstanding.

1097 (e) The tax imposed by this section shall be assessed, collected, and paid upon the same basis, in the same manner, and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as the taxes imposed by sections 230 and 301 of the Revenue Act of 1918 (or by sections 230 and 301 of this Act, in the case of income received during the calendar year 1921), but no interest or penalties shall be due or payable thereon for any period prior to the date upon which the return is by this section required to be made and the first installment paid. The amount of tax paid by any shareholder or member of a personal service corporation pursuant to the provisions of subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act shall be credited against the tax due from such corporation under this section upon the joint written application of such corporation and such shareholder or member or his representatives, heirs, or assigns, if such application is filed with the Commissioner within six months from such date of entry of decree.

1098 (f) Notwithstanding any other provision of law, no claim for a credit or refund of taxes paid under subdivision (e) of section 218 of the Revenue Act of 1918 or subdivision (d) of section 218 of this Act, may be filed after the expiration of six months from such date of entry of decree: Provided, however, That a personal service corporation of which no shareholder or member has filed such claim within such period of six months shall not be subject to the tax imposed by this section.

1100 (b) The parts of the Revenue Act of 1918 which are repealed by this Act shall (unless otherwise specifically provided in this Act) remain in force for the assessment and collection of all taxes which have accrued under the Revenue Act of 1918 at the time such parts cease to be in effect, and for the imposition and collection of all penalties or forfeitures which have accrued or may accrue in relation to any such taxes. In the case of any tax imposed by any part of the Revenue Act of 1918 repealed by this Act, if there is a tax imposed by this Act in lieu thereof, the provision imposing such tax shall remain in force until the corresponding tax under this Act takes effect under the provisions of this Act. * * * .

INSTRUCTIONS FOR CORPORATION RETURN.

LIABILITY FOR FILING RETURNS.

1. Corporations generally.—Every domestic or resident corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company not specifically exempted by Section 231 of the Revenue Act of 1921, whether or not having any net income, must file a return.

2. A corporation, having a net income of less than $3,000 for the taxable period need not file in the schedule pertaining to excess profits tax, but if the net income is $3,000 or more, it is subject to the excess profits tax and must file a complete return on this form.

3. Government Contracts.—In addition thereto, if net income in excess of $10,000 was derived during the taxable period from a Government contract, Form 1120S should be secured from the Collector of Internal Revenue for your district and filed as a part of this return.

4. Corporations in Possessions of the United States.—Domestic corporations within the possessions of the United States (except the Virgin Islands) may report as gross income only gross income from sources within the United States; provided, (a) 50 per cent or more of the total gross income for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or such part thereof as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and (b) 50 per cent or more of the total gross income for such three-year period or applicable part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States.

However, a corporation entitled to the above benefits is not entitled to the specific exemption of $3,000 in computing the excess profits tax. (See Sections 262 and 312, Revenue Act of 1921.)

5. Foreign Corporations.—A foreign corporation subject to the law, regardless of the amount of its net income, is required to file a return with the Collector in whose district is located its principal office or agency through which it transacted the business in the United States. If it has no office or agency in the United States, the return should be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Maryland. The net income should be computed in accordance with Section 217 of the Revenue Act of 1921.

6. Personal Service Corporations.—Personal service corporations must file a return on Form 1065.

CONSOLIDATED RETURNS.

7. The parent or principal reporting company of affiliated corporations as defined in Section 240 of the Act must file a consolidated return on this form with the collector of the district in which its principal office is located and attach thereto a schedule showing the names and addresses of all affiliated corporations in the group, and if the tax is apportioned among these corporations, the amount allocated to each. (See paragraph 9, below.) Each of the other affiliated corporations shall file Form 1122 in the office of the Collector of its district.

Consolidated invested capital must be computed as at the beginning of the taxable period of the parent or principal reporting company and consolidated income must be computed on the basis of its taxable period.

All supplementary and supporting schedules should be prepared in columnar form, one column being provided for each corporation included in the consolidation, one column for a total of like items before adjustments are made, one column for intercompany eliminations and adjustments, and one column for a total of like items after giving effect to the eliminations and adjustments. The items included in the column for eliminations and adjustments should be symbolized so as to readily identify contra items affected, and if necessary, in order to give a correct understanding of these entries, suitable explanations should be appended.

8. If one domestic corporation owns 95 per cent or more of the outstanding voting stock of another, or if 95 per cent or more of the outstanding voting stock of two or more domestic corporations is owned by the same individual or individuals, partnership or partnerships, in substantially the same proportion, a consolidated return must be filed by such corporations, except that the purpose of the statute being to prevent the avoidance or reduction of tax liability, corporations engaged in entirely distinct and unrelated lines of business, there being no common dealings between them giving rise to opportunity to avoid or reduce tax liability, shall not be required to file a consolidated return. If the ownership is less than 95 per cent of the outstanding voting stock, but exceeds 70 per cent, the parent or principal corporation of any group of affiliated corporations must furnish the information called for in questions 11 to 14, page 3.

9. The Department prefers that the entire tax shown on a consolidated return be paid by the parent or principal reporting corporation, instead of being apportioned among the corporations composing the affiliated group.

If apportionment is made, each subsidiary or affiliated corporation should state on its Form 1122 the amount of income and profit taxes to be assessed against it for the taxable period.

PERIOD COVERED.

10. The taxable period is the calendar year or the fiscal period ended in such calendar year, and the net income shall be computed upon the basis of the corporation's annual accounting period (calendar year or fiscal period) in accordance with the method of keeping the books, unless such method does not clearly reflect the income. The accounting period established for the taxable year immediately preceding must be adhered to unless permission has been received from the Commissioner to make a change.

In the case of a return for a period of less than one year, the net income shall be placed on an annual basis by multiplying the amount thereof by twelve and dividing by the number of months included in such period; and the tax shall be such part of a tax computed on such annual basis as the number of months in such period is of twelve months.

If the period for which the first or final return is made includes fractions of months, there shall be added to the number of complete months as many thirtieths of a month as there are days in the fractional parts of months.

11. If a corporation changes its accounting period, it shall as soon as possible give to the Collector for transmission to the Commissioner written notice of such change and of its reasons therefor. Upon approval by the Commissioner, the corporation shall thereafter make its returns upon the basis of the new accounting period. See Sections 212(c) and 226, Revenue Act of 1921.

TIME AND PLACE FOR FILING.

12. The return must be sent to the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the corporation's principal office is located, so as to reach the Collector's office on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the taxable period. In the case of a foreign corporation not having any office or place of business in the United States the return shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the taxable period.

13. The Collector is authorized to grant an extension of not more than thirty days for filing returns in cases of absence or sickness. In meritorious cases the Commissioner is authorized to grant a further extension.

SIGNATURES AND VERIFICATION.

14. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer and by the treasurer or assistant treasurer. The return of a foreign corporation having an agent in the United States shall be sworn to by such agent. If receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of the corporation, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall execute the return for such corporation, under oath.

PAYMENT OF TAXES.

15. The tax should be paid by sending or bringing with the return a check or money order drawn to the order of "Collector of Internal Revenue at (insert name of city and State)."

16. Do not send cash through the mail or pay it in person except at the office of the Collector.

17. The total tax may be paid at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, as follows:

The first installment shall be paid at the time fixed by law for filing the return; the second installment shall be paid on the fifteenth day of the third month; the third installment on the fifteenth day of the sixth month; and the fourth installment on the fifteenth day of the ninth month after the time fixed by law for filing the return.

For Making False or Fraudulent Return.

For Failing to Pay Tax When Due or Understatement of Tax, Through Negligence, Etc.

(a) The balance in each account on the corporation's books that was used in preparing Schedule A.

(b) The amount deducted from each such balance on account of each class of nonexemptable income, allowable deductions, and other adjustments indicated in Schedule L, with a reference to the number of the item in Schedule L in which each amount so deducted was included.

(c) The remainder of each such balance, analyzed to show the amount included in each item of Schedule A, with a reference to the number of the item in Schedule A in which each such amount was included.

INFORMATION AT THE SOURCE.

22. Every corporation making payments of salaries, wages, interest, rent, commissions, or other fixed or determinable income of $1,000 or more during the calendar year, to any individual or partnership, is required to make a true and accurate return to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue showing the nature of such payments and the name and address of the recipient. Forms 1099 and 1098, for reporting such information, will be furnished by any collector of internal revenue. Such returns of information covering the calendar year 1921 must be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Sorting Section, Washington, D. C., in time to be received not later than March 15, 1922.

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING INCOME, CREDITS, COMPUTATION OF TAX, ETC.

GROSS INCOME AND DEDUCTIONS.

1. Railroad corporations, banks, insurance companies, and other corporations required to submit statements of income and expenses to any national, State, municipal, or other public officer may submit instead of Schedule A a statement of income and expenses in the form in which submitted to such officer. In such case the taxable net income will be reconciled by annexing Schedule L with the net profit shown by the income and expense statement submitted, and should be entered as Item 27, Schedule A, page 1.

2. A life insurance company issuing life insurance and annuity contracts (including contracts of combined life, health, and accident insurance), as defined by Section 242 of the Revenue Act of 1917, shall file its tax return on Form 11005, instead of Form 1120.

3. An insurance company (other than a company taxed under Section 242 of the Act) issuing policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, continuing for life, and not subject to cancellation, shall file its return on this form, and report as a deduction in Schedule A12 subject to the approval of the Commissioner, such portion of the net addition (not required by law) made within the taxable period to reserve funds as may be required for the protection of the holders of such policies only.

4. An insurance company (other than a life insurance company) should report as a deduction in Schedule A12 of this form, (e) the net addition required by law to be made within the taxable period to reserve funds (including in the case of an assessment insurance company the actual deposit of same with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as additions to guarantee or reserve funds), and (3) the sum of other dividends paid within the taxable period on policy and annuity contracts.

5. A mutual marine insurance company should report as Item 3, Schedule A, of this form, the gross premiums collected and received, less amounts paid for reinsurance, and report as a deduction in Schedule A12 amounts repaid to policyholders on account of premiums previously paid by them and interest paid upon such amounts between ascertainment and the payment thereof.

6. The receipts of a shipowner's mutual protection and indemnity association, not organized for profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inure to the benefit of any private stockholder or member, are exempt from taxation, but such association shall be subject as a corporation to the tax upon its net income from interest, dividends, and rents.

7. A mutual insurance company (including interinsurance and reciprocal undertakers, but not including a mutual life or mutual marine insurance company) requiring its members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses, should report in Schedule A12 of this form, the amount of premium deposits returned to its policyholders and the amount of premium deposits retained for the payment of losses, expenses, and reinsurance reserves (unless otherwise allowed in Schedule A).

8. Incidental repairs, which do not add to the value or appreciably prolong the life of property, are deductible as expenses (Item 14, Schedule A). Expenditures for new building, machinery, equipment, or for permanent improvement or betterments which increase the value of the property are chargeable to capital account. Expenditures for repairing or replacing property are not deductible under this or any other item of the return. Such expenditures are chargeable to capital account or to depreciation reserve, depending on the treatment of depreciation on the books of the taxpayer.

9. The amount of interest deductible in Item 15, Schedule A, is the amount of interest paid within the taxable period on the corporation's indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the corporation), the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation. (See Sections 234(a) 2 and 234(b) of the Revenue Act of 1921.)

10. The amount deductible on account of depreciation in Item 18, Schedule A, is an amount charged off which fairly measures the loss during the year in the value of physical property by reason of exhaustion, wear, tear, and obsolescence. Such an amount should be determined upon the basis of the cost of the property or, if acquired prior to March 1, 1918, the fair market value on that date and the probable number of years remaining of its useful life. The capital sum to be replaced should be charged off over the probable life of the property either in equal annual installments or in accordance with any other recognized trade practice, such as an apportionment of the capital sum over units of production. Whatever plan or method is adopted must be reasonable and should be described in the return. Stocks, bonds, and like securities are not subject to exhaustion, wear and tear within the meaning of the law.

11. If property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent as a result of (a) its destruction in whole or in part, (b) theft or expropriation, or (c) an exercise of the power of requisition or condemnation, or the threat or imminence thereof, and if the taxpayer proceeds forthwith in good faith, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to expend the proceeds of such conversion in the acquisition of other property of a character similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or in the acquisition of 80 per centum or more of the stock of another corporation owning such other property, or in the establishment of a replacement fund, then there shall be allowed as a deduction such portion of the gain derived as the portion of the proceeds so expended bears to the entire proceeds. The gross receipts and deductions claimed should be included in Schedule A23. (See Section 232(c) 14 of the Revenue Act of 1921.)

CREDIT FOR INCOME AND PROFITS TAXES PAID TO FOREIGN COUNTRIES OR POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

12. If a credit is claimed in Item 14, Schedule D, a copy of Form 1115, completely filled out and sworn to or affirmed, must be submitted with this return. If credit is sought for taxes already paid, the form must have attached to it the receipt for such such tax payment. If credit is sought for taxes accrued, the form must have attached to it the return on which each such accrued tax was based.

13. When a credit is claimed for accrued taxes, the Commissioner may, as a condition precedent to the allowance of the credit, require the corporation to give a bond (Form 1119), with sureties satisfactory to and to be approved by him in such penal sum as he may require, conditioned for the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of taxes found due of the taxes when paid differ from the amount claimed in respect thereof.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING COMPUTATION OF TAX.

14. Schedule D, "Computation of Tax," may be subject to one or more of the following provisions:

(a) Return for a fiscal year.—If return is for a fiscal year ended in 1921, the tax should be computed in accordance with Sections 205, 232(c), and 335(c) of the Revenue Act of 1921.

(b) Limitation on income tax.—If the net income reported as Item 5, Schedule D, is more than $25,000 the tax of 10 per centum imposed by Section 220 of the Act on the amount of the net income shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $25,000 credit were allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000.

(c) Limitations on excess profits tax.—The maximum excess profits tax imposed shall in no case be more than 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $10,000 and not in excess of $20,000 plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $30,000 (Section 302), unless net income amounting to more than $10,000 was derived from a Government contract, when the tax on such income shall be assessed under Section 301(b), in which case the maximum excess and war profits tax imposed upon this corporation of the net income shall not be more than 50 per cent of the amount of net income in excess of $5,000 and not in excess of $30,000 plus 80 per cent of the amount of net income in excess of $20,000. (See Section 302.)

(d) Tax of corporation whose income is derived in part from "Personal Service."—If part of the net income (not less than 30 per cent) is derived from a separate trade or business of the character of "personal services" such tax shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of Section 303 of the Act.

(e) Tax on corporation engaged in mining of gold.—If a corporation is engaged in the mining of gold, its excess profits tax shall be that proportion of Item 3, Schedule D, which the net income not derived from the mining of gold bears to the total net income. (See Section 304(c) of the Act.)

(f) Tax on profits from sale of mineral deposits.—In the case of a bona fide sale of mines, oil, or gas wells, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been determined by prospecting or exploration and discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the excess profits tax attributable to such sale shall not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price of such property or interest. (See Section 337 of the Act.)

The first step is to find the excess profits tax computed without regard to this provision; the second is to find of the tax thus computed such portion as the net income from the sale bears to the total net income. If this portion equals or does not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price, then no adjustment is permitted. Should such portion exceed 20 per cent of the selling price, the tax will be that portion of the excess profits tax which the net income not attributable to the sale bears to the total net income plus 20 per cent of the selling price of the mineral deposits.

15. Statement of basis of claims.—If a corporation claims the benefit of any of the provisions outlined in (d), (e), or (f), it should attach to the return a complete statement of the basis for such claim and a computation of the tax payable in the event that such claim is allowed. The amount of tax computed should be entered in Schedule D.

SPECIAL CASES.

16. Definition of special cases.—Section 327 of the Act provides that in the following cases the tax shall be determined as provided in Section 328:

(a) Where the Commissioner is unable to determine the invested capital as provided in Section 325.

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the Revenue Act of 1921. See paragraph 4, page 1 of Instructions.

(c) Where a mixed aggregate of tangible property and intangible property has been paid in for stock for stock and bonds and the Commissioner is unable satisfactorily to determine the respective values of the several classes of property at the time of payment, or to distinguish the classes of property paid in for stock and for bonds, respectively.

(d) Where, upon application by the corporation, the Commissioner finds and declares of record that the tax if determined without benefit of this section would, owing to abnormal conditions affecting the capital or income of the corporation, work upon the corporation an exceptional hardship evidenced by gross disproportion between the tax computed without benefit of this section and the tax computed by reference to the representative corporations specified in Section 328. This subdivision shall not apply to any case: (1) in which the tax (computed without benefit of this section) is high merely because the corporation earned within the taxable period a high rate of profit upon a normal invested capital, nor (2) in which 50 per centum or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable period (computed under Section 233 of the Act) consisted of gains, profits, commissions, or other income derived on a cost-plus basis from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

17. Treatment of special cases.—In the cases specified in Section 327 the tax will be specially determined under the provisions of Section 328. A corporation which comes within the provisions of subdivision (d) of Section 327 (paragraph 14, above) may make application for assessment under the provisions of Section 328, which application shall be attached to its return in the form of a statement setting forth in full: (a) The reasons why the tax should be so determined; (b) the facts upon which such reasons are based; (c) an exact description of each trade or business or important branch of a trade or business carried on by it; (d) a statement of the invested capital and net income for each year since the beginning of the prewar period; and (e) a statement showing the amount of gains, profits, commissions, or other income derived on a cost-plus basis from Government contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 12, 1918, both dates inclusive, and showing the per cent which such income is of the total income of the corporation.

18. Return in special cases.—Corporations other than foreign corporations making claim for assessment under Section 328 of the Act should answer all questions and file all schedules as far as possible and attach a statement explaining why it is impracticable to fill out the entire return.

UNDISTRICTED PROFITS TAXABLE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

19. If any corporation, however created or organized, is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders or members through the means of permitting gains and profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed, there shall be levied, collected and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of such corporation a tax equal to twenty-five per cent (25%) of the amount thereof, which shall be in addition to the tax imposed by Section 230, Revenue Act of 1921, and shall be computed, collected and paid upon the same basis and in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as that tax. (See Section 220, Revenue Act of 1921.)

Every corporation which derives during the calendar year 1921 a net income of more than $10,000 from any Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, the tax shall be such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1918, upon the excess profits credit and the war profits credit applicable to that year, as the portion of the net income attributable to the Government contracts bears to the entire net income, plus such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1921 as the amount of the remaining net income bears to the entire net income. See Section 301(b) of the Revenue Act of 1921.

Government contracts may include: (a) A contract with the United States; (b) a contract with an agency of the United States; (c) a contract with an agency of such agency; and (d) a subcontract with a contractor under any such contract, provided in every case the contract or subcontract was for the benefit of the United States. ## LIABILITY FOR FILING RETURNS.

1. Corporations generally.—Every domestic or resident corporation, joint-stock company, association, or insurance company not specifically exempted by Section 231 of the Revenue Act of 1921, whether or not having any net income, must file a return.

A corporation having a net income of less than $3,000 for the taxable period need not fill in the schedule pertaining to excess profits tax, but if the net income is $3,000 or more, it is subject to the excess profits tax and must file a complete return on this form.

2. Government Contracts.—In addition thereto, if net income in excess of $10,000 was derived during the calendar year 1921 from a Government contract, Form 1120S must be secured from the Collector of Internal Revenue for your district and filed as a part of this return.

3. Corporations in Possessions of the United States.—Domestic corporations within the possessions of the United States (except the Virgin Islands) may report as gross income only gross income from sources within the United States, provided, (a) 80 per cent or more of the total gross income for the three-year period immediately preceding the close of the taxable year (or such part thereof as may be applicable) was derived from sources within a possession of the United States; and (b) 50 per cent or more of the total gross income for such three-year period or applicable part thereof was derived from the active conduct of a trade or business within a possession of the United States.

A corporation entitled to the above benefits, however, is not entitled to the specific exemption of $3,000 in computing the excess profits tax. (See Sections 262 and 312, Revenue Act of 1921.)

4. Foreign Corporations.—A foreign corporation subject to the law, regardless of the amount of its net income, is required to file a return with the Collector in whose district is located its principal office or agency through which it transacts its business in the United States. If it has no office or agency in the United States, the return should be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue, Baltimore, Maryland. The net income should be computed in accordance with Section 217 of the Revenue Act of 1921.

5. Life Insurance Companies.—A life insurance company, as defined by Section 242 of the Act, shall file its return on Form 1120L.

6. Personal Service Corporations.—Personal service corporations must file a return on Form 1065 B.

CONSOLIDATED RETURNS.

7. The parent or principal reporting company of affiliated corporations as defined in Section 240 of the Act must file a consolidated return on this form with the Collector of the district in which its principal office is located and attach thereto a schedule showing the names and addresses of all affiliated corporations in the group, and of the tax is apportioned among these corporations, the amount allocated to each. (See paragraph 9, below.) Each of the other affiliated corporations shall file Form 1122 in the office of the Collector of its district.

Consolidated invested capital must be computed as at the beginning of the taxable period of the parent or principal reporting company and consolidated income must be computed on the basis of its taxable period.

All supplementary and supporting schedules should be prepared in columnar form, one column being provided for each corporation included in the consolidation, one column for a total of like items before adjustments are made, one column for intercompany eliminations and adjustments, and one column for a total of like items after giving effect to the eliminations and adjustments. The items included in the column for eliminations and adjustments should be symbolized so as to readily identify contra items affected, and if necessary, in order to give a correct understanding of these entries, suitable explanations should be appended.

8. If one domestic corporation owns 95 per cent or more of the outstanding voting stock of another, or if 95 per cent or more of the outstanding voting stock of two or more domestic corporations is owned by the same individual or individuals, partnership or partnerships, in substantially the same proportion, a consolidated return must be filed by such corporations. If the ownership is less than 95 per cent of the outstanding voting stock, but exceeds 70 per cent, the parent or principal corporation of any group of affiliated corporations must furnish the information called for in questions 11 to 14, page 3 of the return. Whenever the fiscal year of one or more subsidiary or other affiliated corporations differs from the fiscal year of the parent or principal corporation, the Commissioner should be fully advised by the taxpayer in order that provision may be made for assessing the tax in respect of the period prior to the beginning of the fiscal year of the parent or principal corporation.

9. The Department prefers that the entire tax shown on a consolidated return be paid by the parent or principal reporting corporation, instead of being apportioned among the corporations composing the affiliated group.

If apportionment is made, each subsidiary or affiliated corporation should state on its Form 1122 the amount of income and profits taxes to be assessed against it for the taxable period.

PERIOD COVERED.

10. The taxable period is the fiscal year ending on the last day of any month other than December in the calendar year 1922, and the net income shall be computed upon the basis of the corporation's annual accounting period in accordance with the method of keeping the books, unless such method does not clearly reflect the income.

11. In the case of a return for a period of less than one year, the net income shall be placed on an annual basis by multiplying the amount thereof by twelve and dividing by the number of months included in such period; and the tax shall be such part of a tax computed on such annual basis as the number of months in such period is of twelve months.

If the period for which the first or final return is made includes fractions of months, there shall be added to the number of complete months as many thirtieths of a month as there are days in the fractional parts of months.

11. If a corporation changes its accounting period, it shall as soon as possible give to the Collector for transmission to the Commissioner written notice of such change and of its reasons therefor. Upon approval by the Commissioner, the corporation shall thereafter make its returns upon the basis of the new accounting period. The accounting period established for the taxable year immediately preceding must be adhered to unless permission has been received from the Commissioner to make a change. See Sections 212(c) and 226, Revenue Act of 1921.

TIME AND PLACE FOR FILING.

12. The return must be sent to the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which the corporation's principal office is located, so as to reach the Collector's office on or before the fifteenth day of the third month following the close of the taxable period. In the case of a foreign corporation not having any office or place of business in the United States the return shall be filed on or before the fifteenth day of the sixth month following the close of the taxable period.

13. The Collector is authorized to grant an extension of not more than thirty days for filing returns in cases of absence or sickness. In meritorious cases the Commissioner is authorized to grant a further extension.

SIGNATURES AND VERIFICATION.

14. The return shall be sworn to by the president, vice president, or other principal officer and by the treasurer or assistant treasurer. The return of a foreign corporation having an agent in the United States shall be sworn to by such agent. If receivers, trustees in bankruptcy, or assignees are operating the property or business of the corporation, such receivers, trustees, or assignees shall execute the return for such corporation, under oath.

PAYMENT OF TAXES.

15. The tax should be paid by sending or bringing with the return a check or money order drawn to the order of "Collector of Internal Revenue at (insert name of city and State)."

16. Do not send cash through the mail or pay it in person except at the office of the Collector.

17. The total tax may be paid at the time of filing the return or in four equal installments, as follows:

The first installment shall be paid at the time fixed by law for filing the return, the second installment shall be paid on the fifteenth day of the third month, the third installment on the fifteenth day of the sixth month, and the fourth installment on the fifteenth day of the ninth month after the time fixed by law for filing the return.

PENALTIES.

For Making False or Fraudulent Return.

18. Not exceeding $10,000 or not exceeding one year's imprisonment, or both, in the discretion of the court, and, in addition, 50 per centum of the total tax evaded.

For Failing to Make Return on Time.

19. Not more than $1,000, and, in addition, 25 per centum of the total amount of the tax.

For Failing to Pay Tax When Due or Understatement of Tax Through Negligence, etc.

20. Five per centum of the tax due but unpaid plus interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month during the period in which it remains unpaid.

WORKING PAPERS.

21. Every corporation should preserve, available for inspection by a revenue officer, working papers showing—

(a) The balance in each account on the corporation's books that was used in preparing Schedule A.

(b) The amount deducted from each such balance on account of each class of nontaxable income, unallowable deductions, and other adjustments indicated in Schedule L, with a reference to the number of the item in Schedule L in which each amount so deducted was included.

(c) The remainder of each such balance, analyzed to show the amount included in each item of Schedule A, with a reference to the number of the item in Schedule A in which each such amount was included.

INFORMATION AT THE SOURCE.

22. Every corporation making payments of salaries, wages, interest, rent, commissions, or other fixed or determinable income of $1,000 or more during the calendar year, to any individual or partnership, is required to make a true and accurate return to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, showing the amount of such payments and the name and address of the recipient. Forms 1095 and 1099, for reporting such information, will be furnished by any Collector of Internal Revenue. Such returns of information covering the calendar year 1922 must be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Sorting Section, Washington, D. C., in time to be received not later than March 15, 1923.

INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING INCOME, CREDITS, COMPUTATION OF TAX, ETC.

GROSS INCOME AND DEDUCTIONS.

1. Railroad corporations, banks, insurance companies, and other corporations required to submit statements of income to any national, State, municipal, or other public officer may submit instead of Schedule A a statement of income and expenses in the form in which submitted to such officer. In such cases the taxable net income will be reconciled by means of Schedule L with the net profit shown by the income and expense statement submitted, and should be entered as Item 27, Schedule A, page 1.

2. A life insurance company issuing life insurance and annuity contracts (including contracts of combined life, health, and accident insurance), as defined by Section 242 of the Revenue Act of 1921, shall file its tax return on Form 1120L, instead of Form 1120.

3. An insurance company (other than a company taxed under Section 245 of the Act) issuing policies covering life, health, and accident insurance combined in one policy issued on the weekly premium payment plan, continuing for life, and not subject to cancellation, shall file its return on this form, and report as a deduction in Schedule A12 subject to the approval of the Commissioner, such portion of the net addition (not required by law) made within the taxable period, prior to January 1, 1922, to reserve funds as may be required for the protection of the holders of such policies only.

4. An insurance company (other than a life insurance company) should report as a deduction in Schedule A12 of this form, (a) the net addition required by law to be made within the taxable period to reserve funds (including in the case of an assessment insurance company the actual deposit of same with State or Territorial officers pursuant to law as additions to guarantee or reserve funds), and (b) the sums other than dividends paid within the taxable period on policy and annuity contracts. After December 31, 1921, this paragraph applies only to mutual insurance companies other than life insurance companies.

5. A mutual marine insurance company should report as Item 3, Schedule A, of this form, the gross premiums collected and received, less amounts paid for reinsurance, and report as a deduction in Schedule A12 amounts paid to policyholders on account of premiums previously paid by them and interest paid upon such amounts between ascertainment and the payment thereof.

6. The receipts of a shipowners' mutual protection and indemnity association, not organized for profit, and no part of the net earnings of which inure to the benefit of any private stockholder or member, are exempt from taxation, but such association shall be subject as a corporation to the tax upon its net income from interest, dividends, and rents.

7. A mutual insurance company (including interinsurance and reciprocal underwriters, but not including a mutual life or mutual marine insurance company) requiring its members to make premium deposits to provide for losses and expenses, should report in Schedule A12 of this form the amount of premium deposits returned to its policyholders and the amount of premium deposits retained for the payment of losses, expenses, and reinsurance reserves (unless otherwise allowed in Schedule A).

8. Incidental repairs, which do not add to the value or appreciably prolong the life of property, are deductible as expenses (Item 14, Schedule A). Expenditures for new buildings, machinery, equipment, or for permanent improvement or betterments which increase the value of the property are chargeable to capital account. Expenditures for restoring or replacing property are not deductible under this or any other item of the return. Such expenditures are chargeable to capital account or to depreciation reserve, depending on the treatment of depreciation on the books of the taxpayer.

9. The amount of interest deductible in Item 15, Schedule A, is the amount of interest paid within the taxable period on the corporation's indebtedness, except on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry obligations or securities (other than obligations of the United States issued after September 24, 1917, and originally subscribed for by the corporation), the interest upon which is wholly exempt from taxation. (See Sections 234(c) 2 and 234(b) of the Revenue Act of 1921.)

10. The amount deductible on account of depreciation in Item 18, Schedule A, is an amount fairly measuring the portion of the investment in depreciable property by reason of exhaustion, wear and tear and obsolescence which is properly chargeable against the operations of the year. Such amount should be determined upon the basis of the original cost (not replacement cost) of the property, or if acquired prior to March 1, 1913, the fair market value on that date, and the probable number of years remaining of its useful life. The capital sum to be replaced should be charged off over the useful life of the property either in equal annual installments or in accordance with any other recognized trade practice, such as an apportionment over units of production. Whatever plan or method of apportionment is adopted must be reasonable and must have due regard to operating conditions during the taxable period. The method adopted should be described in the return. Stocks, bonds, and like securities are not subject to exhaustion, wear and tear within the meaning of the law.

11. If property is compulsorily or involuntarily converted into cash or its equivalent as result of (a) its destruction in whole or in part, (b) theft or seizure, or (c) an exercise of the power of reversion or condemnation, or the threat or imminence thereof; and if the taxpayer proceeds forthwith in good faith, under regulations prescribed by the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary, to expand the proceeds of such conversion in the acquisition of other property of a character similar or related in service or use to the property so converted, or in the acquisition of 80 per centum or more of the stock or shares of a corporation owning such other property, or in the establishment of a replacement fund, then there shall be allowed as a deduction such portion of the gain derived as the portion of the proceeds so expended bears to the entire proceeds. The gross receipts and deductions claimed should be included in Schedule A23. (See Section 234(e) 14 of the Revenue Act of 1921.)

CREDIT FOR INCOME AND PROFITS TAXES PAID FOR FOREIGN COUNTRIES OR POSSESSIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

12. If a credit is claimed in Item 24, Schedule D, a copy of Form 1118, completely filled out and sworn to or affirmed, must be submitted with this return. If credit is sought for taxes actually paid, the form must have attached to it the receipts for each such tax payment. If credit is sought for taxes accrued, the form must have attached to it the return on which each such accrued tax was based.

13. When a credit is claimed for accrued taxes, the Commissioner may, as a condition precedent to the allowance of this credit, require the corporation to give a bond (Form 1119) with sureties satisfactory to and to be approved by him in such penal sum as he may require, conditioned for the payment by the taxpayer of any amount of taxes found due if the taxes when paid differ from the amount claimed in respect thereof.

PROVISIONS AFFECTING COMPUTATION OF TAX.

14. Schedule R, "Computation of Tax," may be subject to one or more of the following provisions:

(a) Return for a fiscal year.—The tax on a return for a fiscal year ended in 1922 should be computed in accordance with Sections 206, 236(c), and 335(b) of the Revenue Act of 1921.

(b) Limitation on income tax.—If the net income reported as Item 8, Schedule D, is more than $25,000 the tax imposed by Section 230 of the Revenue Act of 1921 on the amount of the net income shall not exceed the tax which would be payable if the $25,000 credit were allowed, plus the amount of the net income in excess of $25,000.

(c) Limitations on excess profits tax.—The maximum excess profits tax imposed shall in no case be more than 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $1,000 and not in excess of $50,000 plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $50,000 (Section 302), unless net income amounting to more than $10,000 was derived from a Government contract, when the tax on such income shall be assessed under Section 301(b), in which case the maximum excess and war profits tax imposed upon this proportion of the net income shall not be more than 30 per cent of the amount of net income in excess of $1,000 and not in excess of $20,000 plus 50 per cent of the amount of net income in excess of $20,000. (See Section 302.)

(d) Tax of corporation whose income is derived in part from "Personal Service."—If part of the net income (not less than 30 per cent) is derived from a separate trade or business of the character of "personal service," the tax shall be computed in accordance with the provisions of Section 303 of the Act.

(e) Tax on corporation engaged in mining of gold.—If a corporation is engaged in the mining of gold, its excess profits tax shall be that proportion of Item 3, Schedule D, which the net income not derived from the mining of gold bears to the total net income. (See Section 304(e) of the Act.)

(f) Tax on profits from sale of mineral products.—In the case of a bona fide sale of mines, oil or gas wells, or any interest therein, where the principal value of the property has been demonstrated by prospecting or exploration and discovery work done by the taxpayer, the portion of the excess profits tax attributable to such sale shall not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price of such property or interest. (See Section 337 of the Act.)

The first step is to find the excess profits tax computed without regard to this provision; the second is to find of the tax thus computed such portion as the net income from the sale bears to the total net income. If this portion equals or does not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price, then no adjustment is permitted. Should such portion exceed 20 per cent of the selling price, the tax will be that portion of the excess profits tax which the net income not attributable to the sale bears to the total net income plus 20 per cent of the selling price of the mineral products.

15. Statement of basis of claims.—If a corporation claims the benefit of any of the provisions outlined in (d), (e), or (f), it should attach to the return a complete statement of the basis for such claim and a computation of the tax payable in the event that such claim is allowed. The amount of tax so computed should be entered in Schedule D.

SPECIAL CASES.

16. Definition of special cases.—Section 327 of the Act provides that in the following cases the tax shall be determined as provided in Section 328:

(a) Where the Commissioner is unable to determine the invested capital as provided in Section 328.

(b) In the case of a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the Revenue Act of 1921. (See paragraph 8, page 1 of Instructions.)

(c) Where a mixed aggregate of tangible property and intangible property has been paid in for stock or for stock and bonds and the Commissioner is unable satisfactorily to determine the respective values of the several classes of property at the time of payment, or to distinguish the classes of property paid in for stock and for bonds, respectively.

(d) Where, upon application by the corporation, the Commissioner finds and declares of record that the tax if determined without benefit of this section would, owing to abnormal conditions affecting the capital or income of the corporation, work upon the corporation an exceptional hardship evidenced by gross disproportion between the tax computed without benefit of this section and the tax computed by reference to the representative corporations specified in Section 328. This subdivision shall not apply to any case: (1) in which the tax (computed without benefit of this section) is high merely because the corporation earned within the taxable period a high rate of profit upon a normal investment, or (2) in which 50 per cent or more of the gross income of the corporation for the taxable period (computed under Section 233 of the Act) consisted of gains, profits, commissions, or other income derived on a cost-plus basis from a Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive.

17. Treatment of special cases.—In the cases specified in Section 327 the tax will be specially determined under the provisions of Section 328. A corporation which comes within the provisions of subdivision (d) of Section 327 (paragraph 16, above) may make application for assessment under the provisions of Section 328, which application shall be attached to its return in the form of a statement setting forth in full: (a) The reasons why the tax should be so determined; (b) the facts upon which such reasons are based; (c) an exact description of each trade or business or important branch of a trade or business carried on by it; (d) a statement of the invested capital and net income for each year since the beginning of the prewar period; and (e) a statement showing the amount of gains, profits, commissions, or other income derived on a cost-plus basis from Government contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, and showing the per cent which such income is of the total income of the corporation.

18. Returns in special cases.—Corporations other than foreign corporations making claim for assessment under Section 328 of the Act should answer all questions and file all schedules as far as possible and attach a statement explaining why it is impracticable to fill out the entire return.

UNDISPUTED PROFITS TAXABLE TO STOCKHOLDERS.

19. If any corporation, however created or organized, is formed or availed of for the purpose of preventing the imposition of the surtax upon its stockholders or members through the medium of permitting gains and profits to accumulate instead of being divided or distributed, there shall be levied, collected and paid for each taxable year upon the net income of such corporation a tax equal to twenty-five per cent (25%) of the amount thereof, which shall be in addition to the tax imposed by Section 230, Revenue Act of 1921, and shall be computed, collected, and paid upon the same basis and in the same manner and subject to the same provisions of law, including penalties, as that tax. (See Section 220, Revenue Act of 1921.)

GENERAL DEFINITIONS.

1134 Art. 701. War-profits and excess-profits tax.—The war-profits and 1000 excess-profits tax, like the income tax, is a tax upon net income. It applies only to corporations. The terms “taxable year,” “fiscal year,” “personal service corporation,” “paid or accrued,” and “dividends,” and in general all other terms used in connection with the income tax, have here the same meaning as provided for the purposes of the income tax. (See secs. 2, 200, and 201 [beginning at ¶1001 and at ¶8084].) For other terms see sections 310 and 325 and articles 771 and 811-818.

IMPOSITION OF TAX

1135 Art. 711. Imposition of tax.—The tax is imposed upon the net income 1011 attributable to the calendar year 1921, of every corporation, domestic or foreign, except life insurance companies, personal service corporations and certain other classes of corporations. (See sec. 304 of the statute and arts. 751-753.) Special provisions of the statute deal with corporations deriving net income from Government contracts (see sec. 2 [¶1003]), corporations partly partaking of the nature of personal service corporations (see sec. 303), corporations engaged in the mining of gold (see sec. 304), foreign and abnormal corporations (see sec. 327), reorganized and consolidated corporations (see section 331), corporations making their returns upon the basis of a fiscal year (see sec. 335), and corporations which have sold mines or oil or gas wells (see sec. 337). For the requirements as to rendering returns see section 336.

1136 Art. 712.* Computation of tax for 1921.—For the calendar year 1011 1921, (a) if the net income, as defined in section 320 of the statute, is not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital, as defined in section 326, then under the first bracket the tax payable is 20 per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of the excess profits credit, as defined in section 312, and the second bracket is not applicable. (b) If the net income is in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital, then under the first bracket the tax is 20 per cent of the excess of an amount of net income equal to 20 per cent of the invested capital over the excess profits credit, and under the second bracket the tax is 40 per cent of the amount of the remaining net income less any excess profits credit not exhausted under the first bracket. The sum of the taxes computed under the two brackets is the tax payable. But see the following article and section 302.

1137 Art. 713.* Computation of tax on income from Government con-
 1014 tracts.—In the case of a corporation which derives in the calendar year 1921 a net income of more than $10,000 from any Government contracts made after April 5, 1917, and before November 12, 1918, the tax shall be the sum of the following: (1) Such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1918, specified in subdivision (a) of section 301 of the Revenue Act of 1918, as the portion of the net income attributable to the Government contracts bears to the entire net income, and (2) such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1921, specified in section 301(a) of the Revenue Act of 1921, as the amount of the remaining net income bears to the entire net income. In computing the tax under (1), however, the excess profits credit and the war profits credit which would have been applicable to the calendar year 1921 under the revenue act of 1918, if it had been continued in force, shall be used. [For example of computation of tax see ¶1144.] But see section 302 of the statute. The part of the net income attributable to such Government contracts shall be determined in accordance with the following article. (See also sec. 2 [Law ¶1003] and art. 1510.)

1138 Art. 714.* Allocation of net income to particular source.—Whenever 1017 it is necessary to determine the portion of the net income derived from or attributable to a particular source, the corporation shall allocate to the gross income derived from such source, and to the gross income derived from each other source, the expenses, losses, and other deductions properly appertaining thereto, and shall apply any general expenses, losses, and deductions (which can not properly be directly apportioned) against gross income from the respective sources upon a reasonable basis that will assign to each source a proper proportion of such deductions. The gross income derived from a particular source, less the deductions properly appertaining thereto and less its proportion of any general deductions, shall be the net income derived from such source. The corporation shall submit with its return a statement fully explaining the manner in which such expenses, losses, and deductions were allocated or distributed.

WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.—1922-1923.

1139 Art. 715.* Illustration of computation of tax.—A corporation has an invested capital for calendar year 1921 of $110,000 and a net income of $40,000.

1140 The excess profits credit is a specific exemption of $3,000, plus 8 per cent of the invested capital for taxable year (i. e., 8 per cent of $110,000) or $8,800, making a total of $11,800. (See sec. 312 of the statute and art. 791.)

1141 First bracket: The amount or portion of the net income ($40,000) in excess of the excess profits credit ($11,800) and not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $110,000) or $22,000, is $10,200. The tax computed under this bracket is 20 per cent of this amount (i. e., 20 per cent of $10,200) or $2,040.

1142 Second bracket: The amount or portion of the net income ($40,000) in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $110,000) is $18,000. The tax computed under this bracket is 40 per cent of this amount (i. e., 40 per cent of $18,000) or $7,200.

1143 Total tax: The total excess profits tax is the sum of the taxes computed under the two brackets (i. e., $2,040 plus $7,200) or $9,240.

1144 Art. 716.* Illustration of computation where net income derived from 1016 Government contract.—A corporation has an average prewar invested capital of $60,000; an average prewar net income of $10,000; a net income for calendar year 1921 of $40,000 which includes $15,000 of net income from Government contracts and an invested capital for calendar year 1921 of $110,000. The tax for calendar year 1921 will be the sum of the amounts computed under clauses (1) and (2) of section 301(b) of the statute.

1145 (1) Under clause (1) the excess profits credit is $11,800, the same as under clause (2). The war profits credit is a specific exemption of $3,000, plus the average prewar net income, or $10,000, plus 10 per cent of $50,000 (the difference in invested capital) or $5,000, making a total war profits credit of $18,000.

1146 First bracket: The amount or portion of the net income ($40,000) in excess of the excess profits credit ($11,800) and not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $110,000) or $22,000, is $10,200. The tax computed under this bracket is 30 per cent of this amount (i. e., 30 per cent of $10,200) or $3,060.

1147 Second bracket: The amount or portion of the net income ($40,000) in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $110,000) or $22,000, is $18,000. The tax computed under this bracket is 65 per cent of this amount (65 per cent of $18,000) or $11,700.

1148 Third bracket: Eighty per cent of the amount in excess of the war profits credit (i. e., 80 per cent of the amount by which $40,000 exceeds $18,000, or $22,000) is $17,600. The amount of the tax computed under the first and second brackets ($3,060 plus $11,700) is $14,760. The tax computed under this bracket is the amount by which $17,600 exceeds $14,760, or $2,840.

1149 The portion of the tax computed under clause (1) is the same proportion of the total amount computed under the above brackets at the rates for 1918 (i. e., $3,060 plus $11,700 plus $2,840) or $17,600, as the part of the net income attributable to Government contracts ($15,000) is of the entire net income ($40,000). This portion of the tax is therefore three-eighths of $17,600, or $6,600.

1150 (2) The portion of the tax computed under clause (2) is the same proportion of the total amount computed at the rates for 1921, or $9,240 (for the details see illustration for 1921 under article 715) as the part of the net income attributable to Government contracts ($25,000) is of the entire net income ($40,000). This portion of the tax is therefore five-eighths of $9,240, or $5,775.

1151 (3) The total tax for the year 1921 is the sum of the amounts computed under paragraphs (1) and (2) above ($6,600 plus $5,775) or $12,375.

**Was Art. 719 of Reg. 45. Therefore, for Supplementary Bulletin Rulings bearing on this Article, refer to Art. 719 in the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings.*

1152 Art. 717.* Illustration of computation where excess profits credit not exhausted under first bracket.—A corporation has an invested capital for calendar year 1921 of $20,000 and a net income of $7,000.

1153 The excess profits credit is a specific exemption of $3,000 plus 8 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 8 per cent of $20,000) or $1,600, a total of $4,600.

1154 First bracket: The excess profits credit ($4,600) exceeds 20 per cent of the invested capital (20 per cent of $20,000) or $4,000, and there is no amount taxable under this bracket.

1155 Second bracket: The portion of the net income ($7,000) in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (20 per cent of $20,000) or $4,000, is $3,000. In this case, however, the full amount of the excess profits credit could not be allowed under the first bracket, so that the $3,000 which would ordinarily be taxable under this bracket is reduced by the amount of the excess profits credit not allowed under the first bracket ($600), leaving only $2,400 taxable under this bracket. The tax computed under this bracket is 40 per cent of this amount (i. e., 40 per cent of $2,400) or $960.

1157 Art. 718.* Illustration of computation where return is for period of less than 12 months.—A corporation which has reported on the basis of the fiscal year ending March 31, 1921, later changes to a calendar year basis and files a return covering the 9 months from April 1, 1921, to December 31, 1921. It has an invested capital for the nine months, ending December 31, 1921, of $120,000, and a net income for such period of $50,000. The excess-profits credit is computed by adding the specific exemption of $3,000 to 8 per cent of the full invested capital of $120,000, or $9,600, a total of $12,600. The income is placed on an annual basis in accordance with section 226(c) by multiplying the amount thereof, $50,000, by 12 and dividing by 9, or $66,666.67.

First bracket.—The amount or portion of the net income ($66,666.67) in excess of the excess-profits credit ($12,600) and not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $120,000), or $24,000, is $11,400. The tax computed under this bracket is 20 per cent of this amount (i. e., 20 per cent of $11,400), or $2,280.

Second bracket.—The amount or portion of the net income ($66,666.67) in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $120,000), or $24,000, is $42,666.67. The tax computed under this bracket is 40 per cent of this amount (i. e., 40 per cent of $42,666.67), or $17,066.67.

Total tax.—Nine-twelfths of the sum of the taxes computed under the two brackets (i. e., $2,280 plus $17,066.67), or $14,510.

LIMITATION OF TAX.

1158 Art. 731. Limitation of tax.—In any case where the net income is 1019 at least $20,000 the computation under section 302 of the statute may be shortened as follows: The tax imposed by subdivision (a) of section 301 shall not exceed $3,400, plus 40 per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of $20,000.

1159 Where the net income is less than $20,000 the tax shall not exceed 20 per cent of the amount of the net income in excess of $3,000.

1160 Where net income in excess of $10,000 is derived during the calendar year 1921 from Government war contracts, the limitations imposed in such a case by the Revenue Act of 1918 are continued in effect by the present statute.

1161 Art. 732. Limitation when return for fractional part of year.—When a return is rendered for a fractional part of a year, the limitation shall be computed in the same manner as if the period covered by the return were a full taxable year.

1162 Art. 733. Illustration of computation of limitation of tax.—A corporation has an invested capital for calendar year 1921 of $20,000 and a net income of $9,000. The excess profits tax computed under section 301 (a) of the statute would be $1,760. Section 302 provides, however, that the tax under section 301(a) shall not be more than 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $3,000 and not in excess of $20,000. In this case the tax must not exceed 20 per cent of $6,000 (i. e., 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $3,000) or $1,200. The tax under section 301(a), amounting to $1,760, will accordingly be reduced to $1,200.

TAX WHEN PARTLY PERSONAL SERVICE BUSINESS.

1163 Art. 741. Apportionment of invested capital and net income.—For 1020 the purpose of determining whether or not a corporation partly partaking of the nature of a personal service corporation is within the scope of section 303 of the statute and also for the purpose of establishing the basis for the computation of the tax, the corporation shall apportion or allocate its invested capital between each trade or business or branch thereof as nearly as may be in accordance with the actual facts, and shall submit with its return an explanatory statement setting forth the manner in which the apportionment of the invested capital employed in the production of each part of its net income has been determined. There must be assigned to any personal service trade or business or branch thereof an amount of invested capital at least as great as that which would ordinarily be employed by a personal service corporation of similar size and standing for the payment of salaries and office expenses, maintenance of library and equipment, credit advances to clients, etc. For the method of determining the portion of the net income derived from each trade or business or branch thereof see article 714. For the definition of "personal service corporation" see [Law ¶1002 and] articles 1523-1532.

1165 (2) The tax upon the personal service part of the net income is the same percentage thereof as the tax computed under (1) is of the nonpersonal service part of the net income. The tax under this paragraph shall in no case be less than 20 per cent of the personal service part of the entire net income, unless the tax upon the entire net income if computed in the ordinary way would be less than 20 per cent of such entire net income. In that event, and in any case in which the amount of the total tax as computed under this article is the same as or greater than the tax as computed in the ordinary way, the tax shall be computed under section 301 of the statute. (See sec. 302 and arts. 711-718 and 731-733.)

1166 Art. 743. Illustration of computation of tax where partly personal service business.—A corporation is engaged in contracting and construction work (a nonpersonal service business in which the employment of capital is necessary) and also renders consulting engineering service (a personal service business which, if constituting its sole business, would bring it within the class of personal service corporations). It has an invested capital for 1921 of $100,000 (of which $81,000 is used in contracting and $19,000 in engineering); and a net income for 1921 of $90,000 (of which $30,000 is derived from contracting and $60,000 from engineering).

1167 (1) In computing the tax upon the first or nonpersonal service part of the net income (i. e., $30,000 derived from contracting) the specific exemption is $1,000 (i. e., the same proportion of $3,000 which $30,000 is of the entire net income of $90,000). The excess profits credit is a specific exemption of $1,000, plus 8 per cent of the invested capital used in contracting (i. e., 8 per cent of $81,000) or $6,480, a total of $7,480.

1168 First bracket: The amount of the net income derived from contracting ($30,000) in excess of the excess profits credit ($7,480) and not in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital (i. e., 20 per cent of $81,000) or $16,200, is $8,720. The tax under this bracket is 20 per cent of this amount (i. e., 20 per cent of $8,720) or $1,744.

1169 Second bracket: The amount of the net income derived from contracting ($30,000) in excess of 20 per cent of the invested capital used in contracting (i. e., 20 per cent of $81,000) or $16,200 is $13,800. The tax computed under this bracket is 40 per cent of this amount (40 per cent of $13,800) or $5,520.

1170 Tax: The tax upon the first portion of the net income (i. e., $30,000, derived from contracting) is the sum of the taxes computed under the two brackets (i. e., $1,744 plus $5,520) or $7,264. This is 24.214 per cent of $30,000, the net income from contracting.

1171 (2) The tax upon the second or personal service part of the net income (i. e., $60,000, derived from engineering) is the same percentage of such part of the net income (i. e., 24.214 per cent of $60,000) or $14,528.

1172 (3) The total tax is the sum of $7,264 (the tax upon the first part of the net income derived from contracting) and $14,528 (the tax upon the second part of the net income derived from engineering) or $21,792.

EXEMPTIONS.

1173 Art. 751. Corporations exempt from tax.—A corporation whose net income for a full taxable year of twelve months is less than $3,000 is exempt from the tax. [For return requirements in such cases see ¶851.] If the taxable period is less than twelve months the corporation is exempt from the tax if its net income for the period is less than the same proportion of $3,000 as the number of months in the period is of twelve months, any fractional part of a month being counted as the number of days in such part of a month divided by 30. Life insurance companies are not subject to the tax. (See art. 661.) Certain classes of corporations, including personal service corporations, named in section 231 of the statute [Law ¶1059] are also exempt. (See arts. 511-522.)

1174 Art. 752. Net income exempt from tax.—If a corporation is engaged in the mining of gold, the portion of its net income derived from that source is exempt from the tax imposed by this title and also from the tax imposed by Title II of the Revenue Act of 1917. The tax on the remaining portion of its net income is the proportion of the tax that would have been payable had the entire net income been derived from other sources than the mining of gold, which such remaining portion of the net income bears to the entire net income. For the method of determining the net income derived from the mining of gold see article 714.

1175 Art. 753. Illustration of computation of tax where net income is from gold mining.—In the case of the corporation used as an illustration in article 715, let it be assumed that it is engaged in the mining both of gold and other rare metals; that the Commissioner finds under article 714 that $25,000 of its gross income is properly attributable to the mining of gold; and that $15,000 of the deductions allowed are properly applicable to the gross income from that source. The portion of the net income attributable to the mining of gold and exempt from tax would be $10,000. The remaining portion of the net income is $30,000, and the tax thereon is the same proportion of the tax computed on the entire net income without the benefit of the exemption (i. e., a tax of $9,240) which the remaining portion of the net income ($30,000) bears to the entire net income ($40,000). The tax will therefore be three-fourths of the tax of $9,240 computed without benefit of the exemption, or $6,930.

APPORTIONMENT OF SPECIFIC EXEMPTION

1176 Art. 761. Apportionment of specific exemption.—Full effect is given to section 305 by placing the income on an annual basis as provided in section 226(c). See articles 718, 855, and 856.

EXCESS-PROFITS CREDIT

1177 Art. 791. Excess profits credit.—The excess profits credit consists of 1025 the specific exemption of $3,000 plus an amount equal to 8 per cent of the invested capital for the taxable year. In the case of affiliated corporations making a consolidated return only one specific exemption of $3,000 is allowed. (See also secs. 240 [law ¶1078] and 305 of the statute and arts. 716-718, 743, and 761.)

NET INCOME

1178 Art. 801. Net income.—The net income of a corporation for the 1027 purpose of the imposition of the excess profits tax is the same net income [see ¶1089] as determined for the purpose of the income tax.

TERMS RELATING TO INVESTED CAPITAL

1179 Art. 811. Intangible and tangible property.—Intangible property 1029 includes patents and good will and other like property. Tangible 1040 property includes all property other than intangible property. Most contracts are intangible property, and in the absence of a specific ruling by the commissioner to the contrary should be so regarded for the purpose of making returns. A contract may be treated as tangible property only after the submission of a full statement as to its exact nature, showing to the satisfaction of the commissioner that it relates to rights in tangible property to such an extent that its value arises chiefly therefrom. Associated Press, United Press, and similar franchises, and subscription lists and mailing lists are intangible property.

1180 Art. 812. Borrowed capital: securities.—Any interest in a corpora-1031 tion represented by bonds, debentures, or other securities, by what-1041 ever name called, if with respect to the payment of either interest or principal it ranks with or prior to the interest of the general creditors, is borrowed capital and can not be included in computing invested capital.

1181 Art. 813. Borrowed capital: amounts left in business.—Whether a 1031 given amount paid into or left in the business of a corporation con-1041 stitutes borrowed capital or paid-in surplus is a question of fact. Thus, indebtedness to stockholders canceled and left in the business would ordinarily constitute paid-in surplus, while amounts left in the business representing salaries of officers in excess of their actual withdrawals, or deposit accounts in favor of partners in a partnership succeeded by the corporation, will be considered paid-in surplus or borrowed capital according to the facts of the particular case. The general principle is that if interest is paid or is to be paid on any such amount, or if the stockholder's or officer's right to repayment of such amount ranks with or before that of the general creditors, the amount so left with the corporation must be considered as borrowed capital and be so treated in computing invested capital.

1182 Art. 814. Borrowed capital: other illustrations.—Items such as 1031 deposits or amounts due to other banks shown in the balance sheet 1041 of a bank, unexpired subscriptions shown in the balance sheet of a publishing concern, etc., are deemed liabilities and can not be included in computing invested capital.

1183 Art. 815. Inadmissible assets.—Stocks, bonds, and other obligations 1032 (other than obligations of the United States), the dividends or interest from which are not required to be included in computing net income, are inadmissible assets even though no such dividends or interest have been actually paid or received during the taxable year. The failure to pay or to receive dividends or interest does not change the status of such securities as inadmissible assets. A corporation can not by including the income from inadmissible assets as taxable income create the right to have such assets considered admissible assets.

[For Federal Reserve Bank stock see ¶744. For War Finance Corporation bonds see ¶745.]

1184 Art. 816. Inadmissible assets: Government bonds.—Obligations of a 1032 State or Territory, or any municipal or other political subdivision thereof, of the District of Columbia, or of any possession of the United States, and Federal farm loan bonds, not being obligations of the United States within the meaning of the statute, are inadmissible assets. See sec. 213 (b) of the statute and arts. 74-85.

1185 Art. 817. Inadmissible assets: partial exception.—(a) Where the 1032 income derived from inadmissible assets consists in part of profit from the disposition thereof, or (b) where all or a part of the interest derived from such assets is in effect included in net income because the interest paid on indebtedness incurred or continued to purchase or carry such assets may not be deducted from gross income, in either case a corresponding part of the capital invested in such assets shall be deemed an admissible asset. This article applies separately to each issue or class of inadmissible securities held by a corporation. For example, it may hold A company stock costing $100,000 and B company stock costing $200,000. During the year it receives $8,000 in dividends from A company and $5,000 from B company, and on September 30 sells part of its B company stock at a profit of $3,000. For the period from January 1 to September 30, $75,000 of its holdings of B company stock become admissible. After September 30 its remaining holdings of B company stock are inadmissible, but the proceeds of the sale are admissible unless invested in inadmissibles. (See arts. 852 and 854.)

1186 Art. 818. Admissible assets.—Admissible assets include all assets 1033 other than inadmissible assets. Organization expenses and deferred charges against future income are admissible assets. For all purposes of computing invested capital admissible assets must be valued in accordance with the provisions of sections 326 and 331 of the statute and the articles thereunder. Thus, for example, intangible property paid in for stock or shares is an admissible asset, but it can not be valued at an amount in excess of that at which it may be included in computing invested capital under paragraphs (4) and (5) of section 326 (a).

INVESTED CAPITAL

1187 Art. 831. Meaning of invested capital.—Invested capital within the 1035 meaning of the statute is the capital actually paid into the corporation by the stockholders, including the surplus and undivided profits, and is not based upon the present net worth of the assets, as shown by an appraisal or in any other manner. The basis or starting point in the computation of invested capital is found in the amount of cash and other property paid in, the valuation at which such other property may be included being determined in accordance with the statute and the regulations. The computation does not stop, however, with such original entries or amounts, but also takes into account the surplus and undivided profits of prior years left in the business. The invested capital of a corporation includes, generally speaking, (a) the cash paid in for stock, (b) the tangible property paid in for stock, (c) the surplus and undivided profits, and (d) the intangible property paid in for stock (to a limited amount), less, however, the same proportion of such aggregate sum as the amount of inadmissible assets bears to the amount of the admissible assets and the inadmissible assets held during the taxable year. Invested capital does not include borrowed capital. (See sec. 325 of the statute and arts. 811-818.) The fair market value of the assets as of March 1, 1913, has no bearing on invested capital. (See sec. 202 and art. 1561.)

1188 Art. 832. Cash paid in: bonus stock.—Capital stock issued as a 1036 bonus in connection with the sale of a corporation's bonds may not be included in invested capital unless the corporation proves to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that such stock bonus enabled the corporation to secure a higher price for the bonds than it could otherwise have secured. Wherever this fact is established such stock shall be included in computing invested capital to the extent of the difference between the selling price of the bonds and the price at which they could have been sold if issued without such stock bonus. The excess of the face value of such bonds over the price at which they could have been sold if issued without the stock bonus is deemed discount and is subject to amortization. (See art. 39.)

1189 Art. 833. Tangible property paid in: evidences of indebtedness.— 1037 Enforcible notes or other evidences of indebtedness, either interest-bearing or noninterest-bearing, of the subscriber received by a corporation upon a subscription for stock may be considered as tangible property in computing its invested capital to the extent of the actual cash value of such notes or other evidences of indebtedness at the time when paid in, but only (a) if such notes or evidences of indebtedness could under the laws of the jurisdiction in which the corporation was organized legally be received in payment for stock, and (b) if they were actually received by the corporation as absolute, and not as conditional, payment in whole or in part of the stock subscription.

1190 Art. 834. Tangible property paid in: inadmissible assets.—Stocks, 1038 bonds, and other obligations (other than obligations of the United States), the dividends or interest from which are not included in computing net income, when bona fide paid in for stock or shares, may like other tangible property be included in computing the invested capital of the corporation at their actual cash value when paid in. For the purpose of the reduction required in articles 852 and 854, however, account must be taken of such assets in the same manner as of any other inadmissible assets.

1191 Art. 835. Tangible property paid in: mixture of tangible and intan- 1037 gible property.—Where stock or shares and bonds or other obligations have been issued for a mixed aggregate of tangible and intangible property, it will be presumed in the absence of satisfactory evidence to the contrary that the bonds were issued for tangible property and that the stock was issued for the balance of the tangible property, if any, and for the intangible property. Where stock or shares have been issued for a mixed aggregate of tangible and intangible property and certain liabilities have been assumed in connection with the transaction, it will be presumed that such liabilities are to be charged against the tangible property and the intangible property in the order named, unless it is shown by evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner that this presumption is not in accordance with the facts. (See further sec. 327 (c) of the statute.)

1192 Art. 836. Tangible property paid in: value in excess of par value of 1037 stock.—[For this Article 836 amended see ¶1265.] Evidence offered to support a claim for a paid-in surplus must be as of the date of the payment, and may consist among other things of (a) an appraisal of the property by disinterested authorities made on or about the date of the transaction; (b) certification of the assessed value in the case of real estate; and (c) proof of a market price in excess of the par value of the stock or shares. The additional value allowed in any case is confined to the value definitely known or accurately ascertainable at the time of the payment. No claim will be allowed for a paid-in surplus in a case in which the additional value has been developed or ascertained subsequently to the date on which the property was paid in to the corporation, or in respect of property which the stockholders or their agents on or shortly before the date of such payment acquired at a bargain price, as for instance, at a receiver's sale. Generally, allowable claims under this article will arise out of transactions in which there has been no substantial change of beneficial interest in the property paid in to the corporation, and in all cases the proof of value must be clear and explicit.

1193 Art. 837. Surplus and undivided profits: paid-in surplus.—Where 1038 it is shown by evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner that tangible property has been paid in by a stockholder to a corporation as a gift or at a value definitely known or accurately ascertainable as of the date of such payment clearly and substantially in excess of the cash or other consideration paid by the corporation therefor, then the amount of the excess shall be deemed to be paid-in surplus. Substantially the same kind of evidence will be required under this article as under article 836. (See further art. 813.)

1194 Art. 838. Surplus and undivided profits: earned surplus.—Only true 1038 earned surplus and undivided profits can be included in the computation of invested capital, and if for any reason the books do not properly reflect the true surplus such adjustments must be made as are necessary in order to arrive at the correct amount. In the computation of earned surplus and undivided profits recognition should first be given to all expenses incurred and losses sustained from the original organization of the corporation down to the taxable year, including among such expenses and losses reasonable allowances for depreciation, obsolescence, or depletion of property (irrespective of the manner in which such property was originally acquired), and for the amortization of any discount on its bonds. There can, of course, be no earned surplus or undivided profits until any deficit or impairment of paid-in capital has been made good. Where explicit and convincing evidence is presented that the amounts written off or deducted in previous returns of net income are in the aggregate incorrect or unreasonable, adjustments must be made, and the taxpayer will be allowed a refund in respect of any taxes overpaid in prior years, or in the case of an underpayment of taxes will be additionally assessed.

1195 Art. 839. Surplus and undivided profits: allowance for depletion and depreciation.—Depletion, like depreciation, must be recognized in all cases in which it occurs. Depletion attaches to each unit of mineral or other property removed, and the denial of a deduction in computing net income under the act of August 5, 1909, or the limitation upon the amount of the deduction allowed under the act of October 3, 1913, does not relieve the corporation of its obligation to make proper provision for depletion of its property in computing its surplus and undivided profits. Adjustments in respect of depreciation or depletion in prior years will be made or permitted only upon the basis of explicit and convincing evidence (and calculations based upon a theoretical formula are not such evidence) that as at the beginning of the taxable year the amount of depreciation or depletion written off in prior years was insufficient or excessive, as the case may be, and in every such case due regard must be given to expenditures made by the taxpayer to maintain the effective usefulness of the property. Where deductions for depreciation or depletion have, either on the books of the corporation or in its returns of net income, been included in the past in expense or other accounts, rather than specifically as depreciation or depletion, or where capital expenditures have been charged to expense in lieu of depreciation or depletion, a statement indicating the extent to which this practice has been carried should accompany the return.

1196 Art. 840. Surplus and undivided profits: additions to surplus account.—A corporation's books of account will be presumed to show the facts. If it claims that its capital or surplus account is understated the burden of proof will rest upon it. Additions to such accounts will be accepted to the following extent:

1197 (1) Excessive depreciation heretofore charged off on property still owned and in use, if it is now shown by explicit and convincing proof to have been excessive and such excess is substantial in amount, whether or not disallowed by the Commissioner as a deduction from net income, may be restored to the surplus account. No such amount shall be restored, however, unless it is shown that adequate depreciation has been deducted upon all other property of the corporation still in use, nor in any case in which such amount has been allowed as a deduction for amortization under section 234 (a) (8) of the statute, or in which the cost of the property has been recovered through being included in the price of goods or services, as for example, in the case of patterns, dies, plates, special tools, etc., or under a munition contract with a foreign Government.

1198 (2) Amounts which have been expended before January 1, 1917, for the acquisition of plant, equipment, tools, patterns, furniture, fixtures, or like tangible property, having a useful life extending substantially beyond the year in which the expenditure was made, and which have been charged as current expense, may (less proper deductions for depreciation or obsolescence) be added to the surplus account when such assets are still owned and in active use by the corporation during the taxable year. Special tools, patterns, and similar assets shall not be assigned any value if their cost has been recovered through having been included in the price of goods. If their cost has not been so recovered and they are held for only occasional use, they shall not be assigned a value in excess of the fair value based upon the earnings actually arising from their current use, and in no case shall such value be more than the cost less depreciation. Assets of this kind not in current use shall not be valued at more than their nominal or scrap value.

1199 (3) Amounts which have been expended in the past for intangible property of any kind can be restored to capital or surplus account only to the extent that the corporation specifically paid such amounts for the intangible property as such. For provisions relating to patents see article 843.

1200 (4) Adjustments necessary to correct other errors found in the books of account may be made. But see the following article.

1201 Art. 841. Surplus and undivided profits: limitation of additions to 1048 surplus account.—Additions to surplus which a corporation may desire to make under the preceding article fall broadly into two classes:

1202 (1) To correct returns of net income for prior years in which actual errors have been made, as for example where excessive depreciation has been deducted, additions to plant and equipment or other capital charges have been charged off as an expense, inventories have been taken upon a wrong basis of valuation, etc.

1204 Adjustments falling in class (1) will be permitted for all years whether before or after March 1, 1913, provided amended returns of net income are filed for each year in which an erroneous return has been made. Due consideration will be given to the assessment of penalties in any case in which a fraudulent return has been made. Adjustments falling in class (2) can not usually be permitted, as in such cases where the treatment of the item was optional and the decision made at the time conformed to the best accounting practice, it is considered that the corporation has exercised a binding option in deducting such expenses from income. An election of this sort which was made concurrently with the transaction can not now be revised, and amended returns in respect thereof can not be accepted.

1205 The corporation shall submit with its return a statement of the additions proposed, specifying the kinds and amounts of property involved, the years in which the expenditures were made, and the method followed in distinguishing between capital outlays and current expenses, and showing that adequate provision has been made for depreciation, obsolescence, and depletion of such of the assets affected by the additions as are subject to recognized depreciation, obsolescence, or depletion. In any case in which there is an operating deficit amounts restored must first be set off against the deficit and only the excess can be actually included in the computation of invested capital.

1206 Art. 842. Surplus and undivided profits: property paid in and subse-
1038 quently written off.—Where tangible or intangible property has been paid in to a corporation for stock or shares or where tangible property has been paid in as a paid-in surplus and has subsequently been in whole or in part written off the books, the amount so written off may upon evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner be restored to the capital or surplus account subject to the following limitations:

1207 (1) The amount restored must be reduced by a proper deduction for any depreciation, obsolescence, or depletion; and 1208 (2) The aggregate amount included in computing invested capital on account of such property shall not exceed the amount which might have been included if such property had not been written off.

1209 Art. 843. Surplus and undivided profits: patents.—From the stand-
1038 point of assets a patent, or more particularly a group of patents, is closely analogous to good will. Their value is contingent upon and measured by their earning power. While patents have a definite life, there is a common tendency to extend that life by improvements upon the original, and in a successful business the patent value merges more or less completely into a trade name or other form of good will. Therefore, while deductions in respect to the depreciation of patents based upon a normal life period of seventeen years are allowable in computing net income for the purpose of the income tax, such deductions are not obligatory, but are optional with each taxpayer. Where since January 1, 1909, a corporation has exercised that option to its own benefit in computing its taxable net income the amount so deducted can not now be restored in computing invested capital. Where, however, the cost of patents has been charged against surplus or otherwise disposed of in such a manner as not to benefit the corporation in computing its taxable net income since January 1, 1909, any amount so written off may be restored in computing invested capital, if it be shown to the satisfaction of the Commissioner that the amount so written off represented a mere book entry ascribable to a conservative policy of management or accounting and did not represent a realized shrinkage in the value of such assets. Any amount so restored may not be written off by way of deductions from taxable net income in any subsequent year or years. Where a corporation has charged to current expenses the cost of developing or protecting patents, no amount in respect thereof expended since January 1, 1909, can be restored in computing invested capital. In respect of expenditures made before January 1, 1909, a corporation now seeking to restore them must be prepared to show to the satisfaction of the commissioner that all such items are proper capital expenditures. It can not be said that the correct computation of surplus and undivided profits necessarily requires a deduction in respect of the expiration of patents. It follows, therefore, that where a corporation in the exercise of its option has not written down the cost of patents, it is not ordinarily necessary to reduce the surplus and undivided profits in computing invested capital, whether the patents have been acquired for stock or shares or for cash or other tangible property. Due consideration will be given to the facts in any case in which this rule seems obviously unreasonable. (See art. 167.)

1210 Art. 844. Surplus and undivided profits: reserve for depreciation 1038 or depletion.—If any reserves for depreciation or for depletion are included in the surplus account it should be analyzed so as to separate such reserves and leave only real surplus. Reserves for depreciation or depletion can not be included in the computation of invested capital, except to the following extent:

1211 (1) Excessive depletion or depreciation included therein and which if charged off could be restored under article 840 may be included in the computation of invested capital; and

1212 (2) Where depreciation or depletion is computed on the value as of March 1, 1913, or as of any subsequent date, the proportion of depreciation or depletion representing the realization of appreciation of value at March 1, 1913, or such subsequent date, may if undistributed and used or employed in the business be treated as surplus and included in the computation of invested capital.

1213 For the purpose of computing invested capital, depreciation or depletion computed on the value as of March 1, 1913, or as of any subsequent date shall, if such value exceeded cost, be deemed a pro rata realization of cost and appreciation and be apportioned accordingly. Except as above provided, value appreciation which has not been actually realized and in respect of amounts accrued since March 1, 1913, reported as income for the purpose of the income tax, can not be included in the computation of invested capital, and if already reflected in the surplus account it must be deducted therefrom.

1214 Art. 845. Surplus and undivided profits: reserve for income and excess
 1038 profit taxes.—For the purpose of computing invested capital, Federal income and war profits and excess profits taxes are deemed to have been paid out of the net income of the taxable year for which they are levied. It is immaterial, therefore, whether reserves for the payment of such taxes for the preceding year have been set up or not, or if set up whether such taxes when paid have actually been charged against such reserves. Amounts payable on account of such taxes for the preceding year may be included in the computation of invested capital only until such taxes become due and payable. A deduction from the invested capital as of the beginning of the taxable year must therefore be made for such taxes or any installment thereof, averaged for the proportionate part of the taxable year after the date when the tax or the installment is due and payable. Where as a result of an audit by the Commissioner, or the acceptance of an amended return, or for any other reason, the amount of any such tax for the preceding year is subsequently changed, a corresponding adjustment will be made in the invested capital for the taxable year upon the same basis as if the corrected amount of the tax for the preceding year had been used in the original computation of the invested capital for the taxable year. (See arts. 1541 and 1542.)

1215 Art. 846. Surplus and undivided profits: insurance on officers.— 1038 Where insurance is carried by the corporation on the life of an officer or employee, the policy may be included as an admissible asset and reflected in the surplus account at the cash surrender value as of the beginning of the taxable year. The whole amount of premiums paid on such insurance can not be included in surplus, but the surplus will be considered as increased as of the beginning of each taxable year by the amount added to the cash surrender value of the policy. (See art. 294.)

1216 Art. 847. Surplus and undivided profits: property taken for debt
1038 or in exchange.—Real or personal property taken by a corporation in payment or satisfaction of a debt, or property received in exchange for other property, will be an admissible asset at its fair market value upon receipt. The profit or loss, if any, resulting from the transaction will not be reflected in invested capital until the succeeding taxable year. But see as to the foreclosure of a mortgage article 153. (See also sec. 202 of the statute and arts. 1561-1570.)

1217 Art. 848. Surplus and undivided profits: discount on sale of bonds.— 1038 Discount allowed on the sale of bonds is in effect an advance on account of interest, so that the effective rate of interest in such a case is equal to the sum of the nominal rate plus the rate necessary to amortize the discount over the life of the bonds. Where, under incorrect accounting practices, the discount on bonds has been charged to a property account or otherwise incorrectly carried as an asset, and is so reflected in the surplus account, it is necessary in computing invested capital to make an adjustment in respect of such discount. (See art. 563.)

1218 Art. 849. Surplus and undivided profits: miscellaneous.—Only the 1038 amount of discount which has actually been reported by a bank in a prior year as taxable income and credited to surplus account may be included in surplus as of the beginning of the taxable year. For the treatment of surplus arising out of sales on the installment plan see articles 42-46, and from compensation for property lost, damaged, or condemned, see articles 49 and 261-263.

1219 Art. 850. Surplus and undivided profits: current profits.—Profits 1038 earned during any year can not be included in the computation of invested capital for that year, even though during the year such profits are set up as surplus on the books or assumed to be distributed in the form of stock dividends. If a dividend is declared and paid during any year out of profits of that year and the stockholders pay back into the corporation all or a substantial part of the amount of such dividends, the amount so paid back can not be included in the computation of invested capital unless the corporation shows by evidence satisfactory to the Commissioner that the dividends were paid in good faith and without any understanding, express or implied, that they were to be paid back.

1039 intangible property paid in for stock or shares must be determined 1040 in the light of the facts in each case. Among the factors to be considered are (a) the earnings attributable to such intangible assets while in the hands of the predecessor owner; (b) the earnings of the corporation attributable to the intangible assets after the date of their acquisition; (c) representative sales of the stock of the corporation at or about the date of the acquisition of the intangible assets; and (d) any cash offers for the purchase of the business, including the intangible property, at or about the time of its acquisition. A corporation claiming a value for intangible property paid in for stock or shares should file with its return a full statement of the facts relating to such valuation. (See also art. 835.)

1221 Art. 852. Percentage of inadmissible assets.—For the purpose of 1042 ascertaining the deductible percentage under section 326 (c) the amount of inadmissible assets held during the year may ordinarily be determined by dividing by two the sum of the amount of such assets held at the beginning of the year and the amount held at the end of the year. The total amount of admissible and inadmissible assets held during the year may ordinarily be determined by dividing by two the sum of the amount of such assets held at the beginning of the year and the amount at the end of the year. If at any time a substantial change has taken place either in the amount of inadmissible assets or in the total amount of admissible and inadmissible assets, the effect of such change shall be averaged exactly from the date on which it occurred. In any case where the Commissioner finds that either amount determined as above provided does not substantially reflect the average situation throughout the year, and that the amount of each kind of assets held on a given day of each month throughout the year or at more frequent regular intervals can be determined, the amount of inadmissible assets and the amount of both kinds of assets held during the year shall be determined by averaging the amounts held at such several times. In making the computations under this article the valuation at which each asset is carried shall be adjusted in accordance with the provisions of the statute and of the regulations relating to the valuation of assets for the purpose of computing invested capital, including in such adjustment the amount of reserves for depreciation, depletion, amortization and other reserves which represent the valuation of assets. It is immaterial whether any asset was acquired out of invested capital or out of profits earned during the year or borrowed capital.

1222 Art. 853. Changes in invested capital during year.—The invested 1043 capital as of the beginning of any period of one year or less should be adjusted by an appropriate addition or deduction for each change in invested capital during the period. The amount so added or deducted in each case is the amount of the change averaged for the time remaining in the period during which it is in effect. The fraction used in finding such average is the number of days remaining in the period (including the day on which the change occurs) over the number of days in the period. Thus if a return is made for the calendar year ending December 31, 1921, and if $100,000 of additional capital was paid in on February 17, 1921, this addition to invested capital is in effect for 318 days, and the amount to be added to the invested capital as of the beginning of the year would be  $318/365$  of $100,000, or $87,123.29. If $50,000 of this amount was withdrawn on October 31, 1921, the amount to be deducted would be  $62/365$  of $50,000, or $8,493.15.

1223 Art. 854. Computation of average invested capital.—For the purpose 1043 of computing invested capital for any period of one year or less each corporation shall add together its paid-in-capital and its paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits (under whatever name it may be called) as shown by its books at the beginning of the period. The total so obtained shall be adjusted (a) for any property paid in, or for any asset reflected in surplus and undivided profits, which is not carried on the books at the valuation prescribed by the statute or by the regulations, and (b) for any changes in paid-in capital or in paid-in or earned surplus and undivided profits (not including surplus and undivided profits earned during the period) occurring during the period, averaged for the time for which such changes are effective. (See art. 853.) The total so obtained and adjusted is the average invested capital for the period, unless the corporation at any time during the period held any inadmissible assets, in which case such total must be reduced by a percentage thereof equal to the percentage which the amount of inadmissible assets held during the period is of the total amount of admissible and inadmissible assets held during the period. (See art. 852.) The invested capital can not be determined by adding the amounts of the assets of a corporation.

1224 Art. 855. Invested capital for full year or less.—In the case of a corporation making a return for a full year of 12 months, its invested capital for the year is the average invested capital for the year. In the case of a corporation making a return for a fractional part of a year for the method of computing the changes in its invested capital made during the period, see article 856. Since in accordance with sections 239 and 226 the income is placed upon a yearly basis, the full average invested capital for the period should be used in computing the tax under this title. (See art. 718.)

1225 Art. 856. Illustration of invested capital for fractional part of year.—A corporation was organized July 1, 1921, and makes a return for the six months ending December 31, 1921. The invested capital consists of $100,000 paid in on July 1 and $100,000 paid in on October 1. The average invested capital for such period would be $100,000 plus  $92/184$  (not  $92/365$ ) of $100,000, or $50,000, a total of $150,000.

1226 Art. 857. Method of determining available net income.—Whether at the time of any payment made during the taxable year there is sufficient income of the taxable year available for such payment, or whether the surplus or undivided profits as of the beginning of the taxable year must be reduced by the amount of such payment, shall be determined according to the following principles:

1227 (1) The aggregate amount of earnings of the taxable year available for all purposes up to any given date will be determined upon the basis of the same proportion of the net income for the taxable year (as finally determined for the purpose of income and excess profits taxes) as the part of the year already elapsed is of the entire year (determined in the manner provided in article 853), unless the corporation shows from its books or other records that a greater proportion of its earnings for the year was available on such date.

1228 (2) The aggregate amount available will be deemed to be applied for the following purposes in the order in which they are stated: (a) Accrued Federal income and war profits and excess profits taxes for the taxable year (see art. 845), and (b) dividends paid after the expiration of the first sixty days of the taxable year (see sec. 201 of the statute and art. 1541) and other corporate purposes, including the purchase of outstanding stock of the corporation previously issued (see art. 862). In any case where the above computation would be indeterminate because of the effect of the provisions of this article upon the invested capital for the year, the amount of such invested capital for the purpose of this computation may be deemed to be the invested capital as of the beginning of the taxable year, plus any additional capital paid in during such year and minus any specific withdrawal or liquidation of capital during such year.

1038 stock dividend affects the computation of invested capital from the date when the dividend is payable and not from the date when it is declared, except that where no date is set for its payment the date when declared will be considered also the date when payable for the purpose of this article. For the purpose of computing invested capital a dividend paid after the expiration of the first sixty days of the taxable year will be deemed to be paid out of the net income of the taxable year to the extent of the net income available for such purpose on the date when it is payable. (See art. 857.) The surplus and undivided profits as of the beginning of the taxable year will be reduced as of the date when the dividend is payable by the entire amount of any dividend paid during the first sixty days of the taxable year and by the amount of any other dividend in excess of the current net income available for its payment. In the case of a dividend paid during the first sixty days of a taxable year which exceeds in amount the surplus and undivided profits as of the beginning of the taxable year the excess will be deemed to be paid out of earnings of the taxable year available at the date when the dividend is payable, and to the extent that such earnings are insufficient it will be deemed to be a liquidation of paid-in capital or surplus. From the date when any dividend is payable the amount which the several stockholders are entitled to receive will be treated as if actually paid to them, whether or not it is so paid in fact, and the surplus and undivided profits, either of the taxable year or of the preceding years, will in accordance with the foregoing provisions be deemed to be reduced as of that date by the full amount of the dividend. Amounts paid to stockholders in anticipation of dividends, or amounts withdrawn by stockholders in excess of dividends declared, will in computing invested capital have the same effect as if actually paid as dividends. (See also art. 813, and see generally sec. 201 [¶1005] and arts. 1541-1549.)

1038 receipt of a true stock dividend has any effect upon the amount of invested capital. Such items as appraised value of good will, appreciation in value of real estate or other tangible property, etc., although carried to surplus and distributed as stock dividends, can not in this manner be capitalized and included in computing invested capital. If a corporation has paid a stock dividend in excess of its true surplus, it can not be deemed to have any greater invested capital than could have been computed had no such stock dividend been paid.

1231 Art. 860. Impairment of capital.—Capital or surplus actually paid 1036 in is not required to be reduced because of an operating deficit, but where there has been directly or indirectly a liquidation or return of their investment to the stockholders, full effect must be given to any liquidation of the original capital.

1232 Art. 861. Surrender of Stock.—Where stock which has originally 1036 been issued or exchanged by the corporation for property (tangible or intangible) is returned to the corporation as a gift or for a consideration substantially less than its par value, the stock so returned shall not be treated as a part of the stock issued or exchanged for such property. The proceeds derived in cash or its equivalent from the resale of the stock so returned shall, however, be included in computing invested capital. (See art. 543.)

1233 Art. 862. Purchase of stock.—Where a corporation either directly 1036 or indirectly, as for example through a trustee, has prior to the taxable year bought its own stock, either for the purpose of retirement or of holding it in the treasury or for other purposes, the entire cost of such stock must be deducted from the aggregate invested capital as of the beginning of the taxable year, if such deduction has not already been made. Where such stock is purchased during the taxable year a deduction from the invested capital as of the beginning of the taxable year and effective from the date of such purchase is required only to the extent that such stock has not been purchased out of the undivided profits of the taxable year. (See art. 857). The full amount derived in cash or its equivalent from the resale of such stock may be included in the invested capital from the date of such resale, unless such stock had been purchased out of earnings of the taxable year. (See art. 543.)

1234 Art. 863. Invested capital and other measures of capital.—(a) The 1035 invested capital as here defined may differ from the capital as shown on the books of the corporation. In such event no changes should be made in the books themselves. The corporation should, however, in all cases keep a permanent record of the adjustments which are made in computing invested capital. (b) Section 1000 [¶3100] of the statute imposes a tax on the fair value of the capital stock of corporations. As in the case of the excess profits tax the invested capital is based upon the actual investment of the stockholders in the corporation, irrespective of the present value of its assets, and in the case of the capital stock tax the fair value looks to the present value of the corporation's assets, irrespective of the amount of the investment of the stockholders therein, the amount determined as the fair value of the capital stock for the purpose of the capital stock tax can have no bearing upon the determination of invested capital. (See also art. 1561.)

1235 Art. 864. Affiliated corporations: invested capital.—The invested 1078 capital of affiliated corporations, as defined in section 240 (c) of the statute and article 633, for the taxable year is the invested capital of the entire group treated as one unit operated under a common control. As a first step in the computation a consolidated balance sheet should be prepared in accordance with standard accounting practices, which will reflect the actual assets and liabilities of the affiliated group. In preparing such a balance sheet all intercompany items, such as intercompany notes and accounts receivable and payable, should be eliminated from the assets and the liabilities, respectively, and proper adjustments should be made in respect of intercompany profits or losses reflected in inventories which at the beginning or end of the taxable year contain merchandise exchanged between the corporations included in the affiliated group at prices above or below cost to the producing or original owner corporation. Such consolidated balance sheet will then show (a) the capital stock of the parent or principal company in the hands of the public; (b) the consolidated surplus belonging to the stockholders of the parent or principal company; and (c) the capital stock, if any, of subsidiary companies of which substantially all the capital stock is not owned or controlled by the parent or principal company, together with the surplus, if any, belonging to such minority interest. In computing consolidated invested capital the starting point is furnished by the total of the amounts shown under (a), (b), and (c) above. This total must be increased or diminished by any adjustments required to be made under the provisions of sections 325, 326 and 331 of the statute and articles 811-818, 831-869, and 941 of the regulations, except as otherwise provided in articles 865-868.

1078 In respect of corporations whose affiliation is in the nature of parent and subsidiary companies: (a) In the case of intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares prior to March 3, 1917, there may be included in invested capital an amount not exceeding the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, or the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or in the aggregate 25 per cent of the par value of the total stock or shares of the consolidation outstanding on March 3, 1917 (determined as indicated in items (a) and (c) in art. 864), or in the aggregate 25 per cent of the par value of the total stock or shares shown on the consolidated balance sheet, being the amount of the capital stock included in items (a) and (c) in article 864 at the beginning of the taxable year, whichever is lowest; and (b) in the case of intangible property bona fide paid in for stock or shares on or after March 3, 1917, there may be included in invested capital an amount not exceeding the actual cash value of such property at the time paid in, or the par value of the stock or shares issued therefor, or in the aggregate 25 per cent of the par value of the total stock or shares shown by the consolidated balance sheet, being the amount of the capital stock included in items (a) and (c) in article 864 outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year, whichever is lowest. (c) When intangible property has been acquired in part before and in part after March 3, 1917, the amounts shall be ascertained, respectively, under (a) and (b) above and in the aggregate shall in no case exceed 25 per cent of the par value of the total stock or shares outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year shown in the consolidated balance sheet, being the amount of the capital stock included in items (a) and (c) in article 864.

1237 (2) In respect of corporations affiliated by reason of stock ownership or control by the same interests, the limitations set forth in paragraphs (4) and (5) of subdivision (a) of section 326 of the statute shall be applied to each corporation separately and the aggregate of the intangible property, so valued, shall be included in invested capital in the consolidated return. In respect of each of the affiliated corporations the aggregate of the amounts ascertained under the provisions of paragraphs (4) and (5) shall in no case exceed 25 per cent of the outstanding capital stock of such corporation at the beginning of the taxable year.

1238 Art. 866. Affiliated corporations: inadmissible assets.—Where adjust-

1078 ment is required in respect of inadmissible assets in accordance with the provisions of subdivision (c) of section 326 of the statute, such adjustment shall be made on the basis of the consolidated balance sheet with due regard to the adjustments and eliminations set forth in articles 864 and 865 and to the provisions of articles 815-818.

1239 Art. 867. Affiliated corporations: stock of subsidiary acquired for 1078 cash.—When all or substantially all of the stock of a subsidiary corporation was acquired for cash, the cash so paid shall be the basis to be used in determining the value of the property acquired.

WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.—1922-1923.

1240 Art. 868. Affiliated corporations: stock of subsidiary acquired for 1078 stock.—Where stock of a subsidiary company was acquired with the stock of the parent company, the amount to be included in the consolidated invested capital in respect of the company acquired shall be computed in the same manner as if the net tangible assets and the intangible assets had been acquired instead of the stock. If in accordance with such acquisition a paid-in surplus is claimed, such claim shall be subject to the provisions of article 837.

1241 Art. 869.* Insurance companies.—The reserve funds of insurance 1031 companies (other than life) the net additions to which are deductible
 1041 from gross income under the provisions of section 234 of the statute, may be included in computing invested capital. See secs. 325 and 326 and arts. 569 and 814.

**Was Art. 870 of Reg. 45. Therefore, for Supplementary Bulletin Rulings bearing on this Article, refer to Art. 870 in the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings.*

1242 Art. 870.* Foreign corporations.—Inasmuch as the excess profits tax 1044 in the case of a foreign corporation or of a corporation entitled to 1046 the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] is not based on the invested capital of the corporation, but is computed in accordance with section 328 of the statute, the provisions of section 326 and of articles 831-868 have no application to foreign corporations. For the same reason, when rendering a return of income on Form 1120 for a foreign corporation, no entry of invested capital should be made thereon. (See art. 962.)

SPECIAL CASES

1243 Art. 901. Treatment of special cases.—In the cases specified in section 1044 327 of the statute the tax will be specially determined under the provisions of section 328, but the tax will not ordinarily be computed under section 328 merely because the corporation's form or manner of organization, or the limitations imposed by section 326, result in a greater tax than would otherwise be payable. A corporation which comes within the provisions of subdivision (d) of section 327 may make application for assessment under the provisions of section 328, which application shall be attached to its return in the form of a statement setting forth in full: (a) The reasons why the tax should be so determined; (b) the facts upon which such reasons are based; (c) an exact description of each trade or business or important branch of a trade or business carried on by it; (d) a statement of the invested capital and net income for each year since the beginning of the prewar period; and (e) a statement showing the amount of gains, profits, commissions, or other income derived on a cost-plus basis from Government contracts made after April 5, 1917, and before November 12, 1918, and showing the per cent which such income is of the total income of the corporation. (See secs. 2 [¶1003] and 326 and arts. 831-870 and 1510.)

COMPUTATION OF TAX IN SPECIAL CASES

1244 Art. 911. Computation of tax in special cases.—In the cases specified

factorily determined under section 326 and which are engaged in a like or similar trade or business and similarly circumstanced. The provisions of section 328 do not permit the determination of a general average for any trade or business. In each case which comes under the provisions of section 327 the Commissioner will determine, as nearly as may be, the group or class of corporations with which the corporation should be compared and the amount which bears the same ratio to the net income of the corporation (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for the taxable year as the average tax of such representative corporations bears to their average net income (in excess of the specific exemption of $3,000) for such year. The comparison will take account of similarity with respect to character of business, size and condition of plant, gross income, net income, profit per unit of business transacted and capital employed, the amount and rate of war profits or excess profits, and all other relevant facts and circumstances.

1245 Art. 912. Determination of first installment of tax in special cases.—In the case of any corporation, other than a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083], where no data are available for the determination of invested capital for the taxable year, the installments of the tax shall in the first instance be determined upon the basis of an excess profits tax equal to 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $3,000, but not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $20,000. In any other case under section 328 of the statute, other than the case of a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083], but including a case where the invested capital for the taxable year can not be accurately determined, but where a minimum amount of invested capital can be determined with reasonable accuracy, the installments shall in the first instance be determined upon the basis of an excess profits tax computed by using the minimum invested capital, the tax in any such case not to exceed 20 per cent of the net income in excess of $3,000, but not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $20,000.

1246 Art. 913. Determination of first installment of tax in the case of foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262.—In the case of a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] the installments of the tax shall in the first instance be determined upon the basis of a war profits and excess profits tax computed by using its invested capital for the taxable year 1917, such tax for the calendar year 1921 not to exceed 20 per cent of the net income not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $20,000. For the purpose of this article the invested capital for 1917 shall be adjusted for any subsequent changes in its amount due to cash or property paid in or withdrawn or to surplus or undivided profits of prior years retained in the business and properly attributable to its business within the United States. If the tax for 1917 was determined under section 210 of the revenue act of 1917, the constructive capital which would result in a tax equivalent to the tax determined under that section shall be used. In the case of a foreign corporation or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262 [¶1083] which was organized subsequent to the taxable year 1917, or which had no income from sources within the United States during 1917, the installments of the tax shall in the first instance be determined upon the basis of an excess profits tax equal to 20 per cent of the net income not in excess of $20,000, plus 40 per cent of the net income in excess of $20,000.

1247 Art. 914. Payment of tax in special cases.—In any case falling under 1049 the last two articles the installments shall be paid upon the basis therein provided until the Commissioner notifies the corporation of the amount of tax computed under section 328. The installments shall then be recomputed upon the basis of an excess profits tax of such amount, and if the amount already paid is less than the amount which would have already become due if the installments had originally been computed upon that basis, the additional amount shall be due and payable ten days after notice and demand from the collector.

REORGANIZATIONS

1248 Art. 941. Valuation of asset upon change of ownership.—Where a 1053 business is reorganized, consolidated, or transferred, or property is transferred, after March 3, 1917, and an interest or control of 50 per cent or greater in such business or property remains in the same persons or any of them, then for the purpose of determining invested capital each asset so transferred is valued (a) at an amount representing its actual cash value, subject to the limitations imposed by section 326, but not exceeding its allowable value, for invested capital purposes, in the possession of the previous owner, if a corporation, or, if not a corporation (b) at its cost to such previous owner, with proper adjustments for losses and improvements.

FISCAL YEARS ENDING IN 1921 OR 1922

1249 Art. 951. Fiscal year with different rates.—Section 335 of the statute 1054 applies to the war profits and excess profits tax. For provisions with respect to the income tax see section 205 of the statute and articles 1621-1624. Subdivision (a), which deals with fiscal years beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921, and subdivision (b) which deals with fiscal years beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922, apply to corporations other than personal service corporations.

1250 Art. 952. Fiscal year of corporation ending in 1921.—The method 1054 provided for computing the tax for a fiscal year beginning in 1920 and ending in 1921 is as follows: (a) The tax attributable to the calendar year 1920 is found by computing the income of the taxpayer and the tax thereon in accordance with the revenue act of 1918 as if the fiscal year was the calendar year 1920, and determining the proportion of such tax which the number of months falling within the calendar year 1920 is of the number of months in the entire period; (b) the tax attributable to the calendar year 1921 is found by computing the income of the taxpayer and the tax thereon in accordance with the present statute as if the fiscal year was the calendar year 1921, and determining the proportion of such tax which the number of months falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the number of months in the entire period; and (c) the tax for the fiscal year is found by adding the tax attributable to the calendar year 1920 and the tax attributable to the calendar year 1921.

1251 Art. 953. Credits in the case of fiscal year ending in 1921.— 1054 Amounts previously paid by the taxpayer on account of the excess profits tax for its fiscal year ending in 1921 shall be credited towards the payment of the excess profits tax imposed for such fiscal year by the present statute. Any excess shall be credited or refunded in accordance with the provisions of section 252 of the statute. For credits for foreign taxes, see section 238 of the statute and article 611.

1252 Art. 954. Fiscal year of corporation ending in 1922.—The method provided for computing the tax for a fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ending in 1922 is as follows: The tax attributable to the calendar year 1921 is found by computing the income of the taxpayer and the tax thereon in accordance with the statute as if the fiscal year was the calendar year 1921, and determining the proportion of such tax which the number of months falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the number of months in the entire period. For credits for foreign taxes, see section 238 of the statute and article 611.

1253 Art. 955. Illustrations of computation of tax for fiscal year.—

1254 (1) The excess profits tax, computed under the revenue act of 1918 upon the basis of an invested capital of $100,000 and a net income of $74,000, is $23,400.

1255 (2) The excess profits tax computed under the revenue act of 1921, upon a basis of an invested capital of $100,000 and a net income of $68,000, is $21,000.

1256 (3) The total excess profits tax for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1921, will be the sum of (a) the proportion of the tax computed under the revenue act of 1918 which the portion of the fiscal year falling within the calendar year 1920 is of the entire period (i.e., nine-twelfths of the excess-profits tax, $23,400, computed under revenue act of 1918) or $17,550, and (b) the proportion of the tax computed under the revenue act of 1921 which the portion of the fiscal year falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period (i.e., three-twelfths of the excess profits tax, $21,000, computed under the revenue act of 1921) or $5,250. The total excess profits tax is $17,550 plus $5,250, or $22,800.

1257 (b) The excess profits tax for a fiscal year ending in 1922 will be an amount equivalent to the same proportion of a tax computed under this statute which the portion of such period falling within the calendar year 1921 is of the entire period. In the case of a corporation making its return on the basis of a fiscal year ending March 31, 1922, having an invested capital and net income of $100,000 and $68,000 respectively, the excess profits tax computed under the revenue act of 1921 will be $21,000. The tax applicable to the fiscal year ending March 31, 1922, is $15,750 (i.e., nine-twelfths of the excess profits tax, $21,000).

RETURNS

1258 Art. 961. Returns.—Every corporation, except life insurance com-1056 panies, domestic or foreign, not exempt under section 304 of the statute and article 751, shall make a return for the purpose of excess profits tax on form 1120. The return shall be made and the tax shall be paid as provided in the case of a return for and payment of the income tax by corporations. See generally Parts II A and III of the regulations and particularly sections 239, 240, 241, 250, and 253 of the statute and the articles thereunder.

1259 Art. 962. Returns in special cases.—Where a corporation coming 1014 under the provisions of section 301 (b) of the statute computes 1049 its war profits credit upon the basis of the sum of (a) the specific exemption and (b) an amount equal to 10 per cent of the invested capital for the taxable year, the items on form 1120 which relate solely to the net income or to the invested capital for the prewar period need not be filled in. Where such a corporation enters on its return a war profits and excess profits tax equal to the amount of the maximum tax determined under section 302 of the statute, the items on form 1120 which relate solely to the net income for the prewar period and the items which relate to the invested capital for the prewar period and for the taxable year need not be filled in. Likewise in the case of a foreign corporation, or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, the same items may be disregarded, except that balance sheets as of the beginning and the end of the taxable year for the entire business of the corporation both within and without the United States shall be submitted. See article 870. The Commissioner may at any time specifically call for all or any part of the information which under this article is not required to be entered on the return. In any case, however, where a claim is made under sections 327 and 328 of the statute, other than in the case of a foreign corporation, or a corporation entitled to the benefits of section 262, the corporation should fill out all items of the return so far as possible and submit a statement explaining why it is impracticable to fill out the entire return.

SALE OF MINERAL DEPOSITS

1260 Art. 971. Tax on sale of mineral deposits.—In the case of a sale of 1057 mines, oil or gas wells, or any interest therein, as described in article 13, the portion of the war profits and excess profits tax attributable to such a sale shall not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price. To determine the application of this provision to a particular case the corporation should compute the war profits and excess profits tax in the ordinary way upon its net income, including its net income from any such sale. The proportion of the total tax indicated by the ratio which the taxpayer's net income from the sale of the property, computed as prescribed in article 714, bears to its total net income is the portion of the tax attributable to such sale, and if it exceeds 20 per cent of the selling price of the property such portion of the tax shall be reduced to that amount. (See arts. 219-221.)

1261 Art. 972. Illustration of computation of tax where sale of mineral 1057 deposits.—In the case of the corporation used as an illustration in article 715, let it be assumed that its gross income for 1921 included $15,000 derived from a bona fide sale of an oil well, the principal value of which had been demonstrated by exploration and discovery work done by the corporation, and that the Commissioner finds under article 714 that only $800 of the deductions allowed are properly applicable to the gross income derived from the sale. The portion of the net income attributable to the sale would be $14,200, which is 35.5 per cent of the entire net income of $40,000, and the portion of the tax for that year attributable to the sale will be 35.5 per cent of the entire tax of $9,240, or $3,280.20. But this portion of the tax can not exceed 20 per cent of the selling price ($15,000) and is accordingly reduced to $3,000. The total tax will be $5,959.80 (the portion of the tax not affected) plus $3,000, or $8,959.80 (instead of $9,240).

EFFECTIVE DATE OF TITLE

- 1262 Art. 980. Effective dates.—This title takes effect as of January 1, 1058 1921. It imposes no tax for any period prior to that date or subsequent to December 31, 1921.

CONSOLIDATED RETURNS FOR YEAR 1917

- 1263 Art. 1735. Consolidated returns for year 1917.—Section 1331 applies 1079 only to the tax [war-profits and excess profits taxes] levied by the Revenue Act of 1917. See Regulations 41.

757 ulations 62, amended.—Article 836, Regulations 45, (1920 edition)
1192 and Article 836, Regulations 62, are hereby amended to read as follows:

Article 836. Tangible property paid in; value in excess of par value of stock.—The paid-in surplus allowed in any case is confined to the value definitely known or accurately ascertainable at the time the property is paid in. Evidence offered to support a claim for a paid-in surplus must be as of the date of the payment. It may consist among other things of (a) an appraisal of the property by disinterested authorities; (b) a certificate of the assessed value in the case of real estate, or (c) evidence of a market price in excess of the par value of the stock or shares. Opinion evidence, expert or otherwise, of the value of property as of a prior date will not be accepted. Retrospective appraisals submitted in support of a claim for a paid-in surplus will not be accepted in any case where other reasonably satisfactory evidence is available and in any case will be accepted only after rigid scrutiny and will be followed only to the extent to which their reasonableness is fully established. The property which was paid in is the basis of the appraisal, and the appraisal must reconcile the accounts so as to reflect accurately the actual value on the date as of which the appraisal is made and the depreciation sustained. Proper consideration must in all cases be given to depreciation and the expired and remaining serviceable life of the property must be shown. To be acceptable retrospective appraisal must show: (1) the history of the business and manner in which the information or data was acquired; (2) the manner in which the appraisals were constructed; (3) the inventory on the date of the appraisal in detail; (4) the date of acquisition of all items remaining in the inventory as of the date of appraisal; (5) the elimination from the inventory of all items acquired subsequent to the date as of which the appraisal is made and how this was effected (all items, the date of acquisition of which can not be definitely determined, should be listed separately and all the facts bearing upon the date of acquisition given); (6) the replacement cost at the date as of which the appraisal is made of each item accepted as on hand on that date determined upon competent data, with a statement of the method employed in arriving at such cost (estimate and general statements will not be accepted); (7) the rate and total amount of depreciation as shown by the books; (8) the rate and total amount of depreciation taken upon each item included in the appraisal for the purposes of the appraisal (if other than normal rates of depreciation are used the reason therefor and the method of computing depreciation must be fully explained); (9) the actual cost when ascertainable of each item included in the appraisal; (10) the book value on the date as of which the appraisal is made of all the items included in the appraisal, and (11) a detailed statement of all plant facilities and additions, represented by capital expenditures previously written off, which were still in use on the date as of which the appraisal was made and all the depreciation actually sustained or accrued on such items. No claim will be allowed for paid-in surplus in any case in which the addition of value has been developed or ascertained subsequent to the date on which the property was paid in to the corporation, or in respect of property which the stockholders or their agents on or shortly before the date of such payment acquired at a bargain price, as for instance, at a receiver's sale. Generally, allowable claims under this article will arise out of transactions in which there has been no substantial change of beneficial interest in the property paid in to the corporation and in all cases the proof of value must be clear and explicit. (T. D. 3367, July 10, 1922.)

[Comment: All in amended Article 836, as printed above, relating to retrospective appraisals is new. Otherwise no change in effect except that the word "evidence" in (c) in the third sentence was formerly "proof."—The Corporation Trust Company.]

1266 Allocations of tax: Partnerships and corporations in consolidated cases. (1917-1921 Acts.)—An opinion is requested in the consolidated case of the M Company, wherein corporations and partnerships are consolidated, as to the proper basis of allocating the tax between the units of the consolidation.

1267 No opinion is requested as to whether or not the corporations are properly consolidated and no opinion is expressed upon this question.

1268 In the request attention is called to article 78, Regulations 41, on the subject of allocating the excess profits taxes in consolidated cases involving corporations, and objections are pointed out to allowing taxpayers the option to allocate the excess profits taxes to partnerships in cases where both corporations and partnerships are consolidated. Article 78, Regulations 41, reads as follows:

When affiliated corporations may be required to make consolidated returns.—Whenever necessary to more equitably determine the invested capital or taxable income, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may require corporations classed as affiliated under article 77 to furnish a consolidated return of net income and invested capital. Where such consolidated return is required it may be made by any one or more of such corporations or by all of them acting jointly; but if such affiliated corporations, when requested to file such consolidated return, neglect or refuse to do so, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may cause an examination of the books of all such corporations to be made and a consolidated statement to be made for such examination. In cases where consolidated returns are accepted, the total tax will be computed in the first instance as a unit upon the basis of the consolidated return and will be assessed upon the respective affiliated corporations in such proportions as may be agreed among them. If no such agreement is made the tax will be assessed upon each such corporation in accordance with the net income and invested capital properly assignable to it.

1269 It is clear that the above-quoted article applies only to cases where corporations are consolidated, and not to cases where corporations and partnerships are consolidated.

1270 Consolidated returns are required because otherwise opportunity would be afforded affiliated corporations and partnerships to evade taxes by the shifting of income through price fixing, charges for service, and other means by which income can be arbitrarily assigned to one or another unit of the group. The reason for permitting the taxpayer in consolidated cases an option as to the allocation of the excess profits tax as between corporations is that all corporations pay the same rate of income tax and the allocation of the excess profits tax as between corporations would make no difference in the total income and excess profits taxes received by the Government. This reason, however, does not apply where partnerships are included in the consolidation with corporations, because the individual members of partnerships do not pay their income tax at the same rate as corporations. To allow the taxpayer to allocate the excess profits tax in cases where corporations and partnerships are consolidated might therefore result in defeating one of the purposes for requiring consolidated returns in affiliated cases. While individual members of the partnerships pay income taxes at different rates than corporations, all individual members of the partnerships pay income taxes at the same rate. It appears, therefore, that there would be no objection to allowing the taxpayers the option to allocate to the partnership units the excess profits tax properly assignable to the partnership group.

1271 In the request attention is called to the difficulties of applying the last sentence of article 78 to consolidated cases where several units of the consolidation have losses and where there is doubt as to the invested capital properly assignable to each unit. These difficulties as to the practical application of the article are recognized in such cases where it is sought to allocate the tax according to the invested capital and net income of each unit of the consolidation, but it is believed that it will be found that these difficulties disappear within the groups if the corporations are treated as one group and the partnerships as another. While the units of the two groups (units of the partnership group here mean the individual partners) will pay their income taxes at different rates, the units of the same group will pay their income taxes at the same rates, and if the excess profits tax is allocated to each group, according to the invested capital and net income assignable to the group, all difficulties disappear and the tax is equitably allocated.

1272 It is held, therefore, that where corporations and partnerships are consolidated the excess profits tax should be allocated to the partnerships as a group according to the invested capital and net income assignable to the partnership group. After the proper amount of the excess profits tax has been allocated to the partnership group, article 78 may then be applied within the partnership group as it is now applied within the corporation group. (Law Opinion 1085, signed by Solicitor of Internal Revenue Carl A. Mapes, and issued January 16, 1922.)

1273 Consolidated Returns for Year 1917.—The Committee has carefully 1079 considered the appeal of the M Company from the action of the 1263 Income Tax Unit in requiring consolidated returns from the appellant company and the O Company for the years 1917, 1918, and 1919.

The relevant facts indicate that the M Company was organized for the purpose of engaging in the real estate brokerage business; that its income is derived solely from commissions earned from the sales and rental of real estate, from placing insurance, and from activities of a similar nature; that the O Company was organized by A for the purpose of holding such parcels of real estate as he might from time to time acquire. During the year 1917 the O Company made no purchases or sales of any property, and its income consisted of rents received from houses owned. Since the organization of the two corporations the only intercompany transactions which have occurred are two loans of  $x$  dollars each; in each instance, however, interest was charged at a commercial and legal rate of 6 per cent. During 1917 A owned 100 per cent of the capital stock of the O Company and 86 per cent of the stock of the M Company; A's wife owned 4 per cent of the stock of the M Company; and the remaining 10 per cent of the stock of that corporation was owned by the secretary of the corporation, who also acted as secretary of the O Company.

In considering the point at issue so far as concerns the taxable year 1917, the Committee has referred to articles 77 and 78 of Regulations 41 issued under the Revenue Act of 1917 and the provisions of T. D. 2662. Consideration has also been given to section 1331 of the Revenue Act of 1921, which treats of the conditions and requirements for the filing of consolidated returns for the taxable year 1917.

Section 1331, Revenue Act of 1921, provides [¶1079 herein].

A careful analysis of the provisions of the above-quoted section when considered in connection with the facts and conditions obtaining in this case leads the Committee to the conclusion that the M Company and the O Company were not affiliated or interrelated to the extent of requiring a consolidated return for the taxable year 1917.

However, consideration of this matter for the years 1918 and 1919 presents a different situation and requires a determination under the provisions of section 240, Revenue Act of 1918, as amplified by article 631 of Regulations 45. Section 240, Revenue Act of 1918, provides as follows:

- (a) That corporations which are affiliated within the meaning of this section shall * * * make a consolidated return of net income and invested capital * * *
 (b) For the purpose of this section two or more domestic corporations shall be deemed to be affiliated (1) if one corporation owns directly or controls through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees substantially all the stock of the other or others, or (2) if substantially all of the stock of two or more corporations is owned or controlled by the same interests.

This section provides that corporations are affiliated when substantially all of the stock is merely controlled by the same interest. It also omits the three limiting provisions of section 1331, Revenue Act of 1921, which apply to returns for the taxable year 1917. While it is true that the requirement of consolidated returns is based upon the principle of levying the tax according to the true net income and invested capital of a single business enterprise, even though the business is operated through more than one corporation, section 240 specifically defines affiliated corporations and provides that such corporations shall file consolidated returns. It necessarily follows that whether the corporations in the instant case should file consolidated returns for 1918 and 1919 depends wholly on the question as to whether or not substantially all of their stock was owned or controlled by the same interests during these years. The foregoing statement of facts indicates that the sole stockholder of the O Company owned 86 per cent of the stock of the M Company and that 10 per cent of the stock of the latter company was owned by the secretary of the O Company.

Upon such facts the Committee is brought to the conclusion that such stock ownership constitutes control within the meaning of section 240 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and, accordingly, that these corporations were affiliated to the extent of requiring consolidated returns for the years 1918 and 1919.

The Committee therefore recommends in the appeal of the M Company that consolidated returns should be required for the years 1918 and 1919 in accordance with the requirements of section 240, Revenue Act of 1918, and that such returns should not be required for 1917 under the provisions of articles 77 and 78 of Regulations 41, issued under the Revenue Act of 1917, and section 1331, Revenue Act of 1921. ## WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.—1922-1923.

1274 Consolidated returns for year 1917.—The Committee has had under 1079 consideration the appeal of the M Company, the O Company, and 1263 P Company from the ruling of the Income Tax Unit that these companies were affiliated and must file consolidated returns of net income for the years 1917, 1918, and 1919.

1275 The O Company and the P Company were old established businesses even prior to 1913, and on January 1, 1917, the capital stock outstanding was held as follows:

	O Company	P Company
	Per cent.	Per cent.
A.....	35.0	50
B.....	15.0	None
C.....	.2	25
D.....	49.8	25

B is the wife of A; D is the wife of C, and the sister of A.

In a sworn statement of facts filed with the case it is stated:

In the years prior to 1917, C had made numerous attempts to acquire a more substantial holding in the O Company, but none of the stockholders in the O Company would part with any of their stock. Early in 1917, C succeeded in getting the stockholders of the O Company to agree to sell certain of the assets of the O Company to a new corporation, the M Company, with a capital of  $x$  dollars, in which company he was to have 10 per cent of the stock with the understanding that if the new corporation subsequently increased its capital stock, as was then contemplated, he was to have the privilege of increasing his holdings. At the date of the incorporation of said company, A acquired  $49\frac{9}{10}$  per cent of the stock; B acquired  $1/10$  per cent, and D acquired 40 per cent of the stock. On January 2, 1918, the capital stock was increased to  $1.3x$  dollars, after which increase, C owned 15 per cent of the stock; D owned 35 per cent of the stock; the other holdings remaining approximately the same. On August 1, 1918, the capital stock was further increased, after which increase C owned 22 per cent of the stock, D owned 28 per cent of the stock, the other holdings remaining approximately the same. It will be noted that the stockholdings in the M Company were in different proportions than the stockholdings in either of the other two corporations.

1276 The record shows that the O Company and the P Company ceased active operations on August —, 1917, when the M Company was organized and commenced operations. The appellants state that it was the intention to liquidate the two companies first named as soon as possible, but this was not finally accomplished until April, 1919, the reason for the delay being that the stockholders could not agree on the value of the good will of the old companies, on account of the fact that the four individual stockholders owned different amounts of stock in each of these companies and their individual interests were affected differently in each company; that it was not until the full effect of the Food Administration rules upon the business could be determined that it was possible for the conflicting interests to reach an agreement as to the value of this good will, and that, pending final settlement, a temporary arrangement was entered into through which the new company paid to the old companies certain royalties per unit of output. It is further stated that in the early part of 1919, after the suspension of control by the Food Administration, it was apparent that the good will of the old companies had practically been destroyed and that the future of the new company must be based primarily on its own efforts and ability to stay in the business. Proper action was then taken to liquidate the affairs of the old companies, which were finally dissolved in April, 1919.

1277 From the above it is apparent that at all times A and his wife and C and his wife together owned exactly 50 per cent of the stock in each of the three corporations and the Unit has held that, as the interests of husband and wife are identical, the capital stock of the three companies was held by the same interests in the same proportion and that consolidated returns must be filed. It is from this ruling that the companies have appealed, on the ground that the interests of husband and wife are separate and distinct; that no partnership existed between husband and wife as to property ownership and that because of the wide disparity of stockholdings of the individuals in each of the three corporations, consolidated returns should not be required.

1278 Under the old common-law rules it appears that a husband and wife were considered as one and the same, but within the past few years the rights and liabilities of husband and wife have undergone vast changes, particularly in some States. This has been brought about partly by the courts and partly by the State legislatures, the general effect of which has been to secure to the wife the right of independent control of her own property and the right to contract, sue, and be sued without her husband, under certain restrictions.

1279 The Committee has examined the statutes of the State of Wisconsin, where the corporations in question and all of the individual stockholders are domiciled.

1280 Section 2340 of the statutes provides:

The real estate of every description, including all held in joint tenancy with her husband, and the rents, issues and profits thereof of any female now married shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband, but shall be her sole and separate property as if she were unmarried.

1281 Section 2341 of the statutes provides:

The real and personal property of any female who may hereafter marry and which she shall own at the time of marriage and the rents, issues and profits thereof shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband nor be liable for his debts and shall continue her sole and separate property.

1282 Section 2342 of the statutes provides:

Any married female may receive by inheritance or by gift, grant, devise or bequest from any person, hold to her sole and separate use, convey and devise real and personal property and any interest or estate therein of any description, including all held in joint tenancy with her husband, and the rents, issues and profits thereof in the same manner and with like effect as if she were unmarried, and the same shall not be subject to the disposal of her husband nor be liable for his debts. Any conveyance, transfer or lien executed by either husband or wife to or in favor of the other shall be valid to the same extent as between other persons.

1283 Section 2343 of the statutes provides:

The individual earnings of every married woman, except those accruing from labor performed for her husband, or in his employ or payable by him, shall be her separate property and shall not be subject to her husband's control or liable for his debts.

1284 Section 2345 of the statutes provides that a married woman may sue in her own name, and shall have all the remedies of an unmarried woman in regard to her separate property or business, and to recover her earnings, and shall be liable to be sued in respect to her separate property or business, and judgments may be rendered against her and be enforced against her and her separate property in all respects as if she were unmarried.

1285 Section 2346 of the statutes provides that a husband is not liable for the individual debts of his wife, but that she is liable therefor, as if she were unmarried.

1286 A careful study of the facts in this case convinces the Committee of the clear independence of action of the four stockholders in these companies in acquiring and disposing of their stock and it seems equally clear that the State statutes gave to them the right to such independence. The absence of any ulterior motive on the part of the stockholders has also been fully established.

1287 The Committee, therefore, is of the opinion that because of the disparity of stockholdings of the stockholders in these three corporations the Bureau would be unable to compel the corporations to pay a tax based upon a consolidated return of net income unless the corporations voluntarily paid such tax, and that, therefore, consolidated returns in this case should neither be required nor permitted.

1288 It is therefore recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, the O Company, and the P Company, that the ruling of the Income Tax Unit that these companies were affiliated and should file consolidated returns for the years 1917, 1918, and 1919, be reversed, and, accordingly, that the appeal be sustained. 1289 [1917 Act.] Articles 77 and 78, Regulations 41, amended, Treasury 1079 Decision 2662, as amended by T. D. 2901, superseded.—Treasury 1263 Decision 2662, as amended by Treasury Decision 2901, is hereby superseded and Articles 77 and 78, of Regulations 41, are hereby amended to read as follows:

1290 Art. 77. When affiliated corporations or partnerships must furnish information as to intercompany relations.—For the purpose of the excess profits tax, every corporation or partnership will describe in its return all its intercompany relationships with other corporations and partnerships with which it is affiliated, and will furnish such information in relation thereto as will enable the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to compute the amount of the tax properly due from each corporation or partnership on the basis of an equitable and lawful accounting.

1291 For the purpose of this Regulation a corporation or partnership is affiliated with one or more corporations or partnerships (1) when such corporation or partnership owns directly or controls through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees all or substantially all of the stock of the other or others, or (2) when substantially all of the stock of two or more corporations or the business of two or more partnerships is owned by the same interests and in both (1) and (2) it is found that (a) such corporations or partnerships are engaged in the same or a closely related business, or (b) one corporation or partnership buys from or sells to another corporation or partnership products or services at prices above or below the current market, thus effecting an artificial distribution of profits, or (c) one corporation or partnership in any way so arranges its financial relationships with another corporation or partnership as to assign to it a disproportionate share of net income or invested capital.

1292 The owning or controlling of 95 per cent or more of the outstanding voting capital stock (not including stock in the treasury) at the beginning of and during the taxable year will be deemed to constitute an affiliation within the meaning of the statute, provided the corporations or partnerships were engaged in the same or a closely related business or there were such inter-company transactions as are specified in clauses (b) and (c) in the preceding paragraph.

1293 Art. 78. Consolidated returns.—A consolidated return shall be filed by the parent or principal corporation or partnership in the office of the collector of the district in which it has its principal place of business or principal office. Each of the other affiliated corporations or partnerships shall file in the office of the collector of its respective district a return, entering thereon its name and address and replying to the questions in Schedule I, and to questions 1, 2, 3, 4 and 11 on page 4 of Form 1103; and stating also (1) that the corporation or partnership is affiliated with a designated parent or principal corporation or partnership, (2) that its return is included in the consolidated return of such parent or principal corporation or partnership, and (3) the district in which the consolidated return is filed. When corporations or partnerships required to file such consolidated return, neglect or refuse to do so, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may cause an examination of the books of all such corporations or partnerships to be made and a consolidated statement to be made from such examination. In cases where consolidated returns are accepted, the total tax will be computed in the first instance as a unit upon the basis of the consolidated return and will be assessed upon the respective affiliated corporations and upon the partnerships in such proportions as may be agreed among them. If no such agreement is made, the tax will be assessed upon each such corporation and partnership in accordance with the net income and invested capital properly assignable to it.

1294 When all, or substantially all of the stock of a subsidiary corporation was acquired for cash, the cash so paid shall be the basis to be used in determining the value of the property acquired. Where stock of a subsidiary company was acquired with the stock of the parent company, the amount to be included in the consolidated invested capital in respect of the company acquired shall be computed in the same manner as if the net tangible assets and the intangible assets have been acquired instead of the stock. If in accordance with such acquisition, a paid-in surplus is claimed, such claim shall be subject to the provisions of Articles 55 and 63 of Regulations 41.

1296 Railroads, gas, electric, water and other public service corporations when (a) operated independently and (b) not physically connected or merged—particularly when situated in different jurisdictions and subject to regulation by public service commissions—will not be required or permitted, without special permission obtained in advance, to make a consolidated return. When, however, a railroad or other public utility is owned by an industrial corporation and is operated as a plant facility or as an integral part of a group organization of affiliated corporations, and such affiliated corporations are required to file a consolidated return, the return of such railroad or other public utility shall be included therein. (T. D. 3389, August 24, 1922.)

T. D. 2662 (March 6, 1918) as amended by T. D. 2901 (July 29, 1919)

Pursuant to article 78 of regulations 41 relative to war excess-profits tax, affiliated corporations as limited and defined in paragraphs C and D below are hereby directed to make consolidated returns for the purpose of excess-profits tax. Affiliated corporations other than those falling within the provisions of paragraphs C and D may make a consolidated return only after having secured permission in writing from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Affiliated corporations are defined in article 77 of the regulations as follows:

For the purpose of this regulation two or more corporations will be deemed to be affiliated (1) when one such corporation owns directly or controls through closely affiliated interests or by a nominee or nominees, all or substantially all of the stock of the other or others, or when substantially all of the stock of two or more corporations is owned by the same individual or partnership, and both or all of such corporations are engaged in the same or a closely related business; or (2) when one such corporation (a) buys from or sells to another products or services at prices above or below the current market, thus effecting an artificial distribution of profits, or (b) in any way so arranges its financial relationships with another corporation as to assign to it a disproportionate share of net income or invested capital.

A. Two or more corporations are not "affiliated" merely because all or substantially all of the stock therein is owned by the same corporation, individual, or partnership; they must also be engaged in the same or a closely related business.

B. For purposes of regulation by public service commissions or similar authorities, the identity of public service corporations, when not grouped into one operating unit, must be maintained even though they are owned by the same corporation or taxpayer, and under such regulation the accounts of such public service corporations are deemed to reflect the true invested capital and income of each operating unit. Accordingly railroads, gas, electric, water and other public service corporations when operated independently and not physically connected or merged—particularly when situated in different jurisdictions and subject to regulation by public service commissions—will not be required or permitted without special permission obtained in advance to make a consolidated return. When, however, a railroad or other public utility is owned by an industrial corporation and is operated as a plant facility or as an integral part of a group organization of affiliated corporations, and such affiliated corporations are required to file a consolidated return, the return of such railroad or other public utility shall be included therein.

C. The words "all or substantially all of the stock" as used in the above definition (Art. 77) will, until further notice, be interpreted as meaning an ownership of 95 per cent or more of such stock by the same taxpayer during the taxable year.

D. In case of affiliated corporations among which there exist contracts or trade or financial practices which arbitrarily or artificially influence or determine the amount of the invested capital or net income of one or more of the corporations so affiliated and where 95 per cent or more of the stock of the subsidiary corporations is owned by a parent or controlling corporation or by an individual or partnership, a consolidated return will be required.

E. A consolidated return shall be filed by the parent or principal corporation in the office of the collector of the district in which it has its principal office. Each of the other affiliated corporations shall file in the office of the collector of its respective district a return, entering thereon its name and address and replying to the questions in Schedule I, and to questions 1, 2, 3, 4, and 11 on page 4 of Form 1103; and stating also (1) that the corporation is affiliated with a designated parent or principal corporation, (2) that its return is included in the consolidated return of such parent or principal corporation, and (3) the district in which the consolidated return is filed.

F. When all, or substantially all, of the stock of a subsidiary corporation was acquired for cash, the cash so paid shall be the basis to be used in determining the value of the property acquired. Where stock of a subsidiary company was acquired with the stock of the parent company, the amount to be included in the consolidated invested capital in respect of the company acquired shall be computed in the same manner as if the net tangible assets and the intangible assets had been acquired instead of the stock. If in accordance with such acquisition a paid in surplus is claimed, such claim shall be subject to the provisions of Articles 55 and 63 of Regulations 41.

G. Affiliated corporations filing a consolidated return shall include in such return (1) a specific statement of the number or proportion of the shares in the affiliated corporations held by the parent or controlling corporation during the taxable year, and (2) a schedule showing the proportionate amount of the total tax which it is agreed among them is to be assessed upon each affiliated corporation.

H. If the Commissioner of Internal Revenue upon examination of any consolidated return finds that the tax can not in his judgment be properly assessed upon the basis of such return, the affiliated corporations covered by such consolidated return shall, upon notice from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, file separate returns.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Greenport Basin and Construction Company, Plaintiff in Error, }
 The United States. } In Error to and Appeal from the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of New York.

[January 2, 1923.]

Mr. Justice BRANDEIS delivered the opinion of the Court.

1297 The Greenport Company had, in 1917, an invested capital of $215,615.55. Its net income was $76,361.20 in the taxable year ending October 31, 1917. Its pre-war annual net income, calculated on a 7 per cent. basis was $15,093.08; and the fixed statutory deduction $3,000. The company was thus subject (for five-sixth of the year) to the excess profits tax imposed by the Revenue Act of October 3, 1917, c. 63, sections 201, 203; 40 Stat. 300, 303, 304.<sup>1</sup> The Government, following Treasury Regulation No. 41, Articles 16, 17, and form 1103, assessed the tax at $16,837.76. The company insisted that the correct amount was $12,417.36; paid the tax as assessed, under protest; and brought this suit for the difference, $4,420.40, in the federal court for the Eastern District of New York, under the Tucker Act. (Judicial Code, Sec. 24, Par. 20.) That court sustained a demurrer to the petition and entered judgment for defendant. 269 Fed. 58. The case is brought here by both writ of error and appeal. It is properly here on writ of error, Chase v. United States, 155 U. S. 489; J. Homer Frich, Inc. v. United States, 248 U. S. 458. The sole question presented for decision is whether the method of calculating the taxes adopted by the Treasury is in harmony with the provisions of the Revenue Act.

1298 The rate of exaction imposed by the excess profits tax grows, in stages, with the increase in the percentage earned on the capital. In the first stage—net income up to 15 per cent. on capital—the rate of exaction is four-twentieth. In the second stage—net income from 15 to 20 per cent.—the rate is five-twentieth. In the third stage—net income from "Twenty per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of the deduction (determined as hereinafter provided) and not in excess of fifteen per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year;

"Twenty-five per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of fifteen per centum and not in excess of twenty per centum of such capital;

"Thirty-five per centum of the amount of the net income in excess of twenty per centum and not in excess of twenty-five per centum of such capital;

Section 203: "That for the purposes of this title the deduction shall be as follows, except as otherwise in this title provided:

"(a) In the case of a domestic corporation, the sum of (1) an amount equal to the same percentage of the invested capital for the taxable year which the average amount of the annual net income of the trade or business during the prewar period was of the invested capital for the prewar period (but not less than seven or more than nine per centum of the invested capital for the taxable year), and (2) $3,000."

20 to 25 per cent.—the rate is seven-twentieth. In the fourth stage—net income from 25 to 33 per cent.—the rate is nine-twentieth. In the last stage—net income over 33 per cent.—the rate is twelve-twentieth. What the net income is to which the respective rates of exaction apply is the question for decision. The company contends, in effect, that net income as used concerning each stage, means not the whole net income—but the balance remaining after deducting from the net income the allowance for prewar profits and the fixed deduction. Under this contention the base to which the exactions should be applied would be, not $76,261.20, but that sum less $18,093.08, or $58,268.12. The Government insists that the exaction should be applied to the whole net income, except that from the exaction prescribed for the first stage the allowances specifically provided for are to be deducted.<sup>2</sup> The differences in detail resulting from the two methods of calculation are shown in the margin.<sup>3</sup>

1299 The method of calculation adopted by the Treasury follows the clear language of the act; and its correctness is confirmed by the statement, and the illustrative tables, presented by the chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in submitting the Conference Report on the bill. Cong. Record, 65th Congress, 1st Session, Part 7, pp. 7580-7593. As the language of the act is clear, there is no room for the argument of plaintiff drawn from other revenue measures. Nor is there anything in La Belle Iron Works v. United States, 256 U. S. 377, 383-388 [¶889, herein], which lends support to plaintiff's contention.

Affirmed.

<sup>2</sup>Treasury Regulation No. 41, Article 17, provided that if the deduction exceeded 15% of the invested capital the amount in excess should be applied to the next succeeding tax bracket and so on until the deduction should be absorbed. <sup>3</sup>Methods of Computation.

I. GOVERNMENT'S METHOD.

First, apportion the net income into the tax brackets:

Percentages of invested capital	Amount
(1) 0 to 15%	$32,342.33
(2) 15% to 20%	10,780.77
(3) 20% to 25%	10,780.77
(4) 25% to 33%	17,249.24
(5) Above 33%	5,208.09

Total net income..... $76,361.20

Second, apply the deduction to the first tax bracket:

(1) $32,342.33 minus $18,093.08 leaves $14,249.25.

Third, compute the tax:

(1) $14,249.25 at 20%	$2,849.85
(2) $10,780.77 at 25%	2,695.19
(3) $10,780.77 at 35%	3,773.27
(4) $17,249.24 at 45%	7,762.15
(5) $ 5,208.09 at 60%	3,124.85

$58,268.12 Total tax.... $20,205.31

Pro rate (5/6)..... $16,837.76

II. PLAINTIFF'S METHOD

First, apply the deduction:

$76,361.20 minus $18,093.08 leaves $58,268.12 as taxable income

Second, apportion the taxable income into the tax brackets:

Percentages of net income as portion of invested capital	Amount
(1) 0 to 15%	$32,342.33
(2) 15% to 20%	10,780.77
(3) 20% to 25%	10,780.77
(4) 25% to 33%	4,364.25
(5) Above 33%	none

Total taxable income..... $58,268.12

Third, compute the tax:

(1) $32,342.33 at 20%	$6,468.47
(2) $10,780.77 at 25%	2,695.19
(3) $10,780.77 at 35%	3,773.27
(4) $ 4,364.25 at 45%	1,963.91
(5) none at 60%	none

$58,268.12 Total tax..... $14,900.84

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT.

LINCOLN CHEMICAL COMPANY, Plaintiff-in-Error (Plaintiff below), against

WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, as Collector of Internal Revenue of the United States for the Second District of New York, Defendant-in-Error

ROGERS, MANTON AND MAYER, Circuit Judges.

ROBERT B. HONEYMAN, For Plaintiff.

WILLIAM HAYWARD, United States Attorney, For Defendant,

RICHARD S. HOLMES, Special Assistant U. S. Attorney,

H. M. DARLING, Special Attorney, Bureau of Internal Revenue, Of Counsel.

This cause comes here on writ of error to the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York.

1300 ROGERS, Circuit Judge.—This action was brought by a New York corporation against the Collector of Internal Revenue in the Second District of New York to recover the sum of $6,434.35 additional income and excess profits tax assessed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1917, which was paid under protest on April 9, 1919. It is alleged that the payment was made under compulsion and in order to avoid the restraint and sale of plaintiff's property and other legal proceedings. And it appears that on May 2, 1919, the plaintiff filed a claim for refund, and that although six months had elapsed since the filing of the claim for a refund no action had been taken by the Commissioner.

1301 The case was tried before a jury of one. At the conclusion of the testimony each side moved for a direction of a verdict. The court, after taking time for deliberation, filed an opinion stating that the plaintiff had not proved its case and directed a verdict for the defendant, dismissing the complaint upon the merits. [272 Fed. 142.—¶926 herein.]

1302 The plaintiff, in filing its return for 1917, calculated its capital upon the basis of Section 209 of the Act of October 3, 1917. That Section provides as follows:

"That in the case of a trade or business having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital there shall be levied, assessed, collected and paid, in addition to the taxes under existing law and under this Act, in lieu of the tax imposed by section two hundred and one, a tax equivalent to eight per centum of the net income of such trade or business in excess of the following deductions: In the case of a domestic corporation $3,000, and in the case of a domestic partnership or a citizen or resident of the United States $6,000; in the case of all other trades or business, no deduction." (U. S. St. at L. vol. 40, Part 1 p. 307.)

1303 That section applies to a trade or business "having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital." If the plaintiff in 1917 had no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital its income tax return plainly was to be assessed, as the plaintiff claims, in accordance with Section 209.

1304 The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, however, denied the claim that the assessment could be made under Section 209, and imposed an additional assessment in the amount hereinbefore mentioned of $6,434.35. This he did under Section 210 of the Act, which may be found in the margin.*

1305 In thus proceeding the Commissioner over-ruled the plaintiff's contention that it had no invested capital, or not more than a nominal capital, and held that the case was one in which the officials were unable satisfactorily to determine the invested capital and so came within the provisions of Section 210, and Article 52 of Regulations 41 [see Art. 911 of Reg. 45, ¶1832], which provide in such exceptional cases for assessment based on a comparison with representative concerns engaged in a like or similar business.

1306 In determining whether the plaintiff's claim is correct it is necessary to examine into the facts to ascertain what basis there is for the claim that the plaintiff was in 1917 a corporation without an invested capital, or no more than a nominal capital.

1307 The plaintiff is conceded to be a corporation having an authorized capital stock of $10,000, all of which is issued and outstanding. At the beginning of the year 1917 its only assets appear to have been cash variously estimated at $7,367.64, and $11,017.83, together with a secret process for extracting theobromine, a valuable drug, from cocoa shells.

1308 The process referred to had been acquired by the corporation in 1909, at the time of its organization, by the issue of $2,400 par value of its capital stock to one Robert Riddle. The balance of the stock, $7,600 par value, had been issued at the same time to Herman A. Loeb, in exchange for plant, machinery, raw materials, etc., and $200 in cash. Riddle and Loeb thus acquired all the stock and were the only persons who were financially interested in the company. Riddle was an inventor and before the incorporation took place came to Loeb with a process for extracting cocoa butter out of cocoa shells. The process having been shown to be worthless Riddle suggested to Loeb the possibility of converting the process into one from which there might be extracted from cocoa shells a substance known as theobromine, a chemical substance allied to caffeine. Loeb continued to advance money to Riddle to aid him in further experiments, until he became afraid that he was getting too deeply involved, and he determined to form a corporation to carry on the work. Thereupon they formed the corporation—Riddle transferring to it the process and agreeing to work for the company for five years at a salary of $1,800. The stock of the company was issued to Riddle and Loeb in the amounts and for the reasons already stated.

*Sec. 210. That if the Secretary of the Treasury is unable in any case satisfactorily to determine the invested capital, the amount of the deduction shall be the sum of (1) an amount equal to the same proportion of the net income of the trade or business received during the taxable year as the proportion which the average deduction (determined in the same manner as provided in section two hundred and three, without including the $3,000 or $6,000 therein referred to) for the same calendar year of representative corporations, partnerships, and individuals, engaged in a like or similar trade or business, bears to the total net income of the trade or business received by such corporations, partnerships, and individuals, plus (2) in the case of a domestic corporation $3,000, and in the case of a domestic partnership or a citizen or resident of the United States $6,000."

1309 It appears that in the years 1909 and 1910 the company borrowed $19,716.84 of which amount $19,314.07 was obtained from Loeb and his relations. This money was borrowed by the corporation and expended by it in the improvement of the process. And by April, 1910, the process was successfully worked out. But the corporation was unable to secure the means to carry on the work, and it resulted that it sold its machinery and stock on hand for $1,563.49, and entered into a license agreement with the Schaefer Alkaloid Works of Maywood, New Jersey, under which agreement the licensee was to use the process, paying the corporation a royalty for the privilege. This agreement was later replaced by a second agreement dated June 20, 1912, under which the licensee agreed to pay the corporation a fixed royalty of $2,000 a year for the use of the process, and to sell to the corporation such quantities of theobromine as it might order at a price not to exceed $2.50 per pound. During the Great War the price of theobromine rose and the affairs of the plaintiff corporation prospered. It was in a short time able not only to pay the interest on its indebtedness but from time to time it made payments on account of the principal. And by January 1, 1917, all of the money borrowed had been repaid out of the earnings of the company. Throughout that year the corporation paid its officers liberal salaries and earned a net income of $26,850.12, all of which, with the exception of $45.18 interest, was derived from the process and the contract with the Schaefer Alkaloid Works. On January 1, 1917, the company, having all its debts paid, had a surplus of $13,000 after writing off a depreciation of $7,700. During the year 1917 its assets consisted of the secret process, its contract with the Schaefer Alkaloid Works, and its cash on hand.

1310 The case depends upon the meaning of the phrase "invested capital" and "nominal capital" as used in Section 209 of the Act. What is to be deemed "invested capital" is set forth in Section 207, both Sections being under Title 2 of the Act. The pertinent part of Section 207 may be found in the margin.*

*"Sec. 207. That as used in this title, the term 'invested capital' for any year means the average invested capital for the year, as defined and limited in this title, averaged monthly.

As used in this title 'invested capital' does not include stocks, bonds (other than obligations of the United States), or other assets, the income from which is not subject to the tax imposed by this title nor money or other property borrowed, and means, subject to the above limitations:

(a) In the case of a corporation * * * (1) Actual cash paid in, (2) the actual cash value of tangible property paid in other than cash, for stock, or shares in such corporation * * * at the time of such payment, 'but in case such tangible property was paid in prior to January first, nineteen hundred and fourteen, the actual cash value of such property as of January first, nineteen hundred and fourteen, but in no case to exceed the par value of the original stock or shares specifically issued therefor and (3) paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits used or employed in the business, exclusive of undivided profits earned during the taxable year: Provided, That * * * (b) * * * intangible property shall be included as invested capital if the corporation * * * made payment bona fide therefor specifically as such in cash or tangible property, the value of such * * * intangible property, not to exceed the actual cash or actual cash value of the tangible property paid therefor at the time of such payment; but * * * intangible property, bona fide purchased, prior to March third, nineteen hundred and seventeen, * * * for and with shares in the capital stock of a corporation (issued prior to March third, nineteen hundred and seventeen), in an amount not to exceed, on March third, nineteen hundred and seventeen, twenty per centum of the total * * * shares of the capital stock of the corporation, shall be included in invested capital at a value not to exceed the actual cash value at the time of such purchase, and in case of issue of stock therefor not to exceed the par value of such stock; * * * ."

1311 Section 207 of the Act received the consideration of the Supreme Court in La Belle Iron Works v. United States, 256 U. S. 377. Mr. Justice Pitney, writing for the court in that case, said [¶897 herein]:

"The word 'invested' in itself imports a restrictive qualification. When speaking of the capital of a business corporation or partnership, such as the act deals with, 'to invest' imports a laying out of money, or money's worth, either by an individual in acquiring an interest in the concern with a view to obtaining income or profit from the conduct of its business, or by the concern itself in acquiring something of permanent use in the business; in either case involving a conversion of wealth from one form into another suitable for employment in the making of the hoped-for gains. See Webster's New Internat. Dict., 'invest' 8; Century Dict., 'invest' 7; Standard Dict., 'invest' 1.

In order to adhere to this restricted meaning and avoid exaggerated valuations, the draftsman of the act resorted to the test of including nothing but money, or money's worth, actually contributed or converted in exchange for shares of the capital stock, or actually acquired through the business activities of the corporation or partnership (involving again a conversion) and coming in ab extra, by way of increase over the original capital stock."

1312 The construction given to an Act of Congress, by a Department of the Government charged with its execution, is not controlling upon the courts as the Department is not authorized to exercise the judicial function, but it is entitled to great consideration when the meaning of a statute is doubtful. United States v. Hermanos y Compania, 209 U. S. 337, 339; United States v. Healey, 160 U. S. 136; Robertson v. Downing 127 U. S. 607. And the consideration given to such construction is particularly weighty in the case of statutes levying impositions where the construction had been favorable to the persons affected. State v. Orleans Parish Bd. of Assessors, 52 La. Ann. 223; Attorney General v. Newbern 21 N. C. 216.

1313 The Regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue No. 45, Article 840 [¶764], shows the understanding of the Department that amounts expended for improvements in tangible property such as plant, equipment and the like are to be added to the surplus account if such assets are in active use by the corporation. And Article 841 [¶769] shows that expenses in the development of intangible property are to be added to surplus account unless the taxpayer has seen fit to charge such expenditures to current expenses. And see Article 843 [¶773] of the same Regulations.

1314 And in the Recommendation of the Committee on Appeals and Review No. 115 (unreported) it was held that a manufacturing company which spent $2,400,000 of its current earnings before 1909 in the development of a trade name, and charged this amount to capital account, was entitled to include this amount in its invested capital under the excess profits tax law.

1315 So also in Recommendation of the Committee on Appeals and Review No. 134 (Digest of Income Tax Rulings No. 19, page 460: Cumulative Bulletin 5-1719 [Sec. 326, Art. 831-17, ruling No. 25, in Supplementary Bulletin Rulings herein]), the Committee stated that it was "of the opinion that a corporation should be allowed as invested capital for the taxable year 1917 the full amount expended by it in cash and capitalized prior to 1909, as a part of the cost of developing certain intangible assets, which it had acquired for stock and cash."

1316 It must be admitted that if the corporation can show that on January 1, 1917, it had no "invested capital" or not more than a "nominal capital" within the meaning of Section 209 it was entitled to be assessed under that section. We think it clearly appears that at the time above mentioned the company had some invested capital and therefore was not entitled to be assessed under the Section referred to.

1317 When the plaintiff was incorporated in 1909 it had an authorized capital stock of $10,000 all of which it issued. This stock, as already shown, was issued for $200 in cash and the remainder for property. The property it received was the secret process for which it paid in stock $2,400 in par value, and machinery and supplies for which it paid in stock $7,400 in par value. Its capital at that time consisted of tangible and intangible property. Its intangible property consisted of the secret process. But all the invested capital in the form of cash and tangible property paid in for stock had disappeared by 1917. Its only assets in 1917 were the secret process and the cash it had on hand, which is variously estimated at $7,367.64 and $11,017.83. The company, however, had expended prior to 1917, to improve its process, $19,314.01. This it did by borrowing monies which it repaid out of its earnings in the years 1914, 1915 and 1916. There is no evidence in the record that these expenditures were ever treated as a current expense. The money used in improving the process is not found in its surplus but the company still has the improvements and the improvements constitute surplus to the extent of their value, and as these expenditures were made to improve the process which the company used in its business, it has an invested capital in the amount expended.

1318 The case is not unlike, in principle, that of a company which finds it necessary to enlarge or improve its plant. If it is without the necessary capital to make the improvement it borrows the money and repays it out of its earnings. In so doing its earnings so paid have disappeared from its surplus but the improvements made to the plant take the place of the surplus expended and constitute a part of the invested capital.

1319 That the prosperity of the company according to its own opinion was built upon the process and the improvements made therein appears from a resolution adopted by its directors on January 9, 1917, in which they refer to the services given by Riddle and Loeb "to the development of the process owned by this company, to which processes this company owes its present prosperity."

1320 And it is not without interest that in the Income Tax return, which the company made in 1916, it declared that the fair market value of the process was $19,716.84 and claimed a deduction for depreciation for all years to date of $7,761.42. This left the value of the process at the beginning of the year, 1917, at about $12,000.

1321 The contention of the appellant corporation is that in the year 1917 the taxes due from it were to be computed under section 209 inasmuch as while the corporation originally had invested capital in the form of cash and tangible property paid in for stock, this had all disappeared prior to that year and therefore could not be included in invested capital at that time. It claims that its only assets then were the secret process and cash representing profits of the previous year. As to the process it was not improved but was incomplete at the time of its acquisition when it had only a nominal cash value. And reliance is placed on Section 208 3(b) which declares that intangible property bona fide purchased prior to March 3, 1917, with shares in the capital stock in an amount not to exceed 20 per centum of the total shares of the capital stock 'shall be included in invested capital at a value not to exceed the actual cash value at the time of such purchase, and in case of issue of stock therefor not to exceed the par value of such stock.'"

1322 The fallacy of the argument is in the assumption that the limitation placed by section 207 upon the amount at which intangible property paid in for stock may be included in invested capital applies merely to the original investment for the stock and that subsequent improvements of such assets are to be disregarded.

1323 The case of La Belle Iron Works v. United States, supra, holds that under Section 207 appreciated valuations of assets above costs are not to be included in "invested capital." That phrase cannot be applied to any appreciation in values which is not in substance and effect a new acquisition of capital property by the company. "Invested capital" is based upon actual costs and does not embrace appreciations in value due to the "unearned increment." In the La Belle Iron Works case ore lands originally acquired by the corporation for $190,000 were proved by extensive explorations and developments to have a cash value of $10,105,400. The court, referring to this said it assumed that the cost of the exploration and development work might be regarded as earned surplus. The court said:

"It is said that the admitted increase in the value of appellant's ore lands is properly to be characterized as earned surplus, because it was the result of extensive exploration and development work. We assume that a proper sum, not exceeding the cost of the work, might have been added to earned surplus on that account; but none such was stated in appellant's petition, nor, so far as appears, in its return of income. In the absence of such a showing it was not improper to attribute the entire $9,915,400, added to the book value of the ore property in the year 1912, to a mere appreciation in the value of the property; in short, to what is commonly known as the 'unearned increment,' not properly 'earned surplus' within the meaning of the statute."

1324 But in 1917 the process was not the only asset which the plaintiff possessed. It also had on hand cash which it had acquired solely through the accumulation of earnings. Whether it amounted to $11,017.83 as claimed or only $7,367.64 is not material so far as the question now presented is concerned. In any event its surplus was substantial and cannot be considered as merely nominal.

1325 The contract which the plaintiff has with the Schaefer Alkaloid Works and under which the plaintiff is entitled to receive a minimum royalty of $2,000 a year with the right to call yearly for at least 3,000 pounds of theobromine at $2.50 a pound and which had ten years longer to run need not be considered at this time. It manifestly cannot help the plaintiff's case.

1326 As the plaintiff was not engaged in business "having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital" its contention that it was entitled to be assessed under Section 209 and not under Section 210 is without merit and is denied.

1327 Commissions on certain renewal insurance premiums.—[Comment:

In Woods vs. Lewellyn, Collector, U. S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania (No. 2630, November Term, 1921), decided March 14, 1923, Judge Gibson holds that commissions received by Mr. Woods in 1917 on renewal premiums on insurance, previously written by him were not to be included in income subject to excess-profits tax under the existing circumstances, the facts being: The insurance was written by Mr. Woods during the time he was acting as General Agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Company; he had ceased to be such at the beginning of 1917; during all of 1917 he was president and manager (at a salary of $30,000) of an incorporated life insurance agency known as the Edward A. Woods Agency, which acted as General Agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Company; Mr. Woods had not transferred to the corporation his rights in the renewal commissions; he earned during 1917 $2,787.33 in commissions on insurance written by him personally, and claimed as a business-expense deduction, personally, $4,600. The court holds that the business engaged in by Mr. Woods was that of acting as president and manager of the corporation; that his earnings during the year from insurance written personally, were so small, as compared with his salary, as not to constitute earnings from a regular trade or business, but rather as earnings from more or less isolated transactions; that the expenses might well have been due to the exercise of an incidental or isolated activity; and that thus, not being engaged in the business of writing insurance, the renewal commissions received by Mr. Woods did not constitute income from his trade or business. In conclusion the court says: "As heretofore stated, it is our opinion that the sums sought by the Collector to be subjected to taxation as excess profits were not earned by plaintiff in the exercise of the vocation pursued by him in 1917, and were not rightfully collected. It is needless, therefore, for us to consider the forcible argument of counsel for plaintiff to establish the claim that the renewal premiums in question were 'the income from property arising merely from ownership, including interest, rent, and similar income from investments,' and as such declared not the subject to the excess profits tax by Article 8 of Regulation No. 41, issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Counsel has pointed out the fact that plaintiff would have received these premiums if he had retired from business altogether prior to 1917, and that they would have been paid to his heirs had he died in the latter part of 1916. This makes it plain, he claims, that the sums received by him as premiums, constituted income derived from property rights acquired prior to 1917, and not the fruits of his vocation or 'trade or business' in that year. His contention in this respect is doubtless worthy of serious consideration, in case the necessity for such consideration were to arise."—The Corporation Trust Company.]

(Decision.)

Revenue Act of 1917—War Excess-Profits Tax.

July 5, 1923.

A corporation whose entire income is derived from royalties on patents in which it has no investment is entitled to assessment under Section 209 as being engaged in a trade or business having no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT.
Samuel Iredell, Collector of Internal Revenue of the United States for the First District of New Jersey.

Plaintiff in Error,

vs.

De Laski and Thropp Circular Woven Tire Company,
Defendant in Error.

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of New Jersey.
Before BUFFINGTON, WOOLLEY and DAVIS, Circuit Judges.

1328 BUFFINGTON, Circuit Judge.—In the Court below, the plaintiff 913 brought suit and recovered a judgment against Samuel Iredell, Collector, for taxes paid under protest, whereupon the Collector sued out this writ of error. His contention is that the taxes in question were assessable under Section 201 of the Revenue Act of 1917, while that of the plaintiff is that they were assessable under Section 209. The Court below sustained this latter contention and we agree with its view.

1329 That Court, in an opinion reported at 268 Fed. 377 [¶913], had theretofore considered these two sections on a motion to dismiss the case and refused the same.

1330 Trial by jury was subsequently waived and the case was tried by the Judge, who found the facts as printed in the margin*, a consideration of which, together with the opinion referred to, renders needless present re-statement.

1331 As we have said, we are of opinion the facts of this case clearly bring the plaintiff company under the provisions of Section 209. It was,

*4. In the year 1911, the stockholders of the plaintiff formally decided not to engage in the business of manufacturing tires and determined that no further effort would be made to conduct any business other than that of granting licenses under its patents, and on July 19, 1911, the authorized capital stock of the company was reduced from $100,000 to $10,000 and the purpose clauses of its charter were appropriately amended. The plaintiff has never manufactured molds or tires or anything else and has no facilities to conduct a manufacturing business.

5. Between 1911 and December 31, 1916, several patents relating to tire manufacturing apparatus were granted to the officers of the plaintiff who in turn assigned them to the plaintiff for the consideration of $1.00 each.

6. During the year 1917, the plaintiff's net income amounted to $105,550.29, all of which was received under license agreements to use its patented apparatus, which have been the only source of income to plaintiff since its incorporation.

8. During the year 1917, plaintiff's capital and surplus were $10,000 and $2,000 respectively, or a total invested capital of $12,000 which nominal capital was purely as provided by the Section, engaged in a trade or business having a nominal capital. It was not a producer or manufacturer but its entire business was simply to collect and distribute the rental or royalty charged for use of its patents and, as it may, in accordance with said Section, be assessed with "a tax equivalent to eight per centum of the net income of such trade or business" it follows by the terms of the section this shall be "in lieu of the tax imposed by section two hundred and one."

1332 The Court below having found as a fact—a finding in which we concur—that the trade or business of the Plaintiff had no invested capital, and such being the plain wording of the statute, it follows that an attempt by departmental construction to theoretically swell that nominal capital into a large amount, simply because its business on its nominal capital proved highly remunerative, is at variance with the taxing statute and with the principle that the right to impose taxation must have clear statutory warrant and that doubtful constructions must be resolved in favor of the taxpayer.

(Decision.)

1917 Tax on Individuals.

1333 Failure to make and file separate excess profits tax return under the Act of October 3, 1917, subjects taxpayer to fifty per cent penalty.

—[Comment: In Beam vs. Hamilton, Collector, Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit (289 Fed. 9), decided May 15, 1923, the plaintiff seeks to have set aside a judgment rendered in favor of the collector in a suit to recover a penalty (50% of the excess profits tax found due) for alleged failure to make separate return for excess profits tax purposes of income from his personal business as a distiller received during 1917 no accounting of which was carried forward in his income tax return of salary and dividends otherwise received. Judge Knappen held that " * * * we are unable to agree with plaintiff's contention that, because Schedule B was so left blank, and plaintiff thereby (implied only) made a return that he was not engaged in a business with invested capital, and that he did not owe any excess profits tax, he thereby made a return within the meaning of the excess profits title, although the return so impliedly made on Form 1040 was untrue; nor with the further contention that, unless the return actually made was willfully false or fraud-incidental to the conduct of the plaintiff's business and was used entirely as a fund from which to advance salaries, wages, etc., and to provide office furniture, accommodations and equipment.

10. In compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide Revenue to Defray War Expenses and other Purposes,' approved October 3, 1917, plaintiff made due returns to the defendant of its annual net income for the twelve (12) months ended December 31, 1917, and paid the income and excess profits taxes due thereunder, in accordance with the provisions of Section 209 of the said Act, whereby the excess profits tax was levied and assessed upon corporations employing no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital. The plaintiff's contention in this respect was disallowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and after various letters had been exchanged and a hearing had in Washington, the plaintiff was notified by the defendant in August, 1919, that additional income and excess profits taxes for the year 1917 had been assessed against it in the sum of $16,969.45, which amount had been arrived at upon the basis of a fictitious capital constructed under Section 210 of the said Act and an application of the rates prescribed by Section 201 of the Act for corporations employing capital."

ulent, as the court below found it was not, plaintiff cannot be subject to the penalty for failure to make another return, as to which the liability is not conditioned upon fraudulent action. Not only was the excess profits tax a separate, distinct, and then novel source of revenue, but the statute and regulations * * * in express and formal terms required separate and distinct returns thereof, and we think it clear that failure to make a separate return of excess profits tax is none the less a failure to make the return contemplated by the statute because of the mere fact that the computations on the excess profits return are to be carried onto Form 1040; the use of that form also is necessary to a complete report. By section 213 the Commissioner was undoubtedly given authority, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to require both returns. * * * We think the Commissioner justified in holding that, while the accountant was responsible for the correctness of the figures, plaintiff was responsible for the source of the same and sufficient details to insure a complete understanding of the business, and that failure to take such precaution to 'discover the omission of the principal item of income' does not 'constitute reasonable cause for failure to file an excess profits tax return, which was also due to the omission of the income in question from [plaintiff's] income tax return.' The penalty, while drastic, was intended to insure payment of public revenue. No question of its reasonableness is involved."—The Corporation Trust Company.]

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. REQUIRED VALUATION.—Every domestic corporation is required to pay annually a special excise tax with respect to its capital stock or doing business, equivalent to $1 for each $10,000 of the market value of the fair average value of its capital stock for the preceding year ending June 30 as is in excess of $1,000. It is mandatory whether the corporation is organized for profit or has a capital stock represented by shares.

For the purpose of this tax the fair value of the entire capital stock as a going concern, regardless of stock ownership or the ability of individual stockholders, to liquidate their holdings, is required. The sales price for any number of shares of stock less than a majority interest are not necessarily indicative of the fair value of the entire capital stock. The book value, the kind of assets, the nature of the business, good will, franchise, earnings capacity, etc., are important factors that affect the worth of enterprises and must be given due consideration in arriving at the fair value at any given date.

In order that consideration may be given the various factors affecting fair value, three exhibits are provided for furnishing information, and the taxpayer will complete each exhibit or state why the required data are not available.

Exhibit A provides for adjusting any overstated or understated values contained in the taxpayer's books of account, and Exhibit C provides for showing an adjusted income, which should be the actual operating income to be used for capitalizing on a percentage basis fixed by its officers as fairly representing conditions obtaining in the trade and in the locality. If the reconstructed book value shown by Exhibit A, the market value shown by Exhibit B, or the valuation reflected by Exhibit C is greater than the valuation returned by the taxpayer, a comprehensive statement showing any extraordinary conditions which are found to be in support of the valuation claimed must be submitted. In any case in which the fair value is understated the amount will be redetermined by the Commissioner and the correct tax assessed, also any penalty incurred will be asserted.

2. EXHIBITS.—The three exhibits, A, B, and C, are provided to indicate the information desired and the manner in which it should be furnished. So far as adaptable these forms should be completed by taxpayers. But if they find it more convenient they may attach to their return their own statements (as in the case of banks), provided substantially the same information is furnished. In any event, taxpayers should attach any additional statements that will aid in a comprehensive understanding of the taxpayer's return, so that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may fully determine the correctness of the fair value reported in item 14 on page 1 hereof.

3. EXHIBIT A: CORRECTED BALANCE SHEET.—Furnish under Exhibit A a corrected balance sheet as of June 30, 1922. It is possible, but in no case earlier than December 31, 1922.

"Rate of Return Sheet."—Exhibit A requires data as of June 30, 1922, if possible, but in no case earlier than December 31, 1922. A corporation whose fiscal year ends between June 30 and December 31, 1922, and which finds it impossible to prepare a statement from the books as of June 30, 1922, may report in the "Rate of Return" column values as of the close of their last fiscal year, preceding December 31, 1922, and within every instance make note of the "Fair value" column and the "Rate of Return" column values as of the close of their last fiscal year, preceding June 30, 1922. This amount will agree with items 8, 9, and 10 on page 1 of the return, and no substitution of dates is permitted in either case. Where the books are closed in July or August, tentative return may be filed and completed return immediately after closing of books.

Banks should submit balance sheets as of June 30, 1922, in all cases. Published statements are acceptable unless recent action is necessary to reflect actual values.

"Books of account."—These columns must show the amounts as carried in the taxpayer's books of account.

"Fair value."—Refer to article 1 above, defining the value returned, and in the event that the columns "Books of account" contain any overstated or understated values show herein the actual values. In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits and timber, valuations established as the basis of depletion in computing income and profit taxes should be shown in the "Fair value" column. If any different valuation is claimed than reported in the "Fair value" column it may be stated and should be supported by reasonably conclusive evidence.

"Differences."—These columns will show the differences between the columns "Books of account" and "Fair value." Any material differences must be explained in such manner as to enable the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to determine if they are proper and acceptable. For this purpose the differences shown herein need not be covered by corresponding adjustments in the taxpayer's books of account.

"Profit and loss."—If the "Profit and loss" balance is a debit, the amount should be shown in red.

Reserve for the payment of future dividends, whether declared or not, will not be considered in arriving at the fair value. It is not necessary to cover the preceding dividend period may be considered if the dividend has been declared and not disbursed. If deducted, show date declared and date of actual payment.

4. EXHIBIT B: QUOTATIONS ON OVERSEAS SALES PRICES.—Furnish under Exhibit B the price quoted on a recognized stock exchange on the New York stock or the prices at which outside sales were made if the stock is not listed, for the period of 12 months ending June 30, 1922.

If the stock is listed, the name of the exchange from which reported quotations are taken must be shown in the space provided therefor, and the prices reported will be the mean of the highest and of the lowest bid price during each month, from which the average for the year will be obtained. If the taxpayer prefers, a schedule may be attached to this return showing the highest and lowest bid price at which stock was quoted for each day of the year and the average obtained therefrom.

If the stock is not listed and outside sales have been made at prices known or determinable by the officers making this report, such prices will be reported hereon. A statement of the number of shares involved and the conditions under which sales were made at other than exchange quotations must accompany this return. Sales to employees or directors for qualification purposes, or sales which are restricted as to resale, or sales at prices otherwise specially influenced, will not be considered representative of the fair value of the entire capital stock and should not be included.

In the column "Number of shares outstanding" should be shown the total number of shares outstanding at the close of each month. The average value per share will be determined as follows:

First. If no change occurred in the number of shares outstanding during the year, total the quotations or sales prices for the months reported and divide by the number of months in which quotations or sales prices are shown.

Second. If any change occurred in the number of shares outstanding during the year, multiply the average market price per share for the period during which the capital stock was outstanding as of June 30, 1922, has been outstanding by the number of shares outstanding as of that date.

5. EXHIBIT C: ANNUAL INCOME.—Furnish under Exhibit C the annual income and other data for the five fiscal years ended with the close of the taxpayer's fiscal year, or for the period during which the corporation has been engaged in business if for a shorter period.

"Net income."—In this column will be shown the income returned for the purpose of the income tax and excess profit tax.

"Deductions" and "Additions."—Refer to article 1 of these Special Instructions, and show in these columns such amounts as should be deducted from or added to "Net income" to arrive at the adjusted income which may be capitalized to determine the fair value of the capital stock. In comprehensive analysis of any amounts reported thereon should be attached to this return. Some of the principal items frequently requiring adjustment are:

Deductions:
Income and profits taxes not deductible in computing income subject to tax.
Interest charges not deductible in computing income subject to tax.
Losses not fully deductible in computing income subject to tax.

Additions:
Income from other corporations not included in computing income subject to tax.
Income from securities of a State, municipality, or the United States, not included in the taxpayer's tax return.
The difference between depletion allowed in determining net income subject to Federal income tax and the actual depletion based on cost.
Expenses made for additions and betterments, or reserves for such purposes, charged against income, whether direct or through expenses.

"Adjusted income."—This column will reflect the amounts resulting from the adjustment of the amounts shown in the three preceding columns.

"Number of shares."—Therein should be given the total number of shares of all classes of stock outstanding at the close of each fiscal year.

"Dividends declared."—Therein should be reported the percentage of dividends declared on each class of stock outstanding each year. The amount represented by the percentages shown in this column must not be deducted from the columns "Net income" or "Adjusted income."

"Depreciation."—Herein will be reported the amount actually charged against income each year to the taxpayer's books of account for depreciation.

Capitalizing net income.—The officers making the return will capitalize the average annual income on a percentage basis that fairly represents, under the conditions obtaining in the trade in the locality, what representative enterprises must earn in order to maintain their stock at par. In other words, enterprises engaged in a similar business must on the average earn 12 per cent on their issued capital stock to keep the value of their stock at par, the net income should be capitalized by dividing it by 12.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. NATURE OF TAX.—The capital stock tax due July 1, 1923, is an excise tax payable in advance for the privilege of doing business from July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923.

2. DATE OF FILING RETURNS.—During July of each year.

3. TENTATIVE RETURN.—Filing of a tentative return will avoid penalty for delinquent filing, but does not substitute withholding of the tax. Complete return as far as possible and submit an approximate estimate as a basis in order that an initial assessment may be made. (See Art. 21, Reg. 65.)

4. EXAMINATION OF RECORDS AND WITNESSES.—For the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or of making a return where none has been made or of preparing a new return where the one submitted is false or fraudulent the Commissioner has authority to designate a revenue agent or inspector to examine witnesses and books, records, papers, or other documents.

5. EXTENSION OF TIME.—In the event of sickness or absence of the officer charged with making the return, it is impossible to prepare and file a return on or before July 31, the collector, upon application in writing, may allow an extension of not exceeding 30 days for making and filing the return. If extension is granted, the letter of the collector must be attached to the return. No extension of time will be granted to the collector his authority by grant an extension greater than 30 days from July 31.

6. SIGNATURES AND VERIFICATION.—Returns must be signed and verified by two officers of the corporation, one is by the president, the president, or other principal officer, and by the treasurer or other financial officer, and must be sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, and the seal of the attesting officer, if then required to have a seal, must be impressed on the return. The name of the corporation and the names of the officers signing the return should be plainly written or printed on the return. If, however, the tax is covered by this return filed and not paid, the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

7. TAX.—From the total fair average value of the capital stock the sum of $5,000 is deducted and the tax is at the rate of $1 for each full $1,000 of any balance. (See lines 14 to 17 on page 1.)

8. PENALTIES.—In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of the amount due, except that where a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case of a false or fraudulent return or list it willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of the amount due. If the tax is payable to the collector at any time after July 1, 1923, but penalties for nonpayment due to willful neglect and on days after notice and demand has been served by the collector on the taxpayer. (See sections 1094, 1095, and 1096, Revenue Act of 1921, and section 2161, R. S.)

9. REGULATIONS.—For further information regarding the tax see Regulations 64.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.

1. Nature of tax.—The capital stock tax due July 1, 1923, is an excise tax, payable in advance, for the privilege of doing business from July 1, 1923, to June 30, 1924. The amount of the tax is computed upon the average amount of capital employed by a foreign corporation in the transaction of its business in the United States for the preceding fiscal year.

2. Time for filing returns.—During the month of July, and annually thereafter.

3. Foreign corporations required to make returns.—Every corporation engaged in business in the United States shall make return on this form irrespective of the amount of capital employed in this country in the transaction of its business, unless such corporation was not engaged in business in the United States during the preceding fiscal year, July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923, or is specifically exempt under the provisions of Section 231, Title II, of the Revenue Act of 1921.

In supplying data under item 7, details relating to real estate, mortgage loans, etc., may be omitted, but a supplementary statement should be attached explaining how the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States has been computed.

4. Examination of records and witnesses.—For the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or of making a return where none has been made or of preparing a new return where the one submitted is false or fraudulent the Commissioner has authority to designate a revenue agent or inspector to examine witnesses and books, records, papers, or other memoranda.

5. Extension of time.—If on account of sickness or absence of the officer charged with making the return it is impossible to prepare and file a return on or before July 31, the collector, upon application in writing, may allow an extension of not exceeding 30 days for making and filing the return. If extension is granted, the letter of the collector must be attached to the return. Neither the Commissioner nor the collector has authority to grant an extension greater than 30 days from July 31.

7. Signatures and verification.—Returns must be signed and verified by the agent or attorney, or other principal officer, in charge of the United States branch of the foreign corporation, and must be sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, and the seal of the attesting officer, if he is required to have a seal, must be impressed on the return in the space provided for that purpose. If, however, the tax covered by this return does not exceed $10, the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

8. Corporations liable to tax.—Every corporation created or organized outside the United States and engaged in business in the United States, shall be liable to the capital stock tax except such companies and associations as are specifically exempt under Section 231 of Title II of the Revenue Act of 1921.

9. New corporations.—This tax shall not be imposed upon any corporation not engaged in business in the United States for any portion of the fiscal year July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923.

10. Computation of tax.—The method of computation is prescribed on the face of this form.

11. Tax.—The tax is at the rate of $1 for each full $1,000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of business in the United States.

(a) Transportation companies owning or operating vessels plying between the United States and other countries, either as their principal business or supplemental to their principal business, will submit the data indicated under Exhibit on page 2 in order that that portion of capital represented by the floating equipment may be included as part of the taxable amount.

(b) Deduction of liabilities.—Capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States means that portion of the total capital, surplus, and undivided profits of the foreign corporation utilized for the purpose of doing business in the United States. Therefore, a foreign corporation may deduct that portion of its actual liabilities which the gross capital employed in the United States bears to the total gross assets of the corporation, provided a copy of its financial statement is attached to the return in support of the deduction claimed. Amounts claimed on this account will be disallowed unless supported.

12. Penalties.—In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of its amount, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case a false or fraudulent return or list is willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of its amount. The tax is payable to the collector any time after July 1, 1923, but penalties for nonpayment do not attach until ten days after notice and demand has been served by the collector upon the taxpayer. (See Sections 1004, 1302, and 1311, Revenue Act of 1921, and Section 3184, R. S.)

13. Regulations.—For further information regarding the tax see Reg. No. 64.

EFFECTIVE DATE.

3006 Art. 2. Due date of tax.—The act was approved November 23, 1921, but the tax is effective from July 1, 1922, except upon the incorporation of an individual or partnership business (see art. 32). This is a special tax and like all special taxes is due and payable annually in advance from July 1 of each year. No portion of the tax so paid is refundable to a corporation which ceases to do business during the year.

under and pursuant to State laws, agreements, declarations of trust, or otherwise, the net income of which, if any, is distributable among the members or shareholders on the basis of the capital stock held by each, or, where there is no capital stock, on the basis of the proportionate share of capital which each has or has invested in the business or property of the organization. But see articles 5, 6, 7, 8. An organization, the membership interests in which are transferable without the consent of all of the members, however the transfer may be otherwise restricted, and the business of which is conducted by trustees or directors and officers without the active participation of all the members as such, is an association.

3009 Art. 5. Limited partnerships as corporations.—Partnerships with limited liability or partnership associations authorized by the statutes of Pennsylvania and a few other States are only nominally partnerships. Such so-called limited partnerships, offering opportunity for limiting the liability of all the members, providing for the transferability of partnership shares, and capable of holding real estate and bringing suit in the common name, are more truly corporations than partnerships, and are taxable as corporations. In all doubtful cases, limited partnerships will be treated as corporations unless they submit satisfactory proof that they are not in effect so organized. Michigan partnership associations are corporations. The liability of Virginia limited partnerships is determined in each case from a consideration of the certificate of partnership and all pertinent facts relative thereto.

3010 Art. 6. Limited partnerships as partnerships.—So-called limited partnerships of the type authorized by the statutes of New York and most of the States are partnerships and not corporations within the meaning of the statute. Such limited partnerships which can not limit the liability of the general partners, although the special partners enjoy limited liability so long as they observe the statutory conditions, which are dissolved by the death or transfer of the interest of a general partner, and which can not hold real estate or sue in the partnership name, are so like common law partnerships that they can not be differentiated therefrom for tax purposes. Michigan and Illinois limited partnerships are partnerships. California special partnerships are partnerships.

3011 Art. 7. Partnership banks.—A partnership bank, conducted like a corporation and so organized that the interests of its members may be transferred without the consent of the other members, is a joint-stock company or association within the meaning of the statute. A partnership bank, the interests of whose members can not be so transferred, is a partnership.

3012 Art. 8. Massachusetts trusts.—The test of liability in all cases involving trusts of the Massachusetts type is whether the cestuis que trustent have by the terms of the trust agreement a voice in the management or control of the trust. Where the trustees are in complete control of the business, the beneficiaries having no control except the right of filling vacancies among the trustees or of consenting to a modification of the terms of the trust or of dissolving the trust, no association exists. If, however, the cestuis que trustent have a voice in the control or management of the business of the trust, whether through the right to elect trustees periodically or to remove the trustees or to restrict the trustees as to the management of the trust or otherwise, the trust is an association within the meaning of the statute. Where the trustees hold in their own right a sufficient number of the certificates of beneficial interest to constitute control as between the beneficiaries, the trust will be held to be an association regardless of the powers conferred upon the trustee by the instrument creating the trust.

3013 Art. 9. Domestic corporations.—A domestic corporation is a corporation created or organized in the United States, which includes the States, Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

3014 Art. 10. Foreign corporations.—A foreign corporation is a corporation created or organized outside the United States as defined in Article 9.

TAX ON DOMESTIC CORPORATIONS.

3015 Art. 11. Basis of the tax: "Carrying on or doing business."—The basis of the tax in the case of a domestic corporation is "carrying on or doing business" in the capacity of a corporation or association. The words "carrying on or doing business" must be given their ordinary and natural signification. "Business" is a very comprehensive term and embraces whatever occupies the time, attention, or labor of men for the purpose of livelihood or profit. In other words, business necessarily involves the idea of gain.

3016 The true basis of distinction is, in the first instance, between—

- (a) A corporation organized for the purpose of doing business as above defined, and
  - (b) A corporation organized for the sole purpose of owning and holding property and distributing its avails;
- and, in the second instance, between—

- (c) A corporation of class (a) which is continuing the body and substance of the business for which it was organized or is still active and maintaining its organization for the purpose of continued efforts in the pursuit of profit or gain, and
- (d) A corporation which, although included in class (a), has substantially retired from the business for which it was organized and has reduced its activities to the mere ownership and holding of property, distributing its avails, and doing only the acts necessary to the maintenance of its corporate existence and the private management of its purely internal affairs.

3017 The distinction in each case must depend upon the peculiar facts in the case. Corporations of class (a) will be presumed to be subject to the tax unless they submit proof, satisfactory to the Commissioner, that they are not actually carrying on or doing business. If a corporation claim exemption on the ground that it belongs to class (b), it will be required to file an excerpt from its charter setting forth its corporate powers together with a full and comprehensive statement showing the nature of the activities in which it is and has been actually engaged. If it claim exemption on the ground that it belongs to class (d), it will be required to furnish a copy of any amendment of its charter, or other evidence, satisfactory to the Commissioner, showing that it has reduced its activities to the mere ownership of property, receipt of its avails, and the doing of only what is necessary to the maintenance of its corporate existence.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

3018 A corporation that has "substantially retired from business" is one that has changed its status, as, for instance, by divesting itself of all control over and management of the property formerly employed by it in the doing of business, and has reduced its activities accordingly.

3019 The leasing of all the property of a corporation whereby it divests itself of control and management thereof, or the sale of all the property of a corporation and the reduction of its activities to the collection of the proceeds of the sale on an installment plan, are instances of a corporation substantially retiring from business.

3020 Art. 12. "Carrying on or doing business" illustrated.—Corporations organized for the purpose of and actually engaged in such activities as buying, selling, or dealing in mineral or timber land or other real estate; leasing property, collecting rents, managing office buildings, making investments of profits; leasing lands and collecting royalties, managing wharves, dividing profits; and in some cases investing the surplus, are engaged in "carrying on or doing business" within the meaning of the statute.

3021 A corporation may complete its organization and sell its capital stock for cash without incurring liability, but other activities, such as entering into contracts for the purchase of property or construction of a plant are corporate business acts, and constitute doing business. In other words, it is not necessary that a company be actually engaged in the manufacture of its intended product or that it be actually creating profit or gain to incur liability. The making of contracts, buying of materials or machinery, constructing buildings, employing and discharging of individuals are necessary business acts leading to the more profitable end of manufacturing certain products.

3022 The letting of a contract and construction of a hotel preparatory to engaging in the hotel business is sufficient to incur liability.

3023 A corporation organized for the purpose of, and actually engaged in, buying mineral or timber land or other real estate and holding it with a view to future sale at an advance is carrying on or doing business.

3024 A corporation organized for the purpose of owning and leasing real estate which has leased all of the property under its control is still engaged in doing business unless, under the terms of its lease, its activities have been reduced to the mere receipt and distribution of the avails of the leases at the actual cost of so doing. If it is still maintaining its organization for the purpose of continued effort in the pursuit of profit and gain it is doing business.

3025 A corporation owning or managing real estate which leases all of its property, but under the terms of the lease is required to maintain or keep the property in repair, is doing business.

3026 No particular amount of business is required in order to bring a company within the terms of the act.

3027 A corporation engaged in mining or in developing and speculating in mineral lands is doing business.

3028 A corporation engaged in buying and selling securities or other property is doing business, even though for a period it makes no purchases or sales because of unfavorable market conditions.

3029 A corporation formed to take over miscellaneous stocks, bonds, or other property (as of an estate), to negotiate sales of various items from time to time as opportunity and judgment dictate, and to distribute the profits from time to time as liquidation is effected, is, while so engaged, carrying on or doing business.

3030 A parent corporation which finances or manages the operations of its subsidiaries is doing business.

3031 A so-called holding company which, under its charter, is authorized to and does, in addition to receiving and distributing the avails of the property or securities, held by it, finance the operations of its subsidiaries, is engaged in doing business.

3032 A corporation organized for the purpose of taking over and holding securities, timber land, coal lands, or other real estate, is held to be doing business, if it makes investments or reinvestments of its surplus income or funds in excess of an amount necessary to maintain its original investments.

3033 Art. 13. Not "doing business."—Holding companies as distinguished from parent corporations, and corporations all of whose property and business is operated by, or is in the hands of, a receiver or the Alien Property Custodian, are not doing business.

3034 A holding company is defined as one whose corporate powers are limited to the mere owning and holding of property and distribution of its avails, or one which, although incorporated for the purpose of doing business as defined in article 11, has substantially retired from the business for which it was organized and has reduced its activities to the mere ownership and holding of property, distributing its avails, and doing only such acts as are necessary to the maintenance of its corporate existence and the private management of its purely internal affairs.

3035 A holding company, as above defined, will not be considered to be doing business by reason of the reinvestment of its surplus income or funds to the extent only of maintaining its original investments.

3036 Art. 14. Computation of tax.—The tax is imposed at the rate of $1 for each full $1,000 of the fair average value of the capital stock of the corporation in excess of the prescribed deduction of $5,000.

3037 The tax being payable in advance is prospective and is measured by the fair average value for the year preceding the taxable year, not the fair value of the average capital stock. If a corporation begins business within the preceding year or increases or decreases its capital within the preceding year, thereby materially changing the fair value of the capital stock, the tax is measured by the fair value of the capital stock outstanding at the date of incidence of the tax (June 30). Therefore, while Form 707 permits, as a matter of convenience to the taxpayer, the using of a balance sheet as of a date prior to June 30, but not prior to the preceding December 31, if there is a material change in the condition and affairs of the company affecting the fair value of the capital stock subsequent to the closing of the books and prior to the date of the incidence of the tax (June 30), the financial condition should be reported under Exhibit A as of June 30, giving effect to such material changes. Under Exhibit B, the market value will be determined by multiplying the average market price per share for the period during which the capital stock as of June 30 has been outstanding by the number of shares outstanding as of that date.

3038 No deduction is allowed corporations organized in the United States for capital invested outside of the United States. If the corporation is doing business it is taxed on its entire capital stock even though most of it may not be employed in the business.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

3039 Art. 15. Fair average value of capital stock.—The fair average value of the capital stock for the purpose of determining the amount of the capital stock tax must not be confused with the market value of the shares of stock where it may be necessary to determine such value under other provisions of the revenue laws. The fair average value of the capital stock, the statutory basis of the tax, is not necessarily the book value or the value based on prices realized in current sales of shares of stock or the value determined by capitalization of earnings.

3040 Form 707 [page 603] provides Exhibit A for the book or fair value of the assets, Exhibit B for the market value of the shares, and Exhibit C for the value of the capital stock based on the capitalized earnings. All information called for must be given in every case where it is procurable. The fair average value of the capital stock of a corporation and the tax payable thereon shall be determined from a consideration of the data contained in the return as well as all elements and factors affecting values, which should be harmonized so far as possible in the ultimate fair value found. Fair value is required irrespective of the exhibit used or the method employed in its determination.

3041 Exhibit A.—The character of the assets is probably the most important factor in determining the reliability of the value reflected by this exhibit as being indicative of the fair value of the capital stock. If the market value of the assets be established the fair value of the capital stock is held to be not materially less than the fair market value of the net assets. Attempts to average the assets as a means of estimating the fair average value of the capital stock are not permitted.

3042 Exhibit B.—The market is regarded as a factor, but only of importance when the underlying factors upon which the market has been established are sound in all essential particulars.

3043 Exhibit C.—The weight attaching to this exhibit is largely dependent upon the nature of the business and character of the assets.

3044 In capitalizing the net earnings of the corporation, which should reflect the true earning capacity, the officers should use a rate fairly representing the conditions obtaining in the trade and in the locality, with due regard to other important factors, including the worth of money. But such fair value must not be greatly at variance with the reconstructed book value shown by Exhibit A, unless the corporation is materially affected by extraordinary conditions which support a lower valuation. In any such case a full explanation must accompany the return. The commissioner will estimate the fair value of the capital stock in cases regarded as involving any understatement or undervaluation.

3045 The fair value of the capital stock, as provided under section 1000 (a) (1) of the Revenue Act of 1921, and invested capital under the excess-profits tax provisions of the Revenue Act of 1921 are not necessarily the same.

3046 For the purpose of capital-stock tax the fair value of the capital stock is estimated, and is predicated on present values, including actual appreciation of property, whether realized or unrealized, and such intangible assets as good will, trade-marks, and patents to the extent reflected by the earning power, whereas, for the purpose of excess-profits tax, the invested capital is based upon the actual investment of the stockholders in the corporation, irrespective of the present value of its assets. In the case of the capital-stock tax the fair value looks to the present net value of the assets, irrespective of the amount of the investment of the stockholders. (See art. 863, Reg. 62 [¶1234].)

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

3047 Art. 16. Surplus and undivided profits.—The surplus and undivided profits of a corporation must be included in estimating the fair average value of its capital stock. If the fair average value be determined from the book value, the surplus and undivided profits are included in the assets; if from sales, they are necessarily a factor in determining the market price; and, if from net income, they are reflected to a greater or less extent in the earnings.

RETURNS.

3050 If the fair value is determined by any method other than herein provided, the following requirements must be complied with: (a) The parent company must submit with its return a list of all subsidiaries and the districts in which the returns were filed; (b) the return of the subsidiary company must show the name of the parent company and the district in which the return was filed; (c) the method of determining the fair value, if other than by Exhibits A, B, and C, must be fully explained; (d) a copy of any agreement existing between parent company and subsidiary must be furnished, or a statement made that none exists; and (e) a combined balance sheet and a combined net income statement must be submitted for consideration in connection with any estimate of fair value made on behalf of the reporting corporation.

3051 Art. 19. Verification of return.—The return and any separate statement submitted therewith must be verified in the form printed on page 3 of the return. In the absence of the president or treasurer, or both, other responsible officers may execute the jurat to avoid delinquency. However, if the amount of the tax covered thereby is not in excess of $10, the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath. (Sec. 1303 of the Act [¶8009].)

3052 Art. 20. Time for making return.—It shall be the duty of every corporation on or before the 31st day of July in each year to make a return to the collector of the district in which its principal place of business is located. If any corporation fails to make and file a return within the time prescribed by law or by regulation made under authority of law, or makes, willfully or otherwise, a false or fraudulent return, the collector or deputy collector shall make the return from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise. In any such case the commissioner may, from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony, or otherwise, make a return or amend any return made by a collector or deputy collector. Any return so made and subscribed by the commissioner, or by a collector or deputy collector and approved by the commissioner, shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes. If on account of sickness or absence of the officer of the corporation charged with making the return, it is impossible to prepare and file a return on or before the 31st day of July (the due date), the collector, upon application in writing, may allow an extension of time not exceeding 30 days from July 31, in which to file the return. If extension is granted, the letter of the collector should be attached to the return. (See Sec. 3176, R. S. [§8071].)

3053 On no account is the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector authorized to grant an extension of time in which to file capital stock tax returns in excess of 30 days from July 31, the due date. If for reasons, other than absence or sickness, beyond the control of the officers making the return, it becomes impossible to file a completed return within the time prescribed by law, a tentative return may be filed.

3054 Art. 21. Tentative return.—The filing of a tentative return within the prescribed period will avoid the penalty for delinquent filing, but will not authorize the withholding of the tax. The regulations do not permit the filing of a tentative return to stay indefinitely the filing of a completed return and the collection of the tax due. Therefore if a tentative return is filed it should be clearly marked "Tentative Return" and should be prepared in as complete a manner as possible, including, among other information, a basis of the computation of the tax—that is, an estimate by the officers of the corporation of the approximate fair value of the capital stock in order that an initial assessment may be made. When the completed return is filed, it should be clearly marked "Completed return," showing that a tentative return was filed. Such action will prevent duplicate assessments and ordinary penalties. In every case a statement should be attached to the tentative return, indicating the approximate date the completed return may be expected. Upon receipt of the completed return any adjustment necessary in the assessment of the correct tax due will be made.

TAX ON FOREIGN CORPORATIONS.

3055 Art. 22. Basis of the tax.—The basis of the tax in the case of a foreign corporation is "carrying on or doing business in the United States." Foreign insurance companies are not liable to capital stock tax. (See art. 29.)

3056 A foreign corporation is carrying on or doing business in the United States if it maintains an agent or an office or warehouse in the United States or in any other way enters the United States for the purpose of its business. The purchase of supplies in the United States in the furtherance of continued efforts in the pursuit of profit or gain is carrying on or doing business in the United States.

3057 Art. 23. Capital employed in the United States.—The “capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States” means the portion of the total capital, surplus, and undivided profits, of the foreign corporation, utilized for the purpose of doing business in the United States. A foreign corporation may have income from sources within the United States for the purpose of the income tax, and yet not have capital employed in the transaction of business here for the purpose of the capital-stock tax. Compare articles 92–94 and 316–329 of Regulations 62 [see Income Tax Service, beginning on page 93]. A foreign corporation not actually doing business in the United States is not subject to tax, and, accordingly, the investment of a part of its funds in United States stocks and securities will not constitute capital employed in its business in the United States. For the definition of “doing business” see article 11. If a corporation does business in this country, then, although the mere investment of funds in United States securities is not such a taxable employment of capital, such investment will constitute capital employed in the transaction of business in the United States if made in a subsidiary corporation which the foreign corporation uses as an instrumentality for the conduct of its own business in the United States. Thus the investment of the funds of a foreign corporation in the purchase of facilities, although apparently independent, for the purpose of its business here, or the purchase of stock and securities of a subsidiary corporation for the same purpose, will constitute the employment of capital in the transaction or business in the United States. A foreign corporation may not escape taxation by organizing or purchasing the stock of another corporation to own the facilities which the foreign corporation needs in its business. See article 352, Regulations 62. [See Income Tax Service, beginning on page 93].

3058 Art. 24. Capital employed in the United States illustrated.—A foreign corporation may employ capital in the transaction of its business in the United States in various ways. For example, the investment of funds in property in the United States used in its business, in stocks and securities of subsidiary corporations as explained in article 23, in bills and accounts receivable representing business done in the United States, in merchandise kept here for sale, in materials manufactured here, and in deposits in United States banks maintained for use in business here. Generally speaking, approximately such proportion of the entire capital of a foreign corporation will presumably be employed in the transaction of its business in the United States as the gross amount of its business in the United States bears to its total gross business, but this will not always be conclusive, since a corporation may conceivably transact a greater or less volume of business in one country than in another on the same amount of capital.

3059 Art. 25. Return by foreign corporation.—Every foreign corporation carrying on or doing business in the United States shall make return on Form 708 [page 607], irrespective of the amount of capital employed in this country in the transaction of its business. The capital actually employed in the transaction of the business of a foreign corporation in the United States and the tax payable thereon shall be calculated in accordance with the instructions on the form.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

3060 Art. 26. Computation of tax.—The tax is at the rate of $1 for each full $1,000 of the capital of a foreign corporation actually employed in the transaction of its business in the United States, and is in all cases to be computed on the basis of the average amount of capital so employed during the preceding year ending June 30. The measure of the tax is accordingly different from that of domestic corporations which pay a tax measured by the fair average value of their capital stock. No deduction from the total fair average amount of capital so employed is allowed in computing the tax.

3061 Art. 27. Measure of tax.—The measure of the tax is the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of business in the United States during the preceding fiscal year. It will usually be sufficient to determine the amount of capital so employed at the beginning of each year and the amount so employed at the end of such year, and to divide the sum of such amounts by two. Where, however, there have been material changes in the amount of capital, the average amount should be determined with due regard to the times at which such changes occurred. A foreign corporation may, if it so desire, compute the average amount of capital employed on a monthly basis.

EXEMPTION FROM TAX.

3062 Art. 28. Corporation not in business during preceding year.—The tax being payable in advance does not apply to any corporation which was not engaged in business during any part of the fiscal year preceding the year for which the tax is due, but if it was in business even one day of the preceding year and one day of the taxable year it is subject to the tax. There is no relation between the amount of the tax payable and the length of time the corporation was in business. A corporation engaged in business during a part of the preceding year, but not engaged in business at the beginning of the taxable year, is not required to make any return if it is dissolved or in process of dissolution, but if it is only temporarily inactive and subsequently during the year re-engages in business it should file a return in the month in which it recommences business and pay the tax due from the first of such month to the end of the taxable year. A corporation organized and beginning corporate activities on or after July 1 is not subject to tax for the remainder of the taxable period in which the company was organized, unless, as of July 1, it takes over the business of an organization which was subject to capital stock tax, in which event the new corporation is required to file a return and pay the tax. Also see article 32 relative to election to be taxed as a corporation. In the case of foreign corporations "engaged in business" means the transaction of any business within the United States.

3063 Art. 29. Organizations and insurance companies exempt.—The tax does not apply to insurance companies (stock, mutual, domestic, or foreign) nor to corporations the fair value of whose capital stock for the preceding year does not exceed $5,000 nor to any of the following classes of corporations specified in section 231 of the act, viz.:

(1) Labor, agricultural, or horticultural organizations. [See Art. 512, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]

3064 (2) Mutual savings banks not having a capital stock represented by shares. [See Art. 513, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

- 3065 (3) Fraternal beneficiary societies, orders, or associations, (a) operating under the lodge system or for the exclusive benefit of the members of a fraternity itself operating under the lodge system; and (b) providing for the payment of life, sick, accident, or other benefits to the members of such society, order, or association or their dependents. [See Art. 514, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3066 (4) Domestic building and loan associations substantially all the business of which is confined to making loans to members; and co-operative banks without capital stock organized and operated for mutual purposes and without profit. [See Art. 515, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3067 (5) Cemetery companies owned and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members or which are not operated for profit; and any corporation chartered solely for burial purposes as a cemetery corporation and not permitted by its charter to engage in any business not necessarily incident to that purpose, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual. [See Art. 516, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3068 (6) Corporations, and any community chest, fund, or foundation, organized and operated exclusively for religious, charitable, scientific, literary, or educational purposes, or for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual. [See Art. 517 (1), Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3069 A corporation organized and operated exclusively for the purpose of maintaining a symphony orchestra and giving musical concerts, the programs being of an educational character, and no part of the net earnings inuring to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual, is organized for "educational purposes." [See Art. 517 (2), (3), Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3070 (7) Business leagues, chambers of commerce, or boards of trade, not organized for profit and no part of the net earnings of which inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual. [See Art. 518, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]
- 3071 (8) Civic leagues or organizations not organized for profit but operated exclusively for the promotion of social welfare. [See Art. 519, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]

- 3074 It is necessary to exemption of organizations mentioned in the foregoing subsection (other than insurance companies, all of which are exempt) that the income of the company be derived solely from assessments, dues, and fees collected from members. [See Art. 521, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]

of members and turning back to them the proceeds of sales, less the necessary selling expenses, on the basis of the quantity of produce furnished by them; or organized and operated as purchasing agents for the purpose of purchasing supplies and equipment for the use of members and turning over such supplies and equipment to such members at actual cost, plus necessary expenses. [See Art. 522, Reg. 62, Income Tax Service, page 93.]

3076 (12) Corporations organized for the exclusive purpose of holding title to property, collecting income therefrom, and turning over the entire amount thereof, less expenses, to an organization which itself is exempt from the tax imposed by this title.

3077 (13) Federal land banks and national farm-loan associations as provided in section 26 of the act approved July 17, 1916, entitled "An act to provide capital for agricultural development, to create standard forms of investment based upon farm mortgage, to equalize rates of interest upon farm loans, to furnish a market for United States bonds, to create Government depositaries and financial agents for the United States, and for other purposes."

3078 Joint stock land banks created under the Federal farm loan act of July 17, 1916, are not exempt under this section.

3079 (14) Personal service corporations. This subdivision shall not be in effect after December 31, 1921.

3080 Personal service corporations so classified under the Revenue Act of 1918 are exempt from capital-stock tax for the taxable period July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, but are liable to capital-stock tax the same as other corporations effective July 1, 1922, under the Revenue Act of 1921.

3081 Art. 30. Claims for exemption.—It may be stated generally that in all claims for exemption under the act, it is necessary that the claimant establish to the satisfaction of the commissioner that it is in practice actually operated in an exempt manner. In those cases falling under paragraphs of the statute requiring that the organization be "organized" or "organized and operated" in the manner specified, it is necessary also that the claimant establish to the satisfaction of the commissioner that it is so organized. The term "organized," as thus used, refers to the real substance and intent of the organization and not its mere form. In determining the real substance and intent of the organization the provisions of the charter and by-laws are not in themselves conclusive, but only prima facie evidence giving rise to presumptions according to their terms. The burden is upon the claimant to overcome these presumptions by extraneous evidence to the satisfaction of the commissioner.

3082 Art. 31. Return by corporation claiming exemption.—As corporations are generally organized to do business every existing company is presumed to be subject to the tax unless satisfactory evidence is submitted showing that it is exempt. Corporations claiming exemption should fill out Form 707 but instead of computing the tax should enter in the space provided for the computation the notation "Exemption claimed." In all such cases the return so filled out must be filed with the collector, together with a comprehensive statement of the reasons for claiming exemption.

3083 If exemption has been allowed for the preceding taxable year and there has been no change in the status or conditions of the company then the first 13 lines of Form 707 should be completed and a statement attached to the effect that exemption is claimed for the same reasons as for the previous year and that the same status and conditions of the company exist for the taxable period in question. In this way the records of the collectors' offices will be complete and corporations will avoid requests for the filing of returns and unnecessary correspondence. The determination of liability rests with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and without complete information it is impossible to make a decision.

ELECTION TO BE TAXED AS CORPORATION.

3084 Art. 32. Election to be taxed as a corporation.—In the event a business enterprise qualifies under the above provisions and elects to be taxed under Titles II and III as a corporation, then it is required to file capital stock tax returns and pay the tax for the six months' period, January 1 to June 30, 1921, and the 12 months' period, July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922. The valuations for the first mentioned period will be reported as of December 31, 1920. The values for the last mentioned period will be reported as of June 30, 1921.

3085 The clauses of section 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918, which require that a corporation must have been engaged in business some part of the year preceding the taxable period in order to be liable for the tax, are not applicable to corporations filing returns under the provisions of section 229, of the Revenue Act of 1921.

RETURNS PUBLIC RECORDS.

3086 Art. 33. Inspection of returns.—The returns upon which the tax has been determined by the commissioner, although public records, are in general open to inspection only to the extent authorized by the President. All bona fide stockholders of record owning 1 per cent or more of the outstanding stock of any corporation shall, upon making request of the commissioner, be allowed to examine the annual income returns of such corporations and of its subsidiaries, but such privilege of examination is personal and can not by power of attorney be delegated by the stockholder to another. Only such officers of any State as are charged with the enforcement of a State income tax law shall have access to the returns of any corporation, or to an abstract thereof showing the name and income of the corporation, at such times and in such manner as the secretary may prescribe, and then only in case the information is to be used by them in connection with such enforcement. Any stockholder who is allowed to examine the return of any corporation, and who makes known in any manner whatever not provided by law the amount or source of income, profits, losses, expenditures, or any particular thereof, set forth or disclosed in any such return, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and be punished by a fine not exceeding $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both. [See Treasury Decisions 2961, 2962, 3273, and 3277 for full particulars. [See Inspection of Returns in The Income Tax Service.]

3087 Art. 34. No authority for credit of excess payment of capital stock tax.—Section 252 of the Revenue Act of 1921 provides for a credit against additional income taxes due to previous overpayments of income or excess-profits taxes. The law does not authorize the credit of an excess payment of capital stock tax for a given period against an assessment of the same or other tax for a previous or subsequent period. A claim for abatement or refund for the excess assessment should be filed and payment made of the correct tax due for the previous or subsequent period.

METHOD OF COLLECTING TAX.

[¶8012.]

3088 Art. 35. Time for payment of tax.—All assessments shall be made by the commissioner. The collector shall within 10 days after receiving any list of taxes from the commissioner give notice to each corporation liable to pay any tax stated therein, to be left at its place of business or to be sent by mail, stating the amount of such tax and demanding payment thereof. If such corporation does not pay the tax within 10 days after the service or the sending by mail of such notice, it shall be the duty of the collector to collect the tax with a penalty of 5 per cent additional upon the amount of the tax and interest at the rate of one per cent a month. See section 3184, Revised Statutes. A collector has no authority to extend the time for payment of the tax, and any extension granted by him will be at his own risk. All taxes are payable direct to the collector of internal revenue of the district in which return is filed. The collector may accept payment of the tax when the return is filed as an "advance collection," subject to any adjustment later found necessary, but no corporation is required to pay the tax until after notice and demand. However, the collection of the tax is facilitated where a corporation transmits with the return a check for the amount of tax due. Tax due from a corporation which has liquidated is legally collectible from the stockholders or others who have received its assets.

3089 Art. 36. Abatement and refund of taxes.—Section 3220 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 1315 of the Revenue Act of 1921, provides [see ¶8023].

FRAUDULENT RETURNS.

3090 Section 3225 of the Revised Statutes, as amended by section 1323 of the Revenue Act of 1921, provides [see ¶8047].

MEDIUM OF PAYMENT OF TAX.

3091 Section 1325 of the act reads as follows [see ¶8020].

3092 Art. 37. Payment of tax by uncertified checks.—Collectors may accept uncertified checks in payment of taxes, provided such checks are collectible at par—that is, for their full amount, without any deduction for exchange or other charges. The collector will stamp on the face of each check before deposit the words, "This check is in payment of an obligation to the United States and must be paid at par. No protest," with his name and title. The day on which the collector receives the check will be considered the date of payment so far as the taxpayer is concerned, unless the check is returned dishonored. If one check is remitted to cover the taxes of two or more corporations, the remittance must be accompanied by a letter of transmittal stating (a) the name of the drawer of the check; (b) the amount of the check; (c) the amount of any cash, money order, or other instrument included in the same remittance; (d) the name of each corporation whose tax is paid by the remittance; (e) the amount of the payment on account of each corporation; and (f) the kind of tax paid.

3093 Art. 38. Procedure with respect to dishonored checks.—If the bank on which any such check is drawn shall refuse to pay it at par, the check shall be returned through the depository bank and be treated in the same manner as a bad check. All expenses incident to the attempt to collect such a check and the return of it through the depository bank must be paid by the drawer of the check to the bank on which it is drawn, since no deduction can be made from amounts received in payment of taxes. See section 3210 of the Revised Statutes. Any taxpayer whose check is not paid by the bank on which drawn becomes liable, under the terms of the law, for payment of the tax and for all legal penalties and additions, and the collector shall proceed to collect the same as though no check had been given. A taxpayer who tenders a certified check in payment for taxes is not released from his obligation until the check has been paid. (Act of March 2, 1911, 36 Stat. 965.)

PENALTIES.

3095 Art. 40. Penalty for nonpayment of tax.—(a) Any corporation which fails to pay the tax when due and payable is liable to a penalty of $1,000. If it willfully refuses to pay or willfully attempts to evade the tax, it is liable also to a fine of $10,000 and costs and to a 100 per cent penalty to be added to the tax. See also article 39. (b) Any officer or employee of a corporation who in the course of his duty fails to pay the tax when due and payable is liable to a penalty of $1,000. If he willfully refuses to pay or willfully attempts to evade the tax, he is liable also to a fine of $10,000 and costs and to imprisonment for a year, and to a penalty of the amount of the tax unpaid or evaded.

3096 Art. 41. Penalties for failure to make return and for false return.—Any corporation which fails to make a return within the required time is liable to a penalty of $1,000. If it willfully refuses to make a return it is liable also to a fine of $10,000 and costs.

3097 Any officer or employee of a corporation who in the course of his duty fails to make a return within the required time is liable to a penalty of $1,000. If he willfully refuses to make a return he is liable also to a fine of $10,000 and costs and to imprisonment for a year.

3098 In case of failure to file a return on time, a penalty of 25 per cent of the amount of the tax is added to it unless the return is later filed and failure to file it within the prescribed time is satisfactorily shown to the Commissioner to be due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. This penalty is imposed by section 3176 of the Revised Statutes as amended. Two classes of delinquents are liable to this penalty: (a) Those who do not file returns and for whom returns are made by the collector or commissioner; and (b) those who file tardy returns and are unable to show reasonable cause for the delay. A taxpayer who files a tardy return and wishes to avoid the penalty must make an affirmative showing of all the facts alleged as a reasonable cause for failure to file the return on time in the form of an affidavit, which should be attached to the return. If such an affidavit is furnished with the return or upon the collector's demand, the collector, unless otherwise directed by the commissioner, will forward the affidavit with the return, and if the commissioner determines that the delinquency was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect the 25 per cent penalty will not be assessed. If the taxpayer exercised ordinary business care and prudence and was nevertheless unable to file the return in the prescribed time, then the delay is due to "reasonable cause."

3099 Section 3228 of the Revised Statutes is amended by section 1316 of the act to read as follows:

All claims for the refunding or crediting of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty alleged to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, must be presented to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue within four years next after payment of such tax, penalty, or sum.

3100 This section, except as modified by section 252, shall apply retroactively to claims for refund under the Revenue Act of 1916, the Revenue Act of 1917, and the Revenue Act of 1918.

3101 Art. 42. Section 3228, R. S. (refunds), retroactive.—This section is retroactive in its effect. Any claim for the refund of taxes or penalties illegally assessed or collected under the Revenue Acts of 1916, 1917, or 1918, regardless of whether or not such claim was barred in whole or in part at the time of the passage of this act will be considered on its merits if presented within the four-year period specified in the foregoing section.

ASSESSMENTS.

Sec. 1322. That all internal revenue taxes, except as provided in section 250 of this Act, shall, notwithstanding the provisions of section 3182 of the Revised Statutes or any other provision of law, be assessed within four years after such taxes became due, but in the case of fraud with intent to evade tax or willful attempt in any manner to defeat or evade tax, such tax may be assessed at any time.

3102 Art. 43. Section 1322 R. S. (assessments) retroactive.—This section is retroactive in its effect. Under its terms capital stock taxes may be assessed at any time within a period of four years after such taxes became due, notwithstanding the fact that assessment may have been barred by a prior statute at the time of passage of the Revenue Act of 1921.

3103 The new period of limitation embodied in the section also has the effect of extending for the same period the time within which the 25 per cent and 50 per cent penalties imposed by section 3176 of the Revised Statutes may be assessed.

Decision of the United States Court of Claims.

Act of September 8, 1916.

Washington Water Power Company vs. United States.

(February 14, 1921.)

3105 1. Validity of tax.—The capital stock tax is an excise tax imposed 3000 upon a corporation with respect to the carrying on or doing business by the corporation, which is a proper subject for taxation by the Government, and within its constitutional powers of taxation.

3106 2. Payment in advance.—The capital stock imposed by the Act of September 8, 1916, is not illegal because assessed and collected in advance under regulations of the Treasury Department, the act, by Sections 407 and 409, contemplating that a corporation must pay a tax on its capital stock for the preceding year in order to do business for the coming year.

3107 3. Action to recover tax paid—Maintenance.—An action to recover a capital stock tax paid in advance, on the ground that advance payment was unauthorized, cannot be maintained where the tax became due and payable under the taxpayer's theory before suit was brought. (T. D. 3160, April 30, 1921.)

v.

LOUIS HECHT, JR., ET AL., Trustees, Plaintiffs, Defendants in Error.Error to the District Court of the United States for the District of Massachusetts.

3108 ANDERSON, J. These cases involve the validity of taxes imposed 3015 upon business organizations, commonly known as Massachusetts Trusts, under the Revenue Acts of 1916 (39 Stat. 789) and 1918 (40 Stat. 1057). Nos. 1551 and 1552 involve the Haymarket Trust and we treat them as one case. The cases were argued as a group and may be conveniently dealt with in one opinion. The chief business of the Haymarket and Hecht Trusts is that of owning, managing and leasing real estate, and distributing the net income to its shareholders. These concerns deny that they are associations within the meaning of the statutes.

3109 The Crocker Trust is a large manufacturing concern. It admits that it is an association within the meaning of the statutes, but it claims immunity from the tax on the ground that it has no capital stock within their meaning.

3110 The court below sustained the plaintiff's contentions in each case, and the government brought the cases here on writs of error.

3111 The fundamental question is whether the plaintiffs are associations having a capital stock represented by shares, within the meaning of these provisions. So far as the issues in these cases are concerned, the provisions of the two statutes seem to us to be equivalent, for there is now presented no controverted question as to the amount of any tax; we therefore need not consider the different amounts exempt under the two statutes or the retroactive and substitutional effect of the 1918 statute.

3112 The Act of 1916 levies a tax on associations "now or hereafter organized in the United States for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares . . . with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such association . . . equivalent to 50 cents for each $1,000 of the fair value of its capital stock, and in estimating the value of capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included. . . . The amount of such annual tax shall in all cases be computed on the basis of the fair average value of the capital stock for the preceding year,"—with an exemption not now material.

3113 The Act of 1918, section 1, includes associations under the term "corporation"; and in section 1000 (a) provides for an annual "special excise tax with respect to carrying on or doing business equivalent to $1 for each $1,000 of so much of the fair average value of its capital stock for the preceding year," etc. "In estimating the value of capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included."

3114 Both acts are conceded to levy an excise tax with respect to doing business, the amount of the tax being measured by the average value of the capital stock, including any surplus and undivided profits as a part thereof. All the plaintiffs agree that they are doing business within the meaning of these acts.

3115 While we recognize that in applying this and every other tax statute reasonable doubts must be resolved in favor of the taxpayer (Gould v. Gould, 245 U. S. 151) yet revenue acts are not penal statutes; the Government is not to be crippled by strained and unnatural construction of tax statutes fairly plain.

Cliquot's Champagne, 3 Wall. 114, 145.

United States v. Hodson, 10 Wall. 395.

Worth Brothers v. Lederer, 251 U. S. 507.

3116 Taxation of this general kind began with the passage of the Act of August 5, 1909 (36 Stat. 11, 112), which imposed a tax "on every corporation, joint-stock company or association organized for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares . . . now or hereafter organized under the laws of the United States or of any state or territory . . . with respect to the carrying on or doing business by . . . such corporation, joint-stock company or association . . . equivalent to one per cent upon the entire net income over and above $5,000," etc.

3117 This statute, passed before we had the 16th amendment, was attacked as an income tax and therefore unconstitutional. But the Supreme Court held that it was not an income tax, and sustained it as an excise tax.

Flint v. Stone Tracy Co. (1911), 220 U. S. 107. It was measured by the income,—not as under the present law, on the capital used.

3118 In Eliot v. Freeman, 220 U. S. 178, the court at the same time held the Act of 1909 not to cover two typical Massachusetts real estate trusts, on the ground that, “The language of the act, ‘now or hereafter organized under the laws of the United States,’ etc., imports an organization deriving power from statutory enactment.” Organized as purely non-statutory, they were exempt.

3119 The gist of the present case is whether the statutes of 1916 and 1918 are, as the plaintiffs contend, to be given the same interpretation in favor of exempting such organizations as was given by the Supreme Court to the Act of 1909.

3120 The government, on the other hand, contends that the language of the acts is plainly applicable to such organizations; that the history of the legislation shows that Congress intended to avoid the result reached in Eliot v. Freeman, supra, and that there are no applicable decisions of the courts supporting the plaintiffs’ position. We think the government is right, and that the court below erred in holding that such organizations are not associations within the meaning of these Revenue Acts.

3121 The language of the statutes, supra, seems so plain that repetition and paraphrasing would add nothing.

3122 The history of the legislation lends emphasis to the initial impression of its import. For it is elementary, that when language used in an earlier statute has in application received judicial construction, change in language in later analogous legislation imports legislative purpose to attain a different result. If Congress had intended the acts in question to have the restricted application given by the Supreme Court to the Act of 1909, there was no conceivable reason for changing the words “organized under the laws of the United States or of any state,” etc., etc., to “organized in the United States.”

3123 We think it plain that by this change Congress intended in the later acts to include non-statutory organizations, and to avoid the restrictions found by the Supreme Court in the words of the 1909 act. We cannot accord with the learned District Judge in his view that “it is hard to discover any substantial distinction between the scope of” the Act of 1909 and the Acts of 1916 and 1918 “as far as ‘associations’ are concerned.” We think there is a vital and controlling distinction.

3124 Eliot v. Freeman was decided in 1911. In 1913 an income tax act was passed (38 Stat. 114, 166), imposing such tax “on every corporation, joint-stock company, or association, and every insurance company organized in the United States, no matter how created or organized, not including partnerships.” The original case of Crocker v. Malley, 249 U. S. 223, the plaintiffs’ chief reliance, arose under this statute. Sitting as District Court, Judge Bingham, in July, 1917, held the Wachusett Realty Company, the predecessor of the present Crocker Association, a trust, according in that regard with Judge Hale in a decision made on May 23, 1914, in the case of Crocker v. Crocker.

3125 But in this court (250 Fed. 817) the organization was held an association within the meaning of the statute. The Supreme Court reversed this court, adopting the view of the District Court. The decisions, both in the Supreme and District Courts, against the government, turned upon the fact that the shareholders had no real control over the trust estate; so that it therefore fell within the doctrine of Williams v. Milton, 215 Mass. 1 from the opinion in which Mr. Justice Holmes quoted (249 U. S. 232) as follows:

"There can be little doubt that in Massachusetts this arrangement would be held to create a trust and nothing more. 'The certificate holders . . . are in no way associated together, nor is there any provision in the [instrument] for any meeting to be held by them. The only act which (under the [declaration of] trust) they can do is to consent to an alteration . . . of the trust' and to the other matters that we have mentioned. They are confined to giving or withholding assent, and the giving or withholding it 'is not to be had in a meeting, but is to be given by them individually.' 'The sole right of the cestuis que trust is to have the property administered in their interest by the trustees, who are the masters, to receive income while the trust lasts, and their share of the corpus when the trust comes to an end'."

3126 The trustees of the Wachusett concern held title, subject to a long lease, to eight mills, and to the stock of the corporation operating these mills, and distributed the net income to the eight beneficiaries of the trust. The trustees were not managing the mills; the organization was not a business enterprise within the normal use of that term. The beneficiaries were "admitted not to be partners in any sense . . . have no joint action or interest and no control over the fund." 249 U. S. 234. The court, in referring to the phrase in the statute "no matter how created or organized," says:

"The trust that has been described would not fall under any familiar conception of a joint-stock association, whether formed under a statute or not." Citing Smith v. Anderson, 15 Ch. Div. 247, 273, 277, 282.

3127 Moreover, the tax then sought to be sustained was levied, at least in substantial part, in respect of dividends received from a corporation that itself was taxable upon its net income. The court therefore held that "as the plaintiffs undeniably are trustees, if they are subjected to a double liability the language of the statute must make the intention clear. Gould v. Gould, 245 U. S. 151, 153."

3128 It is thus apparent that the Wachusett Realty Company was in organization and purpose but an ordinary inter vivos trust for eight beneficiaries; also that the tax sought to be imposed would have resulted in double taxation, never easily inferred. It was in nature, and in relations to its shareholders and to society at large, radically different from the plaintiff's organizations, described below. That decision lends no support to the plaintiffs' contention.

3129 Next in chronological order was the stamp tax provision of the Act of October 22, 1914 (38 Stat. 745, 775). This act imposed a stamp tax on "each original issue . . . of certificates of stock by any association, company or corporation." This court in Malley v. Bowditch, 259 Fed. 809, held such tax applicable on the original issue of certificates or shares of the Pepperell Manufacturing Company "a manufacturing company organized in the form of a trust under the common law, and deriving none of its rights, qualities or benefits from any statute." The crucial question in that case, as in the case at bar, was whether the organization was an association within the meaning of the Federal Tax Act. The case is, in essentials, difficult, if not impossible, to distinguish from the cases at bar. The cogent opinion of Judge Brown is applicable to most aspects of the present problem. It might well be quoted from at length.

3130 The Revenue Acts of 1916 and 1918, supra, both in their income and excise tax provisions, adopt the same broad phrasing as to joint stock companies or associations "organized in the United States," thus showing a continuing legislative purpose to avoid the limitation found by the Supreme Court in Eliot v. Freeman, supra, arising out of the language "organized under the laws of the United States or of any state," etc.

3131 Plainly, there is nothing in this history of legislative and judicial dealing with the matter, lending support to plaintiffs' contention that Congress intended to exempt such business organizations as the plaintiffs. Rather does the history support the natural construction of the acts in question.

3132 We find nothing else in the history of the legislation concerning this and analogous forms of taxes, nor in other cases cited, tending to uphold the plaintiffs' contentions or otherwise calling for analysis and discussion.

3133 A brief description of the three plaintiffs' organizations will conveniently precede our final considerations. We take first the Hecht case, agreeing with learned counsel that it is the strongest case for the plaintiff.

3134 On superficial examination, this organization looks somewhat like a family affair, making provision for members of the Hecht family, immature or otherwise unfitted for business responsibilities. But, on analysis, we find the organization is a very genuine business concern.

3135 In 1899, members of the Hecht family holding as tenants in common real estate on Federal Street and Atlantic Avenue, Boston, conveyed it to Jacob Hecht, who declared a trust for twelve beneficiaries all named Hecht, who received certificates transferable like ordinary corporation shares, but with a restriction in favor of lineal descendants of Elias Hecht, and, on certain contingencies not now important, to be offered to the trustee before sold to an outsider. The restriction is analogous to the close-corporation provision dealt with in New England Trust Co. v. Abbott, 162 Mass. 148. It is in no way peculiar to a trust as distinguished from a corporation. While the Hecht trustee has broad general powers of management, including power to buy and sell, the seat of real power is with the shareholders and not with the trustee; for three-fourths of the shareholders may remove the trustee, three-fifths may terminate the trust or give him binding instructions, and also, —what is of vital importance,—modify the instrument in any particular. This power to modify covers, potentially, the right to extend or change the business so as to make it as large and as corporate in form and function as the Crocker concern, which admits that it has evolved into an association. The Hecht organization is not a trust within the doctrine of the Massachusetts decisions. Williams v. Milton, 215 Mass. 1. Compare Crocker v. Malley, 249 U. S. 223; In re Associated Trust, 222 Fed. 1012. The Hecht trustee has made annual statements showing the assets, liabilities and net income, and kept books, containing a capital account and surplus account. Its stockholders have, sensibly and we think legally, treated their dividends like corporation dividends, in their income tax returns. They have thus by conduct, presumably under the advice of counsel, denied that they are partners taxable under the Act of 1918, sec. 218 (a).

3136 Parenthetically, we note that counsel do not contend that the shareholders of any of these plaintiff associations are partners. There is no suggestion that any of the shareholders in any of the plaintiff organizations have made, propose to make, or could make, tax returns as partners in these business concerns. Manifestly, counsel would deprecate such result as imposing burdens probably much heavier,—certainly difficult if not impossible of ascertainment,—upon the shareholders in such organizations. Their quest is tax exemption, not tax substitution. Compare Dana v. Treasurer, 227 Mass. 562, 565; Frost v. Thompson, 219 Mass. 360.

3137 Plainly the Hecht Trust is quasi-corporate in form and power. It is an association within the meaning of the Revenue Acts.

3138 The Haymarket Trust, both in genesis and organization, is even more like a corporation. It has none of the aspects of a family affair. It started by securing from the investing public $250,000 on solicited subscriptions, the trustee paying a commission of $2,500 to the promoter for thus raising the capital for doing business. The declaration of trust provides for nearly all the machinery and proceedings of an ordinary corporation. We hold it also to be quasi-corporate and an association within the meaning of the Revenue Acts.

3139 Learned counsel in the Croker case admit that it is an association, but claim exemption on the ground that the concern has no capital stock. This association was evolved from the Wachusett Realty Trust, above referred to. As there pointed out, the shareholders had under the Wachusett declaration no power to amend without the assent of the trustees. But in June, 1917, shareholders and trustees both agreeing, the organization was radically altered. Its name was changed and in express terms it agreed that its form should thereafter be "changed to that of an association," with power to take over and carry on the extensive manufacturing business previously carried on by the corporation whose stock it had held, or any substantially similar business.

3140 The new organization conforms closely to the corporation model,—in powers, in official personnel, and in methods of doing business. It has issued 96,000 shares of no par value, transferable like corporation stock, but with a restriction somewhat like that in the case of New England Trust Co. v. Abbott, supra.

3141 Conceding that it is an association with transferable shares, this plaintiff yet seeks exemption on the ground that it has attached no par value to its 96,000 shares. It admits that if it had attached a par value of, say, $100 to each of these shares, making a capital account of $9,600,000, a little less than is shown on its balance sheet of July 1, 1917, where the interest of the shareholders is put down as $9,877,105.16,—the concern would have had a capital stock represented by shares, and thus be an association within the meaning of the Revenue Acts above.

3142 We cannot adopt this scholastic and artificial distinction. Cf. Worth Bros. v. Lederer, 251 U. S. 507, 510. It is for present purposes immaterial whether the stock of a corporation, of an association, or a joint-stock company has or has not par value. Compare Gen. Laws of Mass. chap. 156, secs. 14, 15, 47. Stockholders, whether a definite value is or is not attributed to their shares, severally or in mass, own beneficially the net value of the corporation's assets,—that is, whatever may remain after discharging debts.

3143 Congress intended that this tax should be measured by the average amount of capital used during the tax year in doing the business. The phrase in the statutes as to "including surplus and undivided profits" puts beyond doubt the question of the Congressional intent to measure this tax by business and financial realities, not by book-keeping forms or mere names. "Fair value" and "fair average value" carry the same notion. Cf. Wright v. Georgia R. R. et al., 216 U. S. 420, 424.

3144 The Croker Association cannot escape taxation, falling on its competitors, by adopting the modern theory of no par value for its stock. The presumption is against such immunity; it savors of special privilege. Compare United States v. Dickson, 15 Pet. 141, 165.

3145 It is a matter of common knowledge that, for most business and financial purposes, all the larger organizations of this sort have for years been indistinguishable from corporations. One might almost say that they are a device under which parties make their own corporation code. Business concerns so organized have come to occupy a large field in industry and in finance. At least two substantial text-books have been written on the law concerning such organizations and dealing with their advantages for general business purposes. See Sears, Trust Estates as Business Companies, 1st Ed. 1912, 2d Ed. 1921. Note the long list of industries so organized referred to on pages VI and VII of the preface of the 1921 edition. See Wrightington on Unincorporated Associations, 1916. In Dana v. Treasurer, 227 Mass. 562, 565, it appears that the Amoskeag Manufacturing Company, commonly known to be one of the largest enterprises in New England, is so organized. The Pepperell Manufacturing Company, before this court in Malley v. Bowditch, supra, had a capitalization of over $7,500,000; the Crocker Trust operates large paper manufacturing mills, employing about 1,000 men, with gross assets of over $10,000,000.

3146 Such concerns have long been recognized as quasi-corporate in form. In 1904, Chief Justice Knowlton in the Massachusetts Supreme Court said of a typical one of them, in Hussey v. Arnold, 185 Mass. 202:

"The agreement creating the trust has peculiar provisions. The object of it, apparently, was to obtain for the associates most of the advantages belonging to corporations, without the authority of any legislative act, and with freedom from the restrictions and regulations imposed by law upon corporations."

3147 No amplification of words could more accurately and adequately characterize this sort of business organization. Other cases in the Massachusetts reports concerning them abound in similar observations as to their resemblance to corporations. Williams v. Milton, 215 Mass. 1, and cases cited. See Williams v. Boston, 208 Mass. 497; Phillips v. Blatchford, 137 Mass. 510, 515; Tyrrell v. Washburn, 6 Allen, 466, 474.

3148 But the proposition that they are quasi-corporate in form need not rest merely on our own analysis or on observations found in the decisions of the Massachusetts courts. It has now been distinctly recognized by the Massachusetts legislature; they have a statutory status as associations, not as trusts or as partnerships.

3149 In the decision below, these organizations have been treated as having no status not arising out of the common law; so also in the briefs of the government and of counsel for the defendant. It seems to have been overlooked that they have acquired in Massachusetts a distinct statutory basis. This, if the question before us were otherwise doubtful, would seem to us of much significance. See General Laws of Mass. (1921), c. 182, codifying earlier legislation of 1909, 1913, 1914, 1915, and 1916. Compare also Acts of 1921, c. 368. The title of this chapter is "Voluntary Associations."

3150 In section 1 of this act, dealing with definitions, it is provided: "‘Association,’ a voluntary association under a written instrument or a declaration of trust, the beneficial interest under which is divided into transferable certificates of participation or shares." This definition exactly fits the plaintiffs at bar.

3151 In section 2, it is provided that the written instrument or declaration creating the association shall be filed with the Commissioner of Corporations, and with the clerk of every town where such association has a usual place of business. Section 5 requires the Commissioner to transmit to the Secretary of State copies of such instruments or of any amendments filed during the previous year, to be printed as a public document. The instruments creating such associations are thus made even more generally accessible than are ordinary corporation charters.

3152 Sections 3 and 4 and 7 to 11 deal specially with associations owning stock of public utility companies; they need no present comment.

3153 Section 6,—a re-enactment of the Act of 1916, c. 184, passed subsequent to all the Massachusetts decisions cited and relied upon by the plaintiffs,—has probably the most direct bearing on our present problem; it is as follows:

"An association may be sued in an action at law for debts and other obligations or liabilities contracted or incurred by the trustees, or by the duly authorized agents of such trustees, or by any duly authorized officer of the association, in performance of their respective duties under such written instruments or declarations of trust, and for any damages to persons or property resulting from the negligence of such trustees, agents or officers acting in the performance of their respective duties, and its property shall be subject to attachment and execution in like manner as if it were a corporation, and service of process upon one of the trustees shall be sufficient."

3154 Here is a distinct enactment that such associations shall be suable in like manner as if corporations. An organization described as an association and made generally liable "to attachment and execution in like manner as if it were a corporation" cannot easily be held a partnership or a trust.

3155 We are not called upon to deal with the confusing and perhaps irreconcilable decisions in the Massachusetts courts concerning the nature and legal incidents of these associations, most of which were made before the passage of this Act of 1916, or with the effect of this legislation upon their powers and liabilities,—except so far as pertains to our single problem of determining whether these associations are liable to Federal taxation under the Revenue Acts, supra. We intimate no opinion on any other question. But when a Massachusetts statute has described such organizations as associations, and has put their liability to ordinary creditors apparently on the same basis as that of corporations, we have no hesitation in reaching the conclusion that they have now been given a statutory basis as quasi-corporate, and that they are associations within the meaning of the Federal Statutes, as well as under the Massachusetts Statutes. We cannot hold Massachusetts associations, liable under Massachusetts Statutes to ordinary creditors as though corporations, not liable under Federal Statutes to taxation imposed generally on corporations, joint-stock companies and associations.

3156 It may be argued that these statutes are distinguished from corporation acts in that their chief functions are to regulate or restrict, whereas corporation acts also empower. Technically, that may be so. But the powers of these voluntary associations are in many respects greater, and the regulations and restrictions less, than in the case of corporations. Broadly speaking, their promoters select and define such powers and provide such limitations of liability, as they desire. Cf. Hussey v. Arnold, supra. If and in so far, therefore, as the tax in question is directed at "the privilege" or power of doing business through large organizations,—and particularly at the power to obtain money from the outside public on transferable shares,—voluntary association offers at least as much "privilege" as does any corporation form of organization. Associations are resorted to, not because thought weaker, but because thought stronger, than corporations.

3157 If, in construing the statutes, we may look at the policy Congress probably desired to adopt, it could not be overlooked that the plaintiffs' contention, if sustained, would amount to a discriminatory immunity in favor of a kind of business organization, the nature and activities of which have hitherto been the subject of much question and investigation. See the Report of the Tax Commissioner of Massachusetts on Voluntary Associations, under Resolves of 1911, c. 55,—a very interesting document,—in which Commissioner Trefry ably reviewed their origin, history and legal incidents, both in England and in this country; referring, passim, and particularly on page 13, to many other documents and legislative reports concerning them. See also a report of the Special Commission to Investigate Voluntary Associations, January, 1914, made under Mass. Resolves of 1912, c. 113. In the Resolve of 1911, c. 55, the Commissioner was required to make an investigation "with a view to determine" inter alia, "whether . . . their prohibition . . . is advisable in the public interest."

3158 There is, we think, no conceivable reason why Congress should have desired to favor organizations of this questioned sort by exempting them from taxation to which their competitors in corporate form are subjected. The presumption is plainly the other way. Modern corporation laws furnish adequate machinery for carrying on every legitimate form of business, including now that of dealing in real estate. See Gen. Laws of Mass. chap. 156, passim; sec. 7, authorizing real estate corporations. There is no present reason for resorting to this form of organization, except on the theory that more "privileges of doing business" may be thus acquired than by conforming to our broad and elastic corporation laws. To hold that Congress intended to discriminate in their favor would be to disregard the letter, the spirit and the reason of the acts.

3159 Our views accord with those expressed by Judge Page in Chicago Title & Trust Co. v. Smietanka, 275 Fed. 60. The reasoning of Judge Morton in the Associated Trust case, 222 Fed. 1012, where he reached the conclusion that such an association was an "unincorporated company" within the meaning of the Bankruptcy Act, seems to us to sustain our conclusions rather than those reached by the learned Judge in the instant cases.

3160 We summarize our conclusions as follows:

- (1) The natural interpretation of the language used in the Acts of 1916 and 1918 would include plaintiffs' organizations as associations.
- (2) The contrast between the language used in the Act of 1909 "organized under the laws of the United States or any State"; etc., and in the Act of 1916 and 1918 "organized in the United States," shows that Congress intended to avoid the result reached in 1911 by the Supreme Court in Eliot v. Freeman.

(3) The manifest general purpose of Congress was to tax business deriving powers and making profits from association, particularly business done by organizations getting all or a substantial part of their capital on transferable shares, such as are commonly sold to the investing public.

(4) Prior to the passage of either the Revenue Act of 1916 or 1918, the Massachusetts Legislature had by the Acts of 1909 and 1914 expressly recognized such organizations as associations. Congress used the word "association" as the Massachusetts Legislature had previously defined and used it.

(5) By the Act of 1916, the Massachusetts Legislature made such associations liable to creditors in like manner as if corporations; by analogy they have similar liability to the Federal Government for taxes.

(6) The case of Malley v. Crocker, 249 U. S. 223, makes, on analysis of the Wachusett Trust and the reasoning of the court, not for the plaintiffs but for the government. One ground of that decision was to avoid unjust, discriminatory, double taxation; whereas, to sustain the plaintiffs' contention, would create discriminatory immunity for a large class of business organizations, thus giving them an unfair advantage over their incorporated competitors.

(7) The conclusion now reached accords with the reasoning and decision of this court in Malley v. Bowditch, 259 Fed. 809.

In each case the judgment of the District Court is reversed and the case is remanded to that court for further proceedings not inconsistent with this opinion; the plaintiff in error recovers costs in this court.

3161 Cases reported above are in the U. S. Supreme Court: Malley vs. Howard being No. 533, Casey vs. Howard being No. 534, Malley vs. Crocker being No. 587, and Malley vs. Hecht being No. 532, all October Term, 1922.

DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

Central Union Trust Company of New York, Plaintiff,

vs.

Wm. H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York, Defendant.

Memorandum Opinion.

3162 GRUBB, J.—This case presents for decision of meaning of the words 3001 “capital stock,” used in Section 407 Title IV Excise Tax Act of 3034 September 8, 1916. The Plaintiff contends that the true meaning of the words is the paid in capital, together with surplus and undivided profits, less liabilities; or the net value of the capital assets of the corporation, after deducting its debts. The Collector applied a different method of reaching the value of the “capital stock” of the plaintiff corporation, and one which increased the amount of the tax due over that which would have been due according to the method contended for by the Plaintiff. If the method contended for by the Plaintiff is not a correct one, the Plaintiff offers no criticism of that actually adopted by the Collector; so that the single question presented is whether the method, for which the Plaintiff contends is the only proper one under the statute.

3163 The method, which the Plaintiff says should have been adopted by the Collector in measuring the tax, takes into consideration only the net worth of the tangible assets of the corporation, and does not take into consideration such elements as franchises, good-will, existing contracts, and established business. The tax imposed by the statute is not a property tax. It is an excise tax imposed upon the privilege of doing business in corporate form, as a going concern. The value of this privilege is the obvious way to measure the tax. The value of the business of a going concern depends upon its good-will, favorable contracts, amount of business done and its profitable character; as well as upon the value of its tangible property less its debts. It would seem wrong to eliminate these factors of value, if the tax is to be measured by the value of the enterprise as a going concern. They enter into the market value of the share stock, and are represented in the earning capacity of the corporation. It would therefore seem to be competent for the Collector to consider, in estimating the value of “capital stock,” in addition to the net worth of the corporation, as shown by its books, such elements of intangible value as good will, favorable contracts, amount and character as to profits of the business done, and also past earnings and the market value of the stock. The method insisted upon by the Plaintiff as being the only correct one, would eliminate all these factors from the computation, and base it exclusively upon the paid in capital, together with surplus and undivided profits. The character of the tax and the subject matter of its imposition seem to me to forbid such an exclusion unless it is made necessary by the language of the statute itself.

3164 If the words "capital stock" had but one meaning, viz:—the money paid and property contributed to the corporation by its shareholders, the Plaintiff's contention that by the unambiguous terms of the statute, only paid in capital together with surplus and undivided profits could be considered in the measurement of the value upon which the tax is estimated, would be correct. The words "capital stock" have been so construed by some authorities, when employed in statutes imposing taxes. It is also true that they have by other courts been construed to have a different and broader meaning, when used in acts of the same character. The conclusion to be drawn from the authorities would seem to be that the signification to be accorded these words is to be determined in each such act, by the character of the particular act under construction and by the language used and by the context. They may mean either net worth, as shown by the books, i. e., the value of the tangible corporate assets, less liabilities; or they may mean the value of the entire enterprise as a going concern, including franchises, good-will, etc., as represented by the excess value of the market price of the share stock over and above its book value. In each act, the meaning of the words is to be ascertained by reference to the language used and to the purpose of the act containing them.

3165 The act in question provides for the annual payment of "a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation, equivalent to fifty cents for each one thousand dollars of the fair value of its capital stock and in estimating the value of its capital stock the surplus and undivided property shall be included. . . . the amount of such annual tax shall in all cases be computed on the basis of the fair average value of the capital stock for the preceding year." The words employed indicate rather an appraisal of the value of the "capital stock" arrived at by considering various factors of value, by the exercise of judgment; than an auditor's exact determination of the value of the net worth of tangible assets, taken from the corporate books of account. If the value of good-will and franchises, earnings and market value of shares, are eliminated as factors of value, then the computation of value would in no sense be an estimation; the value would be the exact value rather than the fair value; and it would have been made determinable as of the end of a fiscal year, rather than by "the fair average value of the capital stock for the preceding year."

3166 The act provides that "in estimating the value of capital stock the surplus and undivided profits shall be included." Plaintiff contends that these words restrict the computation to the par value of the capital stock, plus surplus and undivided profits. I think the purpose of the insertion of these words was to make certain that these two factors should be considered, but not to eliminate other factors equally as important. If the purpose was to so narrow the elements to be considered, there was apt language to accomplish this purpose in previous congressional legislation. Act of Congress, October 22, 1914—Section 3.

3167 The language and context seem more favorable to the defendant's interpretation than to that of the Plaintiff, since they imply an estimation to be based on judgment exercised, rather than the mere computation of an accountant.

3168 The legislative discussion of the Act upon the floor of the House of Representatives and the statements of the Chairman of the Committee in charge of the Bill, are persuasive that the Defendant's construction, was that which was in the minds of the legislators. Congressional Record—House of Representatives, September 7, 1916, 64th Congress—First Session, Vol. 53, part 13, page 14,118.

3169 After the Act of September 8, 1916, had received from the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the construction now contended for by the Defendant, Congress enacted the Revenue Act of 1918, containing Section 1000-a, in the same language as of Section 407 of the Act of September 8, 1916, except that the rate was doubled and the deduction lowered. The Senate had amended the House bill, so as to make the basis of the tax the amount of the net assets shown on the books as of the close of the preceding income tax year. This amendment was rejected by the House, and the Senate receded from it in conference. This is persuasive that the words "fair average value of the capital stock" were not thought by that Congress to be synonymous with the net worth of physical assets as shown by the corporate books.

3170 For the reasons stated, I do not think the construction advanced by the Plaintiff is a correct one. I believe the Collector was confronted with the proposition of determining the value of the corporation's business and property as an entirety and as a going concern, and in doing so had the right to look to the net worth of the corporate assets, including its surplus and undivided profits, as shown by its books; also to the franchises, good-will, outstanding contracts, the earning capacity of the corporation and the market value of its share stock over the preceding year, and, after having done so, was authorized to arrive at a value for its entire capital stock, representing the enterprise as a going concern, according to his best judgment; and that the value, so ascertained, would be the "fair average value of the capital stock for the preceding year," by which the tax by the terms of the statute is to be measured. This the Collector did, and this conclusion requires the direction of a verdict in favor of the Defendant, and it is so ordered.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

Revenue Act of 1916. Equally applicable to 1918 and 1921 Acts.
January 8, 1923.

As a measure of the tax the fair average value of the capital stock of a corporation is the equivalent of the fair average value of the enterprise in its entirety as a going concern.

UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE SECOND CIRCUIT.

Central Union Trust Company of New York,
Plaintiff-in-error,
against William H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York,
Defendant-in-error.

Writ of error to judgment entered in the District Court for the Southern District of New York.

3171 The United States assessed a tax against plaintiff pursuant to Section 3162 407 of the Revenue Act of 1916 (39 Stat., 756, 789-790).

3172 The applicable language of that statute is as follows:

"Every corporation, joint stock company or association now or hereafter organized in the United States for profit and having a capital stock represented by shares * * * shall pay annually a special excise tax with respect to the carrying on or doing business by such corporation * * * equivalent to fifty cents for each $1,000 of the fair value of its capital stock, and in estimating the value of capital stock, the surplus and undivided profits shall be included. * * * The amount of such annual tax shall in all cases be computed on the basis of the fair average value of the capital stock for the preceding year."

3173 The tax assessed was based upon undisputed facts, whereof we regard the following as crucial, viz.: at date of return the par of plaintiff's capital stock was $5,000,000, its surplus $15,000,000, and its average undivided profits (in round numbers) $2,000,000; the par value of each share was $100, and the book values upwards of $400; for five years prior to return, dividends had annually been declared of never less than 50 per cent, and during the year preceding return the average market price of each share of stock sold was $788.75. Good will is not carried as an asset.

3174 A tax was admittedly due in an amount equal to 50 cents for each $1,000 of the aggregate of its outstanding capital stock, surplus and average undivided profits, less the statutory deduction. In other words the tangible book assets were used as the basis for tax computation.

3175 The Commissioner of Internal Revenue assessed a tax reached by using as basis for computation, what defendant calls the "Fair value of total capital stock, i. e., 50,000 shares at $575.97 per share."

3176 The additional tax resulting plaintiff paid under protest, and brought this action to recover. The trial court directed judgment for defendant [¶3170]; this writ followed.

Arthur H. Van Brunt for plaintiff-in-error;
Richard S. Holmes, Special Ass't U. S. Attorney, for defendant-in-error.

3177 Hough, C. J.—Admittedly the statute created an excise or privilege tax, not one directly laid on property. Admittedly also the tax is to be measured by property; and it states the philosophy or fundamentals of this difference between the Treasury and the taxpayer, to enquire—Whose property? That of the Trust Company, or that of its shareholders?

3178 If one is to pay a tax measured by property, it assuredly seems more consonant with philosophical jurisprudence to measure the same by the property of the taxpayer, rather than by the possessions of another. But taxes are not philosophical products; they result from an assumed necessity, and their incidence is determined by probable ease of collection, politics or partisanship, and other consideration of convenience or emotion.

3179 Since it is familiar law that only the results of legislative action and not the motives of the legislators are fit subjects for judicial enquiry, it follows that any and every system of tax-laying prescribed by competent authority must be given its intended scope, if by any reasonable interpretation of the words used that end can be reached, and no constitutional limitations are infringed.

3180 This reduces the present enquiry to the question whether Congress meant that in measuring this excise tax, regard should be had only to what the corporation owned in its corporate capacity, and capable of admeasurement permitting entry on its books of account, i. e., its tangible assets; or whether there should be taken into consideration the public opinion, reflected by the open market, of what it was worth to share in the handling of those tangible assets, i. e., its good will, good management and established capacity for earning profit.

3181 But no subject can long be treated by legislatures and courts without developing a technique, and converting words of frequent use into formulae; so that statutory interpretation is often, if not usually, a search after the permitted meanings of certain words, commonly used yet often used without any knowledge of the legal formulae by which they may be surrounded.

3182 Thus the formal question at bar is—what did Congress mean by “the fair value of its capital stock,” as applied to a company of which its shareholders think so highly that they regard each share as worth nearly twice what they would get for it on liquidation in accordance with honestly and intelligently kept books.

3183 If “capital stock” is a phrase regularly given in legal formulae a fixed, definite and certain meaning, that meaning is oftentimes conclusively presumed to be what Congress meant in the premises; and what the legislators or most of them intended to accomplish by the phrase is immaterial.

3185 That past generations of corporate taxation, and of contests over the same have produced any general consensus of judicial or legislative opinion on this subject we cannot think true.

3186 There is certainly no authority limiting Congress to this meaning, while the states display the usual variety in opinion.

3187 To give illustrations, without exhausting search: New York has not departed from People vs. Coleman 126 N. Y., 433, and holds that “capital stock" of a corporation signifies what is owned and held by the Company in its corporate character; into which franchise, etc., do not enter, although those very items form "a very essential part of the shareholders' capital stock." (See the same view in People vs. Sohmer, 179 A. D., 721, aff'd 222 N. Y., 545.) That property rather than excise taxes are considered in any given case is not material, if the search is for definitions; except as any definition is apt to be influenced by environment; and the definition of Finch, J. in the Coleman case was approvingly quoted in Home etc. Bank vs Des Moines, 205 U. S., 503.

3191 In Kentucky, the Supreme Court of the United States, found that the legislature meant by capital stock "the entire property real and personal, tangible and intangible, all assets on hand and (the Company's) franchise as well," and expressed no objection to this concept of the phrase. (Henderson etc. Co. vs. Commonwealth, 166 U. S., 150; affirming 99 Ky., 623.) That is to say, each state can define for itself; and the right of definition is primarily in the legislature.

3192 In Ohio also the Supreme Court found without objection that the state scheme regarded "capital stock" as representing "not only the tangible property, but also the intangible, including therein all corporate franchises and all contracts, privileges and good will of the concern." (Adams etc. Co. vs. Ohio, 166 U. S., 185).

3193 Wisconsin has perhaps stated the possibilities of the phrase most conveniently for the legislator, by declaring that "capital stock" may apply to one or another of three mental concepts, (1) the stockholders' shares, (2) the corporate property, (3) a mere measure of size of corporation as a test for graduating taxes (First National Bank vs. Douglas County, 124 Wis., 15). The lack of fixity of meaning, the absence of any agreement in definition shown by the foregoing examples (which might be much extended) constrain to the belief that "capital stock" is a term plastic to say the least, and compelling its interpreter to look first to the context for a meaning that has not been reduced to any rigid formula.

3194 We do not think that making the basis of computation "The fair value" of capital stock advances the matter; and we are sure that whether one speaks of a tax on property or a tax measured by property, such variation in tax kind works per se no change in the meaning of the words "capital stock." "Fair" value does not import guesswork, and unless incompetence or worse be imputed to the assessor, the phrase is the exact equivalent of the "actual value" of the Coleman case.

3195 But when the statute speaks of "estimating" capital stock, and of arriving at the "fair average value" thereof for a year—the words are so inappropriate to the process of transcribing book values, that an inference is irresistible of some other process being within the legislative intent.

3198 If, as we find, the result reached by the assessor was and is consonant with such an examination and appraisalment, the judgment below [¶3170] was right.

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

1916, 1918, (and 1921) Acts.

June 1, 1923.

To tax a domestic corporation whose capital is employed in whole or in part in the export trade is not unconstitutional as imposing a tax on exports.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT: SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

National Paper & Type Company, Plaintiff,

against

William H. Edwards, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York, Defendant.

Lord, Day &amp; Lord, Attorneys for Plaintiff.

William Hayward, U. S. Attorney, for the defendant. Richard S. Holmes, Special Assistant U. S. Attorney and Chester A. Bennett, Special Attorney.

3199 MACK, Circuit Judge:—This is a suit to recover taxes paid under 3001 protest. The amended complaint sets forth two alleged causes of 3015 action. The first relates to a payment of $487.50 alleged to have been exacted under §407 of Title IV of the Act of Congress approved September 8, 1916; and the second relates to a payment of $581.50 alleged to have been exacted under §1000 of Title X of the Revenue Act of 1918.
The pertinent provisions of the Acts in question are set forth in the margin.
[So far as here material the 1916, 1918, and 1921 (§3000) Acts are similar.]*
It is contended that the capital stock tax imposed by these Acts is unconstitutional as applied to the plaintiff corporation, the business of which is confined to the exportation of goods from the United States to foreign countries and the sale of goods to export commission merchants in this country, with the intent and purpose that the same should be exported, and with the result that such goods are in fact exported. It is alleged that the tax as applied to the plaintiff corporation is a tax on exports prohibited by Article I, §9, Clause 5 of the Constitution. The defendant moves for judgment on the pleadings on the ground that the facts alleged are not sufficient to constitute a cause of action.

3200 The tax in question is in form an excise tax on the privilege of doing business as a corporation measured by the fair average value of the capital stock of the corporation for the preceding year. Washington Water Power Co. v. United States, 56 Ct. Cl. 76 [¶3105]; Flint v. Stone Tracy Co., 220 U. S. 107.

*The Government contends that the first as well as the second tax was levied under §1000 of the Revenue Act of 1918. But since no question is raised as to the amount of the tax, it is immaterial for the purposes of the present suit whether the tax was imposed under the Revenue Act of 1916 or 1918.

3201 In Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U. S. 165, the Supreme Court, in sustaining a federal tax on the net income of a domestic corporation derived from the business of shipping goods to foreign countries and there selling them, thus summarizes its previous decisions:

"The Constitution broadly empowers Congress not only 'to lay and collect taxes, duties, imposts and excises,' but also 'to regulate commerce with foreign nations.' So, if the prohibitory clause invoked by the plaintiff be not in the way, Congress undoubtedly has power to lay and collect such a tax as is here in question. That clause says, 'No tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State.' Of course it qualifies and restricts the power to tax as broadly conferred. But to what extent? The decisions of this court answer that it excepts from the range of that power articles in course of exportation, Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504, 507; the act or occupation of exporting, Brown v. Maryland, 12 Wheat, 419, 445; bills of lading for articles being exported, Fairbank v. United States, 181 U. S. 283; charter parties for the carriage of cargoes from state to foreign ports, United States v. Hvoslef, 237 U. S. 1; and policies of marine insurance on articles being exported,—such insurance being uniformly regarded as 'an integral part of the exportation' and the policy as 'one of the ordinary shipping documents,' Thames and Mersey Insurance Co. v. United States, 237 U. S. 19. In short, the court has interpreted the clause as meaning that exportation must be free from taxation, and therefore as requiring 'not simply an omission of a tax upon the articles exported, but also a freedom from any tax which directly burdens the exportation.' Fairbank v. United States, supra, pp. 292-293. And the court has indicated that where the tax is not laid on the articles themselves while in course of exportation the true test of its validity is whether it 'so directly and closely' bears on the 'process of exporting' as to be in substance a tax on the exportation. Thames and Mersey Insurance Co. v. United States, supra, p. 25. In this view it has been held that the clause does not condemn or invalidate charges or taxes, not laid on property while being exported, merely because they affect exportation indirectly or remotely. Thus a charge for stamps which each package of manufactured tobacco intended for export was required to bear before removal from the factory was upheld in Pace v. Burgess, 92 U. S. 372; and Turpin v. Burgess, 117 U. S. 504; and the application of a manufacturing tax on all filled cheese to cheese manufactured under contract for export, and actually exported, was upheld in Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418. In that case it was said, p. 427: 'The true construction of the constitutional provision is that no burden by way of tax or duty can be cast upon the exportation of articles, and does not mean that articles exported are relieved from the prior ordinary burdens of taxation which rest upon all property similarly situated. The exemption attaches to the export and not to the article before its exportation.'

3202 The Supreme Court then added that the income tax there in question was not laid on articles in the course of transportation or anything which inherently or by usage is embraced in transportation, or any of its processes. It was a tax laid generally on net income. While it could not be applied to any income which Congress had no power to tax, it was both nominally and actually a general tax. It was not laid on income from exportation because of its source, or in a discriminatory way, but just as it was laid on other income; exportation was affected only indirectly and remotely. If articles manufactured and intended for export were subject to taxation under general laws up to the time they were put in the course of exportation, the conclusion was unavoidable that the net income from the venture when completed was likewise subject to taxation under general laws.

3203 In a companion case, United States Glue Co. v. Oak Creek, 247 U. S. 321, wherein the power of a state under a general income law to include income derived from transactions in interstate commerce, was sustained. The Supreme Court stated:

"It is settled that a State may not directly burden interstate commerce, either by taxation or otherwise. But a tax that only indirectly affects the profits or returns from such commerce is not within the rule. Thus, it was declared in Postal Telegraph Cable Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688, 695-696: 'It is settled that where by way of duties laid on the transportation of the subjects of interstate commerce, or on the receipts derived therefrom or on the occupation or business of carrying it on, a tax is levied by a State on interstate commerce, such taxation amounts to a regulation of such commerce and cannot be sustained. But property in a State belonging to a corporation, whether foreign or domestic, engaged in foreign or interstate commerce, may be taxed, or a tax may be imposed on the corporation on account of its property within a State, and may take the form of a tax for the privilege of exercising its franchises within the State, if the ascertainment of the amount is made dependent in fact on the value of its property situated within the State, (the exaction, therefore, not being susceptible of exceeding the sum which might be leviable directly thereon), and if payment be not made a condition precedent to the right to carry on the business, but its enforcement left to the ordinary means devised for the collection of taxes.' Again, in Atlantic & Pacific Telegraph Co. v. Philadelphia, 190 U. S. 160, 163, the court upon a review of numerous previous cases laid down certain propositions as established, among them these: (a) that the immunity of an individual or corporation engaged in interstate commerce from state regulation does not prevent a State from imposing ordinary property taxes upon property having a situs within its territory and employed in interstate commerce; and (b) that the franchise of a corporation, although that franchise be the business of interstate commerce, is, as a part of its property, subject to state taxation, provided at least the franchise be not derived from the United States. See also, St. Louis Southwestern Ry. Co. v. Arkansas, 235 U. S. 350, 365.

"Yet it is obvious that taxes imposed upon property or franchises employed in interstate commerce must be paid from the net returns of such commerce, and diminish them in the same sense that they are diminished by a tax imposed upon the net returns themselves.

"The distinction between direct and indirect burdens, with particular reference to a comparison between a tax upon the gross returns of carriers in interstate commerce and a general income tax imposed upon all inhabitants incidentally affecting carriers engaged in such commerce, was the subject of consideration in Philadelphia & Southern S. S. Co. v. Pennsylvania, 122 U. S. 326, 345, where the court, by Mr. Justice Bradley, said: 'The corporate franchises, the property, the business, the income of corporations created by a State may undoubtedly be taxed by the State; but in imposing such taxes care should be taken not to interfere with or hamper, directly or by indirection, interstate or foreign commerce, or any other matter exclusively within the jurisdiction of the Federal government'."*

3204 Under the principles above enunciated by the Supreme Court it would seem clear that the Federal Government may levy a general excise tax on the privilege of doing business in corporate form measured by the fair value of the capital stock and that the tax is not invalid in so far as, or because the property or capital is employed in the export trade.

3206 To this contention it may be answered that not only is the power of the Federal Government with reference to foreign commerce not as limited as is the power of a State with reference to interstate commerce, but under the decisions, a State may, in non-discriminatory manner, tax property, tangible or intangible, employed in interstate commerce, so long as it does not reach out for more than its fair share. A State may thus tax that proportion of the entire capital of a corporation that its property or business in the State bears to all its property and business. St. Louis S. W. R. Co. v. Arkansas, 235 U. S. 350; New York v. Roberts, 171 U. S. 658; Adams Express Co. v. Ohio State Auditor, 165 U. S. 194; Western Union v. Taggart, 163 U. S. 1; Postal Co. v. Adams, 155 U. S. 688; Pittsburgh C. C. & St. L. R. Co. v. Backus, 254 U. S. 429. Such analogy, therefore, as these cases afford would seem to support the power of the Federal Government to levy a general excise tax on the privilege of doing business in corporate form measured by the fair value of the capital stock, without any exemption to any corporation by reason of its capital being employed in whole or in part in the export trade.

3207 The defendant's motion for judgment on the pleadings will be granted.

*A state, however, may not levy a direct tax on the gross receipts from interstate commerce, even though the tax is general, and applies as well to the internal commerce of the State. Crew Levick Co. v. Pennsylvania, 245 U. S. 295; nor may the United States levy such a tax on export sales or the gross receipts therefrom; the tax is not being by reason of the fact that it may be equally applicable to domestic commerce. A. G. Spaulding & Bros. v. Edwards, Collector, decided by the Supreme Court on April 23, 1923 [¶4767 herein].

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

1916 and 1918 Acts.

November 14, 1923.

A corporation whose activities consist of holding the stock of another, with the incidents thereof, and of financing such other, and, because such other's financial requirements were overestimated, investing large amounts in call loans, thereby exercising its full corporate powers, is held not to be engaged in business within the purview of the taxing statute.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK.

CHILE COPPER COMPANY,

Plaintiff,

vs.

WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, Collector of Internal Revenue, Second New York District,

Defendant.

3208 Learned Hand, D. J.: It is quite true that this plaintiff has been 3031 doing all that it was organized to do, and that this feature constantly 3033 runs through the cases, as if it were in some sense a test of whether it was "doing business" at all. Yet I cannot think that this would be a sound rule, or that it makes any difference whether the chartered powers are fully employed or not, because as Mr. Justice Holmes said in U. S. v.
Emery-Bird, Thayer Realty Co., 237 U. S. 28, the question is what it does and not what it can do. There would be no justification in treating two corporations differently who did exactly the same things merely because one had an extensive charter and the other did not.

3209 Had this been a lease I think there could be no doubt. The different incidents of the plaintiff's activity have all been passed on.
 Thus receiving and distributing dividends is not enough to bring the lessor within the Statute, Zonne v. Minneapolis Syndicate, 220 U. S. 187, McCoach
v. Minehill Ry., 228 U. S. 295; U. S. v. Nipissing Mines Co., 206 U. S. Fed.
 Rep. 431 (C.C.A. 2); West End Ry. v. Malley, 246 Fed. Rep. 625 (C.C.A.
 1). Nor is the result different if the lessor in addition issues bonds direct to the lessee for his use in paying for improvements upon the leased lands, Anderson v. Morris & Essex R.R., 216 Fed. Rep. 83 (C.C.A. 2), N. Y. Cen- tral v. Gill, 219 Fed. Rep. (C.C.A. 1), Traction Cos. v. Collectors, 223 Fed.
 Rep. 984 (C.C.A. 6), Public Service Co. v. Herold, 229 Fed. Rep. 902 (C.C.A.
 3). In one of the cases comprised within Public Service Co. v. Herold, supra, it was held that when the lessor, instead of delivering bonds to the lessee, to be sold, sold the bonds himself and paid the money to the lessee the result was the same. The following cases present variants upon the general situation in each of which the lessor was held not to be "doing business": condemning lands for the lessee, N. Y. Central v. Gill, supra; selling parts of the leased property, Traction Cos. v. Collectors, supra; selling the whole property, Miller v. Snake River Valley R.R., 223 Fed. Rep. 946; providing for the issue of new bonds to refund others cancelled, Public Service Co. v.
Herold, supra; maintaining a sinking fund and extending an indebtedness,

CAPITAL STOCK TAX REGULATIONS.

McCoach v. Continental, etc., Co., 233 Fed. Rep. 976; acquiring new property for the lessee and improving it to answer to the lease, Jasper, etc., Co. v. Walker, 238 Fed. Rep. 533 (C.C.A. 5), (certainly an extreme case); investing the lessor's surplus funds in investments more profitable than bank deposits, McCoach v. Minehill Ry. Co., 228 U. S. 295.

3210 Had the plaintiff leased its property to the Exploration Co. and thereafter done what it did there can then be no doubt that it would not have been liable to the tax. It seems to me to make no difference that it was organized to do the same things. The term, "business," means some profitable activity undertaken on its own account. There was such a business, but it was the mining and sale of copper, to which both corporations were necessary, owing to the state of the Chilean law. Of course, it is true that each was doing a part of that business, because financing was a necessary incident to its prosecution. But the excise does not exact a double tax for leave to do a single business, and the plaintiff was in substance no more than the personification of a part of the enterprise. Except for the separation of the corporate activities no one would suggest that the Exploration Company was doing two businesses. As things are, the nearest approach to a separate business is the plaintiff's investment of its funds in call loans. That, however, falls quite within the rule in McCoach v. Minehill Ry. Co., supra.

3211 The defendant argues that Van Baumbach v. Sargent Land Co., 242 U. S. 503, changed the earlier rule and made obsolete the decisions in the lower courts which have depended upon it. I cannot so understand that decision. The lessor by no means confined itself to activities incidental to the execution of the lease and it was to those added doings that it owed its liability to the tax. It is true that among these was the employment of a supervising engineer (a company), and that this is one of the activities relied upon. While this was a natural incident to the protection of the lessor's interests, yet it was no part of the execution of the lease, no part of the business conducted by the lessee. However that may be, the lessor did much more than that. It explored the soil on its own account, sold land, made stumpage contracts and leased lots in a village and to squatters. In short, it appears to have managed the surface for its profit. All this was altogether independent of the business of the lessee.

3212 Chemung Iron Co. v. Lynch, 269 Fed. Rep. 368 (C.C.A. 8), was a similar case though the lessor merely hired a supervising engineer and explored the soil. In Boston Terminal Co. v. Gill, 246 Fed. Rep. 604 (C.C.A. 1), the plaintiff conducted a number of profitable ventures in its railway station, quite separate from its formal maintenance of that station for the benefit of the five roads which built it.

3213 I see no ground in these cases to suppose that the earlier decisions are no longer controlling, and for the reasons already given I think that the motion to dismiss must be denied. That being so, it is my understanding that the plaintiff is to take judgment for the amount demanded with interest, and it is so ordered.

3214 Central Union Trust Company vs. Edwards.—This cause is now in 3171 the United States Supreme Court on writ of error, Docket No. 317, 3198 October Term, 1923.—The Corporation Trust Company.

3525 Provided further, That the tax shall not be imposed upon deliveries or transfers to a broker for sale, nor upon deliveries or transfers by a broker to a customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased same, but such deliveries or transfers shall be accompanied by a certificate setting forth the facts:

3530 Provided further, That sellers of commodities described herein, having paid the tax provided by this subdivision, may transfer such contracts to a clearing-house corporation or association, and such transfer shall not be deemed to be a sale, or agreement of sale, or an agreement to sell within the provisions of this Act, provided that such transfer shall not vest any beneficial interest in such clearing-house association but shall be made for the sole purpose of enabling such clearing-house association to adjust and balance the accounts of the members of such clearing-house association on their several contracts.

PART I.

ISSUES OF STOCK.

3547 Art. 1. When tax accrues.—Stock is deemed to be issued when 3521 it is subscribed for and the subscription is accepted by the corporation, regardless of the time of delivery of the certificate.

3548 Art. 2. Rate of taxation.—(a) All certificates or instruments, of whatever designation, having a par or face value, representing shares of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations, issued by any corporation, joint-stock company or association, are subject to tax at the rate of 5 cents on each $100 of the face value or fraction thereof.

3549 (b) All certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations issued by any corporation, without par or face value, are subject to the tax of 5 cents per share, unless the actual value is in excess of $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 5 cents on each $100 of actual value or fraction thereof, or unless the actual value is less than $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 1 cent on each $20 of actual value or fraction thereof. [See ¶4016 and ¶4019].

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3550 Art. 3. Computation of the tax.—(a) The tax is computed upon the par or face value, if the certificates have a face value, of the certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations, of any corporation, joint-stock company or association, as set forth in the articles of incorporation, or agreement of association or of partnership, whether such par or face value appears on the face of the certificate or not.

3551 (b) Where a certificate represents more than one share of stock (however large the number of shares), on the issue of such certificate the tax is reckoned on its par or face value and not on the par or face value of each separate share of stock which it represents.

3552 (c) The tax on original issue is measured not by the amount paid in, on, or for the stock, but by the par or face value in the case of shares having a face value; and by the actual value in the case of shares without face value.

3553 (d) In the case of stock without par or face value, the actual value of the stock is to be determined by the market price of each share.

3554 Art. 4. Issues subject to tax.—(a) The issue of certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations, by any corporation, joint-stock company or association, is subject to tax.

3556 (c) The issue by a corporation of business property investment bonds, or other instruments wherein it is certified that the holder thereof is the owner of an interest in specified real property, the legal title to which has been previously conveyed to a trustee and whereby the corporation issuing the same agrees to manage the property and distribute the proceeds in a certain manner, is subject to tax.

3557 (d) The issue by a corporation, joint-stock company or association, of stock in exchange for property, real or personal, or for the purpose of purchasing the business or assets of another concern, is subject to tax.

3558 (e) The issue of certificates of stock by joint-stock land banks is subject to tax.

3559 (f) The issue of stock dividend and fractional scrip certificates is subject to tax. [Read ¶3565 below.]

3560 (g) The issue of temporary or interim certificates of stock is subject to tax.

3561 (h) The issue of certificates of stock upon reorganization [see ¶3687] of a corporation not expressly provided for in Art. 4(l) is subject to tax as follows: Preferred stock issued in place of common, or vice versa, or one kind of preferred stock issued in place of another kind of preferred stock, or one kind of common stock issued in the place of another kind of common stock, or stock without par value issued in place of stock with par value, or vice versa, is subject to tax on the entire issue.

3562 (i) The issue of stock by a consolidated corporation in exchange for stock of the consolidating corporations is subject to tax. [See ¶3994.]

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3563 (j) The issue of stock, in addition to its already existing stock, by the continuing corporation in case of a merger of corporations, is subject to tax. [See ¶3994.]

3564 (k) The issue of certificates of stock outside the United States by a domestic corporation is subject to tax.

3565 Taxability of original issue of scrip certificates for fractional shares.—

Please advise if the issue of scrip certificates for fractional shares of said stock having par value of one hundred dollars is subject to tax at rate of five cents for each certificate issued or at rate of five cents for each full share of the total number of shares represented by aggregate amount of scrip certificates issued. Please answer collect.

3566 (Answer.) Stamp tax is based on par value of each certificate for fractional share issued. (Telegram of inquiry from Kennedy M. Thompson, New York, N. Y., signed by Deputy Commissioner J. M. Baker, and dated January 9, 1920.)

3567 Stamp tax liability on account of original issue and transfer of stock and conveyance of real property incident to the reorganization of a corporation under the laws of another State, without more.—Reference is made to your letter of February 5, 1920, in which you inquire as to the application of stamp tax in the case where the ..... Co. of Illinois has been reorganized into the ..... [same name] Co. under the laws of the State of Ohio. [See note at ¶3573 below.]

3568 You are advised that where a company gives up its articles of incorporation in the State of Illinois and is incorporated in the State of Ohio, the application of stamp tax is to be determined by the method followed.

3569 In any event stamp tax on original issue applies to the stock to be issued by the new corporation.

3570 The transfer of stock among the assets of the old corporation to the new corporation is subject to stamp tax.

3571 Conveyance of real property from the old corporation to the new corporation in consideration of the issue of new stock to the old corporation or to its stockholders is subject to stamp tax on the basis of the value of the property.

3572 If the new stock is issued to the old corporation the transfer of that stock from the old corporation to its stockholders is subject to stamp tax. If the new stock is issued to the stockholders of the old corporation the transfer of the right to receive that stock from the old corporation is subject to transfer stamp tax additional to the original issue stamp tax. If the old stock is surrendered to the old corporation for extinguishment no transfer stamp tax accrues. If the old stock is surrendered to the new corporation and constitutes it a corporate stockholder that surrender is taxable. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Commissioner Daniel C. Roper, and dated February 26, 1920.)

3573 [Note.—The facts submitted with names omitted, on which the above ruling is based, are as follows:

The ..... Co. was organized many years ago under the laws

Copyright 1923, by The Corporation Trust Company.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

of Illinois. A new corporation of the same name has been organized under the laws of Ohio and will acquire the property and continue the business of the Illinois corporation.

3574 The Ohio corporation will take over all the assets (both real and personal) and assume all liabilities of the Illinois corporation. In payment for the property, the Ohio corporation will deliver to the Illinois corporation certificates of stock issued in the names of the present stockholders and for the number of shares owned by them, respectively, in the Illinois corporation. The Illinois corporation will receive from its stockholders its own shares of stock, in exchange for a like number of shares of the Ohio corporation, and will then be dissolved.

3575 The identical property will remain in the possession of the identical stockholders and the proportionate interest of each stockholder will remain unchanged, the sole purpose of the transaction being merely to domicile the present enterprise in Ohio as a matter of convenience.]

3576 Art. 5. Issues not subject to tax.—(a) The issue of stock by co-operative building and loan associations, organized and operated exclusively for the benefit of their members and making loans only to shareholders, or by mutual ditch or irrigating companies, is not subject to tax.

3577 (b) The issue of certificates of stock by Federal land banks is not subject to tax.

3578 (c) The issue of "rights" to subscribe for stock by any corporation, joint-stock company or association evidenced by warrants is not subject to tax.

3579 (d) The issue of certificates of stock in a new name, the only change in the corporation being in the name, is not subject to tax.

3580 (e) The issue of voting trust certificates is not subject to tax.

3581 (f) The issue, upon a merger of corporations, of certificates of stock of the same kind in substitution for the old certificates of stock is not subject to tax. [See ¶3994]

3582 (g) The issue of certificates of stock of a smaller denomination in exchange for outstanding certificates, where there is no change in ownership or in the total amount of stock issued, is not subject to tax.

3583 (h) The issue of the definitive certificates of stock in exchange for temporary or interim certificates upon which the tax has been paid is not subject to tax.

3584 (i) The issue by a corporation of certificates of preferred stock in lieu of outstanding certificates of common stock, or vice versa, or the issue of certificates of preferred stock of one kind in lieu of certificates of preferred stock of another kind, pursuant to the terms of the original charter of the corporation, without other consideration and without change in the amount of the authorized capital stock of the corporation, is not subject to tax.

3585 Art. 6. Stamp tax acts.—(a) All certificates of stock issued between December 1, 1914 and September 8, 1916, are subject to tax under the Emergency Revenue Act of October 22, 1914; those issued between December 1, 1917, and April 1, 1919, are subject to tax under the Revenue Act of 1917; and certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations issued by any corporation, joint-stock company, or association on or after April 1, 1919, are subject to tax under the Revenue Act of 1918; those issued on or after January 1, 1922, are subject to tax under the Revenue Act of 1921.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3586 (b) There was no stamp tax upon issues of certificates of stock 3587 between September 8, 1916, and December 1, 1917.

3588 Art. 7. Documentary stamps used.—Ordinary documentary stamps shall be used in payment of the tax imposed upon the issue of stock.

3589 Art. 8. Stamps to be attached to stock book.—The stamps representing the tax imposed by this subdivision must be attached to the stock book and not to the certificates when issued.

PART II.—SALES AND TRANSFERS OF STOCK.

3590 Art. 9. When tax accrues.—The stamp tax on sales or transfers
3523 of stock accrues at the time of making the sale or agreement to sell or memorandum of sale, or delivery of, or transfer of the legal title to shares, or certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations in any corporation, joint-stock company, or association, or of the right to subscribe for or to receive such shares or certificates, regardless of the time or manner of the delivery of the certificate or agreement or memorandum of sale. [Read at ¶3614 and ¶3998.]

3591 Art. 10. Rate of taxation.—(a) In the case of stock having a par or face value, the amount of the tax is 2 cents on each $100 or fraction thereof of the total par or face value of the shares or certificates involved in the sale or agreement to sell, whether such aggregate par or face value is greater or less than $100; e. g., where the total par or face of the shares involved in the transaction is $100 or less, the tax is 2 cents; where such value is in excess of $100, the tax is 2 cents on each $100 or fraction thereof.

3592 (b) In the case of shares of stock without par or face value, the tax is 2 cents on the transfer or sale of, or agreement to sell, each share.

3593 Art. 11. Computation of the tax.—(a) In the case of stock having a par or face value, the amount of the tax is computed upon the total par or face value of the shares and not upon the amount that may have been paid in on such stock; e. g., where stock of the par value of $100 is sold, for which only $25 is paid, the tax is reckoned upon the par value of $100 and not upon the $25 paid.

3594 (b) Where one certificate represents several shares (however large the number of shares) on the transfer of such certificate the tax is computed upon its face value and not on the face value of each separate share of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations; e. g., on the transfer of one certificate representing 500 shares par value $5, the face value of the certificate being $2,500, the stamp tax is 50 cents.

3594a (c) In the case of stock without par or face value, the tax is computed on each share; e. g., the tax on the transfer of a certificate for 20 shares of such stock is 40 cents.

3595 Art. 12. Sales and transfers subject to tax.—(a) The sale, or transfer, or change of ownership, of certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations in corporations, joint-stock companies, or associations, is subject to tax. [For transfer from partnership to individual members thereof, see ¶4020: from brokerage firm to successor firm, ¶4024: from bank to its nominee, ¶4026.]

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

to your letter of March 18, 1920, requesting a ruling as to whether or not federal stamp tax applies to certain issues and transfers of stock. ¶You are advised that the tax imposed by subdivision 3 of Schedule A, Title II, Revenue Act of 1918, upon the original issue of stock applies when the stock is subscribed for and the subscription is accepted regardless of the time of delivery of the certificate. The direction by the subscriber to deliver such stock to other parties involves the transfer of the right to receive stock and is subject to stamp tax under the provisions of Schedule A-4. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by James M. Baker, Deputy Commissioner, and dated March 25, 1920.) [See ¶3998.]

3615 Art. 13. Sales and transfers not subject to tax.—(a) The transfer of stock pursuant to a sale, where the memorandum of sale has been duly stamped, is not subject to tax.

3616 (b) The sale or transfer of enemy-owned shares of stock in American corporations to or by the Alien Property Custodian is not subject to tax.

3620 (f) The surrender of stock for extinguishment or in exchange for new certificates to be issued without change of ownership is not subject to tax.

3621 (g) The transfer of certificates of stock from the decedent to the administrator or executor of the estate is not subject to tax.

3626 (l) The transfer of a certificate of stock by a broker to his customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased such stock, where the tax has been paid upon the transfer of the stock to the broker, is not subject to tax, provided that the broker shall in every case, at the time of such transfer from him, make and sign a certificate stating that the transfer from the broker to his customer is made solely to complete the purchase made by such broker for such customer. 3630 Art. 14. Inconsistent by-laws, rules, or customs of exchange.—

3631 Art. 15. Memoranda for sales.—Every person who makes an agreement to sell or transfer title to shares of stock by delivery of certificates assigned in blank, shall as a part of such transaction promptly make and deliver to the buyer a bill or memorandum of such sale or agreement to sell, duly signed by the seller or his agent, to which the requisite stamps shall be affixed and canceled, which bill or memorandum shall show the

DRAFTS, CHECKS, AND PROMISSORY NOTES.

- 3783 Art. 20. Drafts and checks payable otherwise than at sight or on demand.—Drafts and checks payable otherwise than at sight or on demand become subject to stamp tax if delivered or accepted within the United States. [See ¶4004 and ¶4009.]

- 3784 Art. 21. Time draft or check taxable on acceptance or delivery.—A time draft or check becomes subject to tax concurrently with its acceptance or delivery, whichever is prior, within the territorial jurisdiction of the United States, which includes the States, District of Columbia, Hawaii, and Alaska. Time drafts drawn and delivered outside of the United States are subject to the tax upon their acceptance within the United States.

- 3785 Art. 22. Drawee, payee, or indorsee to see that tax is paid.—The drawee, payee, or indorsee should see that the tax is paid before or at the time of acceptance or delivery. The question of who shall pay the tax is a matter for adjustment between the parties.

- 3786 Art. 23. Draft drawn abroad on foreign drawee with foreign payee.—If a draft drawn abroad on a foreign drawee with a foreign payee passes through a bank here in the course of collection, no tax is payable unless it should be delivered by an agent of the drawer to an agent of the payee within the United States.

- 3787 Art. 24. Liability to tax determined by form or face of check or draft.—The liability of drafts or checks to stamp tax as well as the amount of such tax is determined by their form and face and can not be affected by proof of facts or instructions outside of the drafts or checks. A draft expressed to be payable at sight on "arrival of car," or embodying a memorandum to hold until arrival of car, is taxable. A sight draft accompanied by instructions outside the instrument deferring time of payment is not taxable.

- 3788 Art. 25. Draft accepted for payment at future date.—A draft stating no time for payment which is accepted for payment at a certain future date is taxable upon such acceptance as a time draft.

- 3789 Art. 26. Trade acceptances.—So-called "trade acceptances" are taxable in the same manner as ordinary time drafts. [See ¶4005.]

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3790 Art. 27. Drafts against actual shipment.—Drafts directly against an actual shipment are taxable in the same manner as other domestic time drafts.

3791 Art. 28. Time draft covering exports to foreign country.—A time draft directly covering exports to a foreign country and which constitutes an inherent, necessary, and bona fide part of the actual process of exportation is exempt from stamp tax. This exemption does not depend on whether or not the time which the draft has to run will expire before or after the ocean shipment. Time drafts drawn against the proceeds of the foregoing draft are subject to stamp tax. [See ¶4005 and ¶4009.]

3792 Taxable and nontaxable drafts directly and indirectly involved with exports.—Further reference is made to your letter of August 24, 1920, wherein you request, for the information of the Equitable Trust Company of New York, a ruling as to the application of stamp tax upon transactions connected with the exportation of merchandise in foreign commerce. [See ¶4005.]

3793 The transactions mentioned by you are as follows:

“(1). The exporter draws a time draft upon the buyer abroad for the sale price of the merchandise and presents this draft, accompanied by the shipping documents, to his bank for discount. It is clear that such a draft is not subject to the stamp tax and it has been so ruled by the Internal Revenue Department.

3794 “(2). It sometimes happens that the exporter is unable to negotiate a draft drawn by him in the manner above set forth so that he may receive the full value for the same, but he may be able to obtain a loan or advance in some form from his bank, which will take the draft in question for collection. In such case the exporter may give a note to the bank secured by the draft; or, instead of borrowing money from the bank and giving his note therefor, the exporter may draw a second draft payable at a future date upon his bank, payment for which second draft is to be liquidated by the payment of the draft drawn upon the foreign buyer. The question is whether the note or draft given to or drawn upon the bank in the foregoing circumstances is subject to stamp tax.

3795 “(3). In the event that the note or draft given to or drawn upon the bank, as stated in paragraph (2), is not subject to stamp tax, the question is whether any renewal of such note or drafts given because of the fact that the original draft drawn upon the foreign buyer has not been collected during the period of the original financing is subject to stamp tax.

3796 “(4). Methods of financing similar to those outlined in paragraph (2) are used in connection with exportations of merchandise where the original documents forwarded abroad are not accompanied by drafts upon the buyers but are either forwarded against sales previously made or on consignment, to be sold either on arrival or perhaps to await better market conditions. The exporter either borrows money from his bank and gives his note or draws his draft upon his bank payable at a future date, with the understanding that the proceeds of the sale of the merchandise are paid in to the collecting bank abroad for the account of the bank making the loan or discounting the draft of the exporter in the United States; such proceeds from time to time to be used in liquidating such loan or advance. The question is whether the note or draft given in connection with such a transaction would be subject to stamp tax.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

- 3797 “(5). The same question as outlined in paragraph (3) arises in connection with renewals of the note or draft given in connection with the transaction referred to in paragraph (4).”
- 3798 In reply your attention is called to Article [28, §3791] of Regulations 55, a copy of which is inclosed. The exemption extended by that article applies only to time drafts directly covering exports to a foreign country and which constitute an inherent, necessary and bona fide part of the actual process of exportation. This exemption does not apply to time drafts drawn against the proceeds of other drafts which are exempted or upon time drafts made against sales previously made or on consignments, to be sold either on arrival or perhaps to await better market conditions.
- 3799 The typical draft which is exempt from the tax as a part of the process of exportation is the one attached to the bill of lading and drawn upon the foreign buyer, which may be discounted and negotiated in this country. The exemption from tax has been held to extend to equivalent drafts drawn upon funds or agencies established in this country by foreign governments or buyers to facilitate exchange. Exemption does not extend to drafts which represent the preliminary or subsequent adjustment or use of accounts or funds involved in exportation.
- 3800 It is, therefore, held by this office that the draft covered by paragraph (1) of your inquiry is not subject to stamp tax.

Where by statute dower has been abolished and a different interest in the husband's real property conferred upon the wife in lieu thereof, the taxability of an instrument purporting to convey such an interest prior to its assignment will be determined by the nature of the wife's interest, and the statutes and decisions of the particular State in which the real estate is located must be consulted.

3877 Validity of unstamped instruments and admission as evidence: Deeds in particular.—As to the absence of revenue stamps, it is true that the deeds showing title in some of the plaintiffs—they were produced in evidence over the defendant's objection—were without the stamps required by the act of October 22, 1914, c. 331, §22, Schedule A, 38 Stat. 762. But this neither invalidated the deeds nor made them inadmissible as evidence. The relevant provisions of that act, while otherwise following the language of earlier acts, do not contain the words of those acts which made such an instrument invalid and inadmissible as evidence while not properly stamped. Those words were carefully omitted, as will be seen by contrasting §§6, 11, 12 and 13 of the act of 1914 with §§7, 13, 14 and 15 of the act of 1898, c. 448, 30 Stat. 454. From this and a comparison of the acts in other particulars it is apparent that Congress in the later act departed from its prior practice of making such instruments invalid or inadmissible as evidence while remaining unstamped and elected to rely upon other means of enforcing this stamp provision, such as the imposition of money penalties, fines and imprisonment. The decisions upon which the defendant relies arose under the earlier acts and were based upon the presence in them of what studiously was omitted from the later one. (From Cole et al., vs. Ralph, 252 U. S. 286.)

Copy of power of attorney, printed on form provided by Government and filed in executive department.—Where the original power of attorney has been properly stamped and a copy of it is printed on a card (Form 272) provided by the Government, and the card is filed in the executive departments of the Government or with a collector of internal revenue, such copy is not subject to tax.

3915 Art. 133. Power of attorney authorizing deputy to have access to safe.—A power of attorney authorizing a deputy to have access only to a safe or safety deposit box is not subject to tax, but a power of attorney to have access and control over its contents is subject to tax.

3916 Art. 134. Power of attorney authorizing Federal officer to assign United States bonds deposited as security.—(a) A power of attorney executed by a bank authorizing a designated officer of a Federal reserve bank to assign United States bonds deposited with the Federal reserve bank and designed to protect it in event of default in payment of a loan is not taxable.

3917 (b) Powers of attorney given by persons who deposit United States Liberty bonds or other bonds of the United States as security in lieu of surety or sureties on penal bonds under the provisions of Section 1329 of the Revenue Act of 1921 authorizing the official having authority to approve such penal bonds to collect or sell such United States bonds so deposited in case of any default in the performance of any of the conditions or stipulations of such penal bonds, are not subject to the stamp tax.

3918 Art. 135. Powers of attorney executed and delivered before Jan. 1, 1922.—Powers of attorney executed and delivered before January 1, 1922, are not taxable, even though used subsequent to that date, except such as are taxable under the act approved February 24, 1919.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

FOREIGN INSURANCE POLICIES.

3946 Art. 136. Definitions.—When used in the Regulations under this 3545 subdivision—

3947 (a) The term “insurer” includes any person, copartnership, association, or corporation transacting the business of insurance, and also any agent or broker, wherever applicable.

3948 (b) The term “insurance” includes every manner of providing indemnity against risks upon property of any description (including rents and profits) from peril by sea or inland waters or in transit on land (including transshipments and storage at termini or way points) or by fire, lightning, tornado, windstorm, bombardment, invasion, insurrection, or riot.

3949 (c) The term “policy of insurance” includes any instrument by whatever name the same is called whereby insurance is made or renewed by the insurer, as policies, binders, certificates, open policies, covering notes, memoranda, cablegrams or letters.

3950 (d) The term “other instrument” includes any instrument by which insurance is made or renewed, i. e., by which the relationship of insurer and insured is created or evidenced, whether it be a letter of acceptance, cablegram, or other instrument by whatever name called.

3951 (e) The expression “whereby insurance is made or renewed” includes any evidence or confirmation of a binding contract of insurance whereby a risk is assumed by the insurer.

3952 (f) The term “issue” means the act whereby insurance is made or renewed or in any manner becomes a binding contract effective for insurance.

3953 (g) The term “premium charged” means the total premium payable during the life of a contract of insurance and shall include any additional assessment or charge in the nature of a premium which may be assessed or charged during the life of a contract of insurance, whether payable in one sum or in installments and however paid (and though never paid if the contract of insurance be delivered and accepted or otherwise becomes binding upon the insurer).

3954 (h) The term “premium” means the agreed price for assuming and carrying the risk. It includes all that is received by the underwriter therefor and is in fact the total consideration receivable for underwriting the risk, whether in one sum or in installments, during the life of the policy.

3955 (i) The term “United States” includes the States of the United States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.

3956 Art. 137. Effective date.—Policies of insurance which are issued and accepted on and after April 1, 1919, regardless of when the insurance thereunder becomes effective, are subject to tax, but policies which were issued and accepted prior to April 1, 1919, if issued in the usual course of business and according to general custom and not for the purpose of evading the tax, are not subject to tax.

3957 Art. 138. Persons liable.—The insurer, the agent, or broker, effecting, accepting, placing, or soliciting the insurance, and also the insured are each liable for the tax.

3958 Art. 139. What instruments must bear a stamp.—(a) The stamp must be affixed to the first instrument by which the insurance is made or renewed, i. e., by which the relationship of insurer and insured is created or evidenced, whether it be a letter of acceptance, cablegram or other instrument by whatever name called

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3959 (b) In the case of so-called "open policies" or "open cargo covers," where the amount of the premium is not definitely determined at time of issuance, the stamps may be affixed to the receipts for monthly or other payments if proper notation be made upon such receipts identifying the original instruments to which they apply.

3960 (c) In the case of a binder or other instrument whereby insurance is made or renewed, issued without agreement as to the premium to be charged, stamps must be affixed when the amount of the premium is determined.

3961 Art. 140. Insured to retain policy for two years.—The person having control or possession of a policy of insurance or other instrument to which documentary stamps shall be affixed according to law shall retain such instrument for the period of two years from the date of insurance [sic] thereof for the purpose of enabling internal revenue officers to verify the fact that payment of the full amount of tax due thereon has been made.

3962 Art. 141. Subsequent instruments shall indicate prior document to which stamps are affixed.—Any policy of insurance or other instrument which is subsequent to or which confirms a contract of insurance that is created or evidenced by any prior instrument by which insurance was originally made or renewed shall bear a notation designating such prior instrument (hereinafter referred to as the original instrument) and showing that the proper stamps have been affixed thereto and canceled. By this is meant that if a letter, cablegram, or other instrument is so worded that it establishes or evidences a contractual relation between the insurer and the insured, executed or executory, by which insurance is made or renewed, or by which the relationship of insurer and insured is created or evidenced, such instrument shall be construed as the original instrument and must have stamps of the proper amount affixed to it, and any policy or other instrument which is subsequent to or which confirms such original instrument must bear thereon the notation above indicated.

3963 Art. 142. Subsequent instruments that must be stamped.—In case an instrument subsequent to the original instrument provides for the payment of a premium greater than the premium provided for in the original instrument, such subsequent instrument must have affixed thereto stamps equal to the tax imposed upon the additional premium charged therein; also such subsequent instrument must bear notation of the stamps affixed to the original instrument. (See Art. 141.) The same rules apply to any riders, indorsements, or other forms attached to or forming a part of any original or subsequent instrument where such rider, indorsement, or other form provides for the payment of a premium greater than theretofore charged.

3964 Art. 143. Unstamped instruments and those bearing no notation of stamping.—Failure (a) to stamp the original instrument by which insurance is made or renewed, whether it be a letter of acceptance, cablegram, or other instrument by whatever name called, or (b) to indicate that such original instrument was properly stamped on any policy or other instrument which is subsequent to or which confirms the contract of insurance that is created or evidenced by any prior instrument by which insurance was made or renewed, will be held to raise a presumption of an intent to evade the payment of tax under the provisions of the Act.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3965 Art. 144. Measure of tax.—The tax is measured by total premium paid, including any additional assessment or charge in the nature of a premium on each policy of insurance or other instrument by which insurance is made or renewed, and is at the rate of 3 cents on each dollar or fractional part thereof of such premium; for example, upon a premium charge of $10.10 the tax imposed is 33 cents, being 3 cents for each dollar and 3 cents for the fractional part of a dollar.

3966 Art. 145. Insurance on commodities exported.—(a) No tax is imposed upon the premium charged for insurance issued to cover commodities which are in the actual process of exportation and which have begun their voyage or preparation for the voyage from the United States.

3967 (b) If a policy or other instrument is issued covering both export and non-export property, the tax will be computed upon the full amount of the premium charged, unless such instrument clearly indicates the property for export and the premium charged for the insurance thereon.

3968 Art. 146. Movable property.—Movable property, such as rolling stock of railroads, ships, vessels, barges, and other similar movable property, shall be held to be property within the United States if the principal place of business of the corporation or partnership owning and controlling the same is located within the United States, or, in the case of an individual, if he resides in the United States, unless such property is permanently located without the United States for the purpose of ordinary use. The nation of registry of a vessel shall have no bearing upon the location of the property in the same.

3969 Art. 147. Credits and refunds.—In case a policy of insurance or other instrument is issued and accepted by the insured, and afterwards, for any reason, such insurance does not become effective, the value of the stamps affixed thereto will be refunded upon a proper claim presented to the collector of internal revenue.

3970 Art. 148. Penalties.—In addition to the penalties provided by Sec. 1102 of the Revenue Act of 1921, subdivision 13 of Schedule A imposes a penalty of double the amount of the tax upon (a) any person to or for whom or in whose name any such policy or other instrument is issued, or (b) any solicitor, agent, or broker acting for or on behalf of such person in the procurement of any such policy or other instrument, who fails to affix the proper stamps to such policy or other instrument, with intent to evade the tax.

3971 Art. 149. Returns.—No monthly return or monthly statement showing a list of policies or other instruments by which insurance was made or renewed upon property located in the United States by a foreign corporation or partnership or non-resident individual will at this time be required from any person to or for whom or in whose name such policy or other instrument is issued, or from the solicitor or broker acting directly or indirectly for or on behalf of such person, but each person, solicitor, or broker accepting, placing, or soliciting such policy or other instrument shall keep a record of each policy or other instrument subject to the tax imposed by this subdivision by which he has directly or indirectly made, placed, solicited, or assisted in the making, or renewal of, such insurance, or for which he has paid or received compensation, and shall be prepared to furnish full information to the Commissioner at any time upon demand.

MISCELLANEOUS.

3972 Art. 150. Stamp affixed and canceled can not lawfully be removed 3500 and affixed to another instrument.—A stamp affixed to an instrument and cancelled can not lawfully be removed therefrom and affixed to another instrument requiring a stamp. [For refund see beginning at ¶3986.]

3973 Art. 151. Both parties to taxable instrument liable.—Both parties 3502 to a taxable instrument are responsible to the Government for affixing and canceling stamps in the required amount. The law does not prohibit parties in interest from entering into an agreement as to which of them shall actually pay same.

3974 Art. 152. Stamp taxes under revenue act of 1918; present regulations 3547 generally applicable.—As documentary stamp taxes under the revenue act approved February 24, 1919, were very similar to those imposed under the revenue act of 1921, these regulations are generally applicable to all taxable documents issued and delivered on and after April 1, 1919.

3975 Art. 153. Schedule A of revenue act of 1921 an extension of schedule A of the revenue act of 1918.—The revenue act of 1921 simply supersedes and extends Schedule A, Title XI, of the act approved February 24, 1919, except in a few instances where the language of the present act slightly modifies or amends that of the former act. These slight changes will be readily noticeable by a comparison of the two acts. Schedule A 2 and 14 of the revenue act of 1918, however, are eliminated.

3976 Art. 154. Former stamp-tax acts.—For still older acts of Congress requiring stamps to be affixed to certain written instruments, see act of July 1, 1862, schedule B following section 110 (12 Stat., 479); act of March 3, 1863, section 6 (12 Stat., 720); act of June 30, 1864, section 151 (13 Stat., 291); act of March 3, 1865, section 1 (13 Stat., 469); act of July 13, 1866 (14 Stat., 141); act of June 23, 1874, section 1 (18 Stat., pt. 3, 250). The act of June 6, 1872, section 36 (17 Stat., 256), provided for the repeal, on and after October 1, 1872, of stamp taxes on instruments, except the tax of 2 cents on bank checks, drafts, and orders, which was repealed by the act of March 3, 1883 (22 Stat., 488). Taxes were imposed by the act of June 13, 1898, on instruments and documents, under schedule A thereof, and were repealed in part by the act of March 2, 1901, and wholly repealed by the war-revenue repeal act (act of Apr. 12, 1902) (32 Stat., 96), taking effect July 1, 1902. Taxes were imposed by Schedule A of the act of October 22, 1914, upon certain instruments and documents, from December 1, 1914, to December 31, 1915. These taxes were continued in force by the joint resolution of December 17, 1915, until December 31, 1916, but were repealed by the act of September 8, 1916, as of that date. The revenue act of 1917 was in force from December 1, 1917, until March 31, 1919, and the revenue act of 1918 was in force from April 1, 1919, until December 31, 1921.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

DENOMINATIONS OF DOCUMENTARY STAMPS.

3977 Art. 155. Documentary stamps issued.—Under authority conferred 3514 upon the Commissioner of Internal Revenue in section 1105 (a) of the Act, the following adhesive stamps have been prepared:

Documentary stamps, Schedule A: One cent, 2 cents, 3 cents, 4 cents, 5 cents, 8 cents, 10 cents, 25 cents, 40 cents, 50 cents, 80 cents, $1, $2, $3, $5, $10, $30, $60, $100, $500, $1,000.

PURCHASE OF STAMPS.

3978 Art. 156. Stamps, where purchased.—The above stamps may be 3514 purchased from collectors and stamp deputy collectors of internal revenue.

 3516 positaries, and postmasters to be furnished stamps; bond required.
 3517 —In addition, provision has been made in the Act for the delivery of stamps by collectors without prepayment to any Assistant Treasurer of the United States, designated depository of the United States, or postmaster, who may be required to give bond for the value of stamps so deposited. It is not mandatory upon the persons named to secure and keep the stamps on sale.

3980 Art. 158. Stamps on articles manufactured in foreign countries.—
 Stamps to be affixed to articles manufactured in a foreign country and imported into the United States may be purchased and forwarded to the place of manufacture and there affixed to the articles before the same are packed for importation.

CANCELLATION OF DOCUMENTARY STAMPS.

3981 Art. 159. Cancellation of stamps.—In any and all cases where an 3514 adhesive stamp shall be used for denoting any tax imposed by Schedule A of the revenue act of 1921, the person using or affixing the same shall write or stamp thereon, or cause to be written or stamped thereon, with ink, the initials of his name and the date (year, month, and day) in which the same shall be attached or used; or shall, by cutting and canceling said stamp with a machine or punch, which will affix the initials and date as aforesaid, so deface the stamp as to render it unfit for reuse. The cancellation by either method should not so deface the stamp as to prevent its denomination and genuineness from being readily determined.

3982 Art. 160. Additional cancellation required in case of stamps of 3513 value of 50 cents or more.—In addition to the foregoing, stamps of the value of 50 cents or more shall have three parallel incisions made by some sharp instrument lengthwise through the stamp after the stamp has been attached to the document; provided, this will not be required where stamps are canceled by perforation.

STAMPS UNDER FORMER ACTS; POSTAGE STAMPS.

3983 Art. 161. Documentary stamps only to be used.—Documentary 3514 stamps only must be used upon papers, documents, and instruments subject to tax as provided in Schedule A, except as provided in Regulations 40, 1922 Edition, relating to stamp taxes on issue and transfers of stock and sales of products for future delivery.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

3984 Art. 162. Documentary stamps issued under acts of October 22, 1914, October 3, 1917, and February 24, 1919.—Documentary revenue stamps issued under acts of October 22, 1914, October 3, 1917, and February 24, 1919, may be used to pay stamp taxes required by the revenue act of 1921.

3985 Art. 163. Ordinary postage stamps not to be used for internal-revenue taxes.—Ordinary postage stamps can not be used for the payment of any internal-revenue taxes.

REDEMPTION OF OR ALLOWANCE FOR STAMPS.

3986 Art. 164. Stamps rendered useless, affixed in error, or for which the owner has no use.—Where documentary stamps are rendered useless by gumming or sticking together in transit or otherwise without fault of the purchaser, they may be exchanged by a collector for other stamps of exactly the same quantity and denomination. Amounts paid for stamps used in excess, or on instruments not actually effective and for which a substitute is prepared and stamped, or on instruments not subject to tax or for which the owner has no use, may be refunded, upon claim properly presented to the collector.

3986a Art. 165. Claims.—All claims for the redemption of or allowance for stamps must be presented within two years after the purchase of said stamps from the Government. The provisions of sections 3220 to 3228 Revised Statutes do not apply to the redemption of or allowance for internal revenue stamps, and the authority for such redemption or allowance is the act of May 12, 1900 (31 Stats. 177), as amended by the act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stats. 506), set forth on page 30 of these regulations [¶8024 herein].

REFUNDS.

3986b Art. 166. Refunds.—Where taxes are paid pursuant to an assessment and not by the affixing of stamps, claims for the refund of amounts so paid are governed by Sections 3220–3228 R. S., as amended [beginning at ¶8023], and must be presented within four years next after payment of such taxes, as provided in Section 1316 of the Revenue Act of 1921 [¶8056 herein].

AFFIXING STAMPS.

3987 Art. 167. Two or more stamps may be used, when.—Where a stamp of the proper denomination to pay the tax due on an article or document can not be procured, two or more stamps may be used. In such case as few stamps as possible should be attached and each stamp used should be canceled in the manner provided by regulation.

DUTIES OF OFFICERS.

3988 Art. 168. Revenue officers to make investigations.—It is the duty of revenue officers in canvassing for taxes due to investigate as to violations of Title VIII of the act of October 3, 1917, and Title XI of the acts of February 24, 1919, and November 23, 1921, and for this purpose they should visit all State, county, and municipal offices, also banks and trust companies, having to do with the issuance, handling, or recording of documents taxable under these Titles, as well as customs houses and customs bonded warehouses and steamboat offices and agencies for such information as will lead to the detection of violators of said Titles.

3989 Art. 169. Revenue agents to report.—Revenue agents will report to this office all such violations, separate letter reports being made in each case marked "Miscellaneous Division." In each instance the report should show the full amount of delinquent tax discovered.

3990 Art. 170. Collectors' and deputy collectors' reports of delinquency or additional tax due.—Form 807 (revised July, 1921) will be used by field deputies in reporting to collectors additional and delinquent miscellaneous taxes discovered, and should be accompanied by returns, offers in compromise, and remittances. In those cases where the tax, penalties, and interest do not accompany the report of the field deputy submitted on Form 807, the collector will prepare and forward to the commissioner a report on Form 807-A (revised July, 1921).

3991 Art. 171. Stamp tax to be reported for assessment in certain cases.—Only in cases where instruments are no longer in existence or can not possibly be stamped or where a taxpayer, after being advised of his liability, refuses to affix stamps, will tax be reported for assessment. When assessment is paid a receipt on Form 1 will be issued. In those instances where stamps are purchased and affixed to the instrument receipt on Form 1 will not be issued.

3992 Art. 172. Regulations covering tax on issue, sales, and transfers of stock and sales of products.—See separate regulations (No. 40) [page 709] relative to collection of tax on issue, sales, and transfers of stock and on sales of products for future delivery.

AUTHORITY FOR REGULATIONS.

3993 Art. 173. Promulgation of Regulations.—In pursuance of the statute the foregoing Regulations are hereby made and promulgated, and all rulings inconsistent herewith are hereby revoked.

Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

Approved June 12, 1922 [Released July 5, 1922].

Forward references are given in place within the formal Regulations 40 and 55, ante, to all of the following rulings, etc., which were in the Service at the date of original issue (January 1, 1923). 3994 Taxable and tax-free issues upon a merger of corporations.—It appears that paragraph (f) of article 5, which is somewhat uncertain, requires construction in order to be reconciled with paragraph (j) of article 4. The distinction with respect thereto is clearly drawn in Law Opinion 440 and Solicitor's Opinion 4, Income Tax Bulletin 22-20. In case of a consolidation of corporations all stock issued by the consolidated or newly created corporation is subject to tax under paragraph (i) of article 4, and no other provision in the Regulations tends to relieve of the tax by reason of substitution or exchange for the stock of the consolidating corporations.

3995 It was held in Law Opinion 440, under a provision of the Revenue Act of 1917, substantially the same as the pertinent provision in the Revenue Act of 1918, that stock issued by the merging corporation (continuing corporation) in exchange for stock of the merged corporation is subject to tax as an original issue, saying: "It is an original issue of stock that was never issued before. It is immaterial that part of the new stock of one corporation is issued in exchange for old stock of the other corporation."

3997 It is accordingly concluded that paragraph (f) of article 5 of Regulations 40 (revised) exempts stock of the merging corporation (continuing corporation) from the original issue tax when exchanged for the old certificates of stock of such corporation, but not when exchanged for the old certificates of stock of the merged corporation or corporations. (Office Decision No. 83: Ruling No. 198, March, 1921.)

(Revenue Act of 1918.)

A taxable transfer of stock is involved when stock is issued in consideration of the transfer of property and the vendor corporation authorizes the vendee corporation to issue the new stock direct to the vendor's stockholders.

3998 1. Transfer of right to receive shares or certificates of stock.—

3524 Where one corporation sold to another corporation certain property
3614 in consideration of the issuance to it of a fixed number of shares of the capital stock of the purchasing corporation, and thereafter, prior to the actual issuance of the stock certificates, the vendor corporation authorized the vendee corporation to issue the shares direct to the stockholders of the vendor corporation, the resolution of the board of directors of the vendor corporation conveying the authority is a transfer of the right to receive such shares, and the transaction is subject to the stamp tax imposed by Subdivision 4, Schedule A, of the Revenue Act of 1918.

3999 2. Corporations—disregard of corporate entity.—The substantial difference between a corporation and its stockholders may not be disregarded.

(The decision [syllabus only, as shown above] of the United States District Court, District of New Jersey, rendered May 31, 1921, in the case of Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America v. Charles V. Duffy, Collector [273 Fed. 197], is published not as a ruling of the Treasury Department, but for the information of Internal Revenue officers and others concerned.)

4000 Transfer of stock from trustee to substituted trustee, when such

3597 transfer results wholly from operation of law.—Reference is made to your letter of February 3, 1921, wherein you request to be advised "whether when one trustee is substituted for another, the beneficiaries remaining the same, and a certificate of stock is transferred from the name of one trustee to that of the substituted trustee the transfer is subject to tax." ¶In reply, you are advised that this office holds that the transfer of stock from one group of trustees to another group, although one or more of the trustees remains the same, is subject to stamp tax under subdivision (4), Schedule A, Title XI of the Revenue Act of 1918, and that the tax is measured by the face or par value of all the stock covered by the transfer. However, if transfer of title results wholly from operation of law, such transfer is not subject to stamp tax. (Letter to a subscriber, signed by Assistant Commissioner Paul Myer, and dated February, 1921.)

4001 Transfer of stock to substituted trustee under the Massachusetts

3597 law.—Reference is made to your letter of April 22, 1921, with respect to the transfer of stock to the names of succeeding trustees appointed under the Massachusetts statute. ¶In reply you are advised that it is the opinion of this office that where new trustees are appointed under the provisions of Chapter 147, Section 6,* Revised Laws of Massachusetts, the newly appointed trustees acquire title to the trust estate by virtue of their appointment and without any formal conveyance. Therefore, the transfer of the stock from the names of the retiring trustees to the succeeding trustees is not subject to stamp tax. (Letter to Robert H. Gardiner, Jr., Boston, Mass., signed by Acting Deputy Commissioner A. C. Holden, and dated May 4, 1921.)

*Section 5. If a trustee under a written instrument declines, resigns, dies or is removed before the objects of the trust are accomplished and such instrument makes no adequate provision for supplying the vacancy, the supreme judicial court, the superior court or the probate court shall, after notice to all persons interested, appoint a new trustee to act solely or jointly with the others as the case may be.

Section 6. A new trustee appointed under the provisions of the preceding section, or appointed in the place of a former trustee in conformity with a written instrument creating a trust, shall, upon giving such bond as may be required, have the same powers, rights and duties and the same title to the estate, whether as a sole or a joint trustee, as if he had been originally appointed; and the court may order any conveyances to be made by the former trustee or his representatives or by the other remaining trustees which it may find proper or convenient to vest the trust estate in the new trustee either solely or jointly with the others.

4002 Nominal transfer of title to stock on death of trustee to surviving trustee or trustees.—Reference is made to your letter of March 5, 1921, requesting a ruling as to the application of the stamp tax to the transfer of shares of stock to the surviving trustee upon the death of one of the trustees. ¶In reply you are advised that when stock stands in the name of two or more trustees, the nominal transfer of such stock to the surviving trustee or trustees upon the death of one of the trustees is not subject to the stamp tax. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Acting Deputy Commissioner A. C. Holden, and dated March 15, 1921.)

4003 Use of rubber stamps on certificates in case of transfers of stock to broker for sale and from broker to purchasing customer.—Reference letter AM-CW-636, dated April 15. Permission is granted brokers to use rubber stamp with the name of firm and address in issuing certificates required by Article 13, paragraphs (k) [¶3625], (l) [¶3626] and (m) [¶3627] of Regulations 40 Revised. (Telegram to the Collector of Internal Revenue, New York, N. Y., signed by Acting Deputy Commissioner A. C. Holden, and dated April 19, 1921.)

4004 Drafts payable in terms of foreign currency, accepted or delivered within the U. S.—Reference is made to your letter of September 7, 1921, requesting a ruling as to the application of the stamp tax to certain drafts drawn outside of the United States where acceptance or delivery is made within the United States but payable in terms of foreign currency; as for example, payable in French francs in New York. ¶In reply you are advised that the stamp tax accrues upon delivery or acceptance within the United States, whichever is prior. This stamp tax should be computed on the rate of exchange at the time and place of such delivery or acceptance. (Letter to the Equitable Trust Company of New York, New York, N. Y., attention Franklin Carter, Jr., signed by Acting Commissioner C. P. Smith, and dated Sept. 20, 1921.)

4005 Trade acceptance given in settlement of balance due on open export 3789 account is not exempt, as it is not incident to the process of ex-3791 portation.—Reference is made to your letter of October 14, 1921, 3792 where you state as follows: "A customer of ours has sold and shipped goods to a Cuban firm in Cuba on open account. The Cuban firm, after making a small cash payment, has offered to give its acceptance for the balance due on account of goods shipped." You request to be advised whether this draft is an inherent part of the export transaction, even though it is not accompanied by shipping documents, and therefore exempt from the stamp tax.

4006 Article 41 of Regulations 55, Revised, provides that "A time draft directly covering exports to a foreign country and which constitutes an inherent, necessary and bona fide part of the actual process of exportation is exempt from stamp tax." This language is not intended to convey the idea that every draft used in payment for exports is exempt from tax by reason of the constitutional prohibition against tax on exports. The drafts which are thus exempt from stamp tax are only those which through long established custom have come to be a necessary part of the process of exportation, of which the draft drawn by an exporter upon a foreign purchaser for the price of the goods and which is accompanied by the bill-of-lading is typical, if not the sole example.

4007 The acceptance in question is given in settlement of a balance due upon an open account. It is not believed that this instrument is an inherent and necessary part of the actual process of exportation, and, therefore, no exemption can be allowed on the ground that it constitutes an inherent and necessary part of the process of exportation. (Letter to the National Bank of Commerce in New York, New York, N. Y., signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated Nov. 4, 1921.)

4008 Extension or renewal of promissory note by extension of mortgage 3812 by which secured.—Reference is made to your letter of March 23, 3813 1921, wherein you state that you have been advised by the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue at Boston, Mass., that "where a mortgage is extended by the usual form of extension, operating to renew the note also, the revenue stamps to be used in that connection should be affixed to such extension agreement rather than to the original note already stamped in accordance with its entire principal amount," and request to be advised whether the foregoing is correct. "In reply you are advised that the ruling referred to above and which you state was given to you by the Collector of Internal Revenue at Boston, Mass., is correct. (Letter to Holmes & Worthen, Boston, Mass., signed by Acting Deputy Commissioner A. C. Holden, and dated March 31, 1921.)

4009 Drafts covering bunker coal supplied in this country to foreign 3783 steamship company.—Reference is made to your letter of April 5, 3791 1921, requesting a ruling as to the application of the stamp tax to a draft drawn against a foreign steamship company covering a bill for bunker coal furnished in this country. The sale of bunker coal in this country to a foreign steamship company is held to be a domestic sale and not an export. In view of this fact, a draft drawn on the foreign buyer in payment of such bunker coal is subject to the stamp tax under Schedule A-6, Title XI of the Revenue Act of 1918. (Letter to a subscriber, signed by Acting Commissioner M. F. West, and dated April 13, 1921.)

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

276 Fed. 51.

Revenue Act of 1918.

(T. D. 3233.)

Trust Certificates issued under the Pennsylvania Plan held to be taxable as "Certificates of Indebtedness."

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES FOR THE EASTERN DISTRICT OF PENNSYLVANIA.

Fidelity Trust Company vs. Ephraim Lederer, Collector.	}	December Sessions 1920 No. 8118 Assumpsit.
--	---	--

Sur rule for judgment.

4010 Dickinson, J.—This case is in effect a case stated, in the determination 3520 of which we are asked to decide a question of law. The question 3757 broadly stated is whether the "certificates" held by the plaintiff as trustee are taxable. We, in consequence, limit our attention to this.

4011 The taxing authorities give the impression of their attitude as first one of uncertainty and then one of doubt. We have given the subject of the tax the name of "certificates" in order to get a word as colorless as possible, because any word or words definitely descriptive of what the thing sought to be taxed really is, anticipates the ruling to be made inasmuch as what the thing is determines whether or not it is taxable. It is conceded that Congress might have taxed these "certificates" had they been known or thought of and had Congress so willed. The whole question is has it taxed them? It has if they fall within the verbiage [sic] of the Acts of Congress, otherwise they remain untaxed. It is doubtless the fact that the draught of the tax laws had the purpose in mind to tax everything from which income was expected to be derived by granting to one person the use of the money of another. In the effort to make sure of the accomplishment of this purpose resort was had to enumeration and description. The descent from the general to the particular and specific, however careful the attempt to make the list of the latter full and all embracing, always has the result of at least rendering doubtful the inclusion of what is not by name listed. All forms of so called securities or investments issued by corporations, whether expressive of indebtedness or shares in anything the corporation possesses, are without doubt taxed, as are also all forms of instruments expressive of the indebtedness of any person to the holder.

4012 We were strongly impressed by the argument at bar that these two general lines of thought marked the limits of what had been taxes.
 The question before us then resolved itself into an inquiry into what these "Certificates" are. They are in strictness neither evidences of debt nor of shares in corporate assets. This is because of their peculiar form and of the plan under which created. A dealer in so called investments or securities would without doubt or hesitation list them under the name or designation of "Car Trust Certificates," for such they are. There are many such "on the market." They all have the same general purpose and character. They are called for because some railroad or other transportation company is in need of rolling stock or other equipment and is without funds or credit with which to supply itself, and there is a legal or other difficulty in the way of a direct pledge of the property. They are issued under a number of different plans. The one with which we are concerned is known as the Philadelphia plan. Those willing to share in the venture are invited to place their contributions in the hands of an acceptable trustee. The rolling stock, or other property is then purchased in the name of this trustee as owner. The trustee then enters into a form of bailment or conditional sale agreement with the carrier, the periodical and final payments upon which are sufficient to pay the interest on the investment and the principal at maturity. The contributors in the meantime hold the certificates or acknowledgment of the trustee of their respective shares in the venture.

4013 It will thus be seen that in strictness the only obligation in the nature of a debt or promise to pay money is the obligation and agreement of the carrier to pay the agreed price for the hire and use of the property or the rentals as they are commonly termed. The trustee is a mere purse, and only in a secondary sense can be said to owe anything to any one other than faithfulness to its trust obligations, and is not a debtor even in this secondary sense unless and until and as the moneys which belong to the contributors come into its hands. The certificate is not within the literal verbiage [sic] of the Act of Congress not being "a certificate of indebtedness issued by any person" nor "an instrument issued by any corporation." If the taxing hand has been laid only upon these specific forms of what are generally known as securities, it must be withdrawn from the "trust certificates" now under view. This would mean that they are the exceptions among this general class of securities and are exempt because of the very effort made in the framing of the law to include all forms of securities of this general character has, in verbal nicety, excluded them. The Act of Congress, however, includes more than the two kinds of securities mentioned above, because we think it includes everything "known generally as corporate securities." That these trust certificates are so known would not be denied. The denial would be of the correctness of this construction of the Act of Congress. There are two obstacles to be surmounted before reading this construction. One is that the rule of the nearest antecedent makes the quoted phrase relate to and serve as a definition of the described kinds of "instruments issued by corporations," and the other is that the finding of a meaning to tax all instruments "commonly known as corporate securities" involves presence of a grammatical error in the Act of Congress. Neither of these obstacles are however insurmountable, if this was the meaning of Congress, and we so find. Nor do we see any conflict between a ruling that these certificates are taxable and the doctrine of the cases to which we have been referred that there is no such thing as a doubtful tax. U. S. vs. Isham, 84 U. S., 496.

4014 The question now presented is admittedly a close one, but this does not necessarily make for the taxpayer. The true doctrine is that neither the Executive nor the Judicial Departments nor both can levy a tax. This can only be done by Congress. When, however, Congress has acted and the tax questioned is found to have been levied, the mere fact that in the light of the particular case in which the question is raised the meaning of Congress might have been more clearly expressed, does not justify refusal to give that meaning effect. The real truth back of the whole discussion is that if these certificates are not taxable, it is because of the accidental circumstance of a wholly nominal separation of the security held by the taxpayer from the obligation of debt entered into by the carrier corporation. The real security is the promise not of one corporation but of two to pay to the certificate holders the sums due them. The real transaction is the request of the carrier company made to the certificate holders to advance the money required for equipment, in consideration of which the carrier agrees to pay back the sum advanced, with interest. This it is true was not the form of the promise, but such it was in substance because it was a promise to pay a sum which was the exact (and not accidental but prefixed) equivalent of the advances, with interest. It is, however, and none the less true, that if for any reason Congress has not included these certificates, no tax can be imposed. The impression to this effect made by the argument at bar has been removed by what seems to us to be the sufficiently expressed will of Congress to tax them.

4015 We have disposed of the case as if on trial hearing with all the facts which enter into the discussion established, understanding such to be the wish of all parties, it being conceded that all these facts are in the record.

Rule for judgment discharged.

4016 Reliance by original-issue agents, for stamp tax purposes, on state-3503 ment of officials of corporation as to "actual value" of its non-par value stock.—Reference is made to your letters of January 3 and 6, 1922, concerning the application of the stamp tax to the issue of stock of no par or face value where such stock is worth less than $20 per share.

4017 It is noted that rulings are requested as follows: "May we regard as sufficient authority for tax determination purposes a resolution or instructions from the Board of Directors or the officers of the issuing corporation to the effect that the issued stock is of a certain 'actual value' for stamp tax purposes?"

4018 In your letter of January 6, 1922, you state "we are the original issue and transfer agents for many corporations and affix revenue stamps for them in the case of original issue of stock." In the absence of further definite information it is assumed for the purposes of this reply that the status of principal and agent correctly describes the legal relationship between you and the corporation for which you act. The responsibility for the correct determination of the actual value of no-par-value stock is upon the taxpayer. Although as a general rule your principal (i. e., the corporation issuing the stock) would be liable for additional taxes and penalties resulting from an incorrect determination of such value, it is absolutely impossible for this office to advise you that in all cases the issue or transfer agent would be free to accept with absolute impunity the resolution or instructions of the proper corporate officials as to the actual value of the stock.

4019 Original issue tax liability on certificate representing more than one [3521 share having actual value of less than $100.—"We ask also that you advise us as to your interpretation of the no-par-value stock-issue tax provided for by Schedule A (2). Where the actual value 'is less than $100 per share' is the tax of 1 cent 'on each $20 of actual value or fraction thereof' on a per share basis, or is it based on the actual value of the certificate which may represent a number of shares?" (Answer.) The stamp tax should be computed on the value of each share. Where the actual value of a share of no par value stock is $5 the tax on ten shares of such stock will be 10 cents. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated January 26, 1922.)

4020 Transfer of stock registered in name of a partnership to the individual members thereof.—Reference is made to your letter of January 14, 1922, wherein you state that a partnership * * * has presented for transfer a certificate of stock for 100 shares of * * * Railway, registered in the name of the partnership, to be split up in the names of the two parties [the two members of the partnership] 50 shares to each, and request to be advised whether said transfer is subject to stamp tax. (Answer) In reply you are advised that this office holds that the transfer of this stock from a partnership to the members of the partnership individually is subject to stamp tax. (Letter to The Equitable Trust Company, New York, N. Y., attention Franklin Carter, Jr., signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated February 3, 1922.)

4021 Stamps of large denominations in proper aggregate amount may be affixed to permanent corporation record accompanying proxies in lieu of separate stamps to the respective proxies.—Reference is made to your letter of May 2, 1922, in reply to the letter from this office dated April 26, in regard to the affixing of documentary stamps of large denominations covering the amount of stamp tax incurred under the provisions of section 10, Title XI, of the Revenue Act of 1921.

4022 In reply you are advised that where the number of proxies required in voting at a stockholders' meeting is sufficiently large to warrant the purchase of stamps of large denominations in payment of the stamp tax on such proxies, the stamps may be affixed to a permanent record of the corporation and signed by the secretary of such corporation, provided the corporate seal is affixed thereto. This permanent record should accompany the proxies for which the stamps were canceled.

4023 In the event that the special certificate of election mentioned in your letter remains with the proxies in question, such certificate should bear the documentary stamps properly canceled and be retained in the office of the corporation for inspection by the officers of the Bureau of Internal Revenue. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated May 27, 1922.)

4024 Transfer of stock standing in name of brokerage firm, and held by 3595 it for account of its clients, to and into name of successor firm is taxable.—Reference is made to your letter of October 19, 1921, wherein you state that certain shares of Southern Pacific Company's stock stand in the name of Berg, Roesler and Kerr; that said firm has dissolved and a new firm formed under the name of Berg, Eyre and Kerr, and that the new firm desires to transfer to its name the shares standing in the name of the old firm. In connection with this transfer you enclose a copy of a communication received by you and which reads as follows:

"Southern Pacific Railway Company, 165 Broadway,
New York, N. Y.

Dear Sirs:

We hereby guarantee that the firm of Berg, Roesler and Kerr have no ownership in any securities presented for transfer registered in their name and that said securities were held by the firm of Berg, Roesler & Kerr for the accounts of their clients and transferred to Berg, Eyre & Kerr under the same conditions as existed with Berg, Roesler & Kerr.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) Berg, Roesler & Kerr.
(Signed) Berg, Eyre & Kerr."

4025 You are advised that the transfer of the stock under the circumstances related is held not to come within the proviso of Sub-division 4, Schedule A, Title XI of the Revenue Act of 1918, which exempts from stamp tax deliveries or transfers to a broker for sale, this provision being construed by the Bureau to apply only to the transfer of certificates of stock from the owner thereof to the broker solely for the purpose of enabling such broker to make a sale thereof for the owner. (See Article 13(k) of Regulations 40, Revised [¶3625.]). The transfer in question is, therefore, held to be subject to stamp tax. (Letter to the Southern Pacific Company, New York, N. Y., signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated Nov. 4, 1921.)

4026 Transfer of stock from banking institution to its nominee is taxable.—
3595 Reference is made to your letter of August 4, 1922, relative to the application of stamp tax to a transfer of stock from a banking institution to its nominee, accompanied by a certificate that there is no change in the ownership of the stock. ¶In reply you are advised that the transfer tax is not measured by the transfer of ownership of stock but by the transfer of legal title to stock. The term "legal title" as used in the act signifies the appearance of title. See Bonbright v. State of New York, 165 App. Div. 640, 151 N. Y. Supp. 35, which case is followed by the Department. You are accordingly advised that the transfer of the stock to the nominee of the bank as referred to by you is subject to stamp tax. (Letter to the Empire Trust Company, New York, N. Y., signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated August 16, 1922.)

4027 Trust certificates issued under the Pennsylvania Plan held to be taxable as "Certificates of Indebtedness."—Comment: Decision of United States District Court, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in Fidelity Trust Company vs. Lederer, Collector. Sur trial by the court sitting without a jury. After trial Judge Dickinson says: "This case, although in form assumpsit, raises the sole question of the legality of a tax levy. The very question now raised was raised and disposed of on a rule for judgment. Judgment was refused [¶4010]. This necessitated a trial hearing, but the question to be determined has in no wise changed." And in conclusion: "Our conclusion is on the trial what it was on the rule for judgment, that these car-trust certificates are subject to the tax imposed by this act of Congress." (T. D. 3417, Dec. 16, 1922. Reported in full in Internal Revenue Bulletin No. 52 of the 1922 Series, page 15.)

Revenue Act of 1918.

August 18, 1922.

Installment purchase agreement contracts even though embodying an "agreement to pay" in terms, are not per se promissory notes, and so, are not taxable as such.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA NORTHERN DIVISION

Haverty Furniture Co.

vs.

United States.

4028 SAMUEL H. SIBLEY, J.—The tax sought to be recovered was collected under the Revenue Act of 1918, Schedule A6, which lays a stamp tax of 2 cents per $100 on "drafts or checks * * * promissory notes, except bank notes issued for circulation, and for each renewal of the same." The instruments here involved are claimed to be "promissory notes." They begin with the words, "This agreement witnesseth that I * * * have this day purchased from the Haverty Furniture Co." and conclude with the words, "this writing is the whole contract and no verbal statements or representations are binding." They state at length the description of the furniture bought, the terms and conditions of the sale, including price and time of payment, provide for a retention of title, give an option to the seller to rescind on failure to pay and to appropriate the payments made to rent and depreciation of the furniture, and other agreements. Some of them in stating the price have the words "for which I agree to pay (so much)" others simply "for (so much)."

4029 The suggestion that the form of contract, with the alteration of it, is an effort to evade the tax may be laid aside. Where one form of instrument is taxed and another not, one may, if he can so satisfactorily transact his affairs, avoid the form that is taxed and use that which is not. This was held in United States vs. Isham, 17 Wall. 496. Under the Revenue

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

Act of 1898, which laid a tax upon bank checks, a practice was indulged without censure by which in lieu of a check an untaxed receipt to the bank for so much money as paid to a named person was issued, and taken up by the bank on presentation. If the instruments here are promissory notes they are taxable, otherwise not. As again ruled in Isham's case, the taxability of such an instrument is to be determined by its face alone. Outside facts are of no importance. Nor is the practice of the Internal Revenue Department helpful here. No practice appears that decides this question. The regulations and decisions referred to furnish no test, for there is as much difficulty in applying them to the papers here in question as in applying the words of the Act.

4030 What did Congress mean by the term "promissory notes?" It did not use such broad expressions as "all written evidences of debt," or "all written obligations to pay money." By "promissory notes," used in connection with drafts and checks, was intended commercial paper which generally throughout the United States would be so called and recognized. The exclusion of circulating bank notes illustrates what was thought otherwise to be included. Whether negotiability was contemplated or not, whether an I. O. U. or a due bill is to be included need not now be decided. But there must be an instrument at least whose plain purport is an unconditional and absolute promise to pay a fixed sum to a named or certain person at a fixed time or at sight or on demand, according to commercial usage. This much is included in all the definitions of a promissory note set forth in 7 Cyc. page 532. Instruments which appear on their face to be essentially memorandums of sale, although they evidence an obligation to pay money when the sale shall be consummated, were not intended. Such were dealt with in another portion of the Act, where only those of sales of produce for future delivery on exchanges were taxed. Looking solely to the face of these papers, there is nothing to show that the sale agreed upon therein had been executed by a delivery of the furniture. A suit for the purchase money could not be maintained by merely putting in evidence such a paper. It would have to be supplemented by proof that the seller had on his part delivered the furniture, or tendered delivery. Hence there is here no absolute unconditional promise to pay. Even those forms containing the words "for which I agree to pay" are not such. The meaning is that the buyer agrees to pay on the seller's delivering the furniture. The writings are memorandums of sale which would satisfy the statute of frauds in proving the contract, but they are not promissory notes within the meaning of this statute.

4031 Judgment is accordingly rendered in favor of the plaintiff against the United States for One Hundred and Fifty-eight and 91/100 Dollars and costs of suit.

4032 Instances of nontaxable transfers from trustee to substituted trustee of legal title to stock because resulting wholly from operation of law, under the laws of New York.—Reference is made to your inquiry of December 19, 1922, relative to the applicability of stamp tax to the transfer of stock to trustees under conditions outlined therein. The rule laid down in Article 12 (c) Regulations 40 (1922 Edition) and generally applicable is that the transfer of stock to or by trustees is subject to tax. It has been uniformly held by the Department, however, that where a transfer of stock results wholly from operation of law no stamp tax accrues. It was provided in Office Decision 127, S. T. 5-21-250,* that whether or not a given transfer of legal title to stock results wholly from operation of law depends upon the effect given to the particular transaction by the law of the state in which such transaction occurred. Section 270 of the Tax Law of the State of New York (Birdseye's Consol. Laws of N. Y. Vol. VIII, p. 8607) imposes a stock transfer tax identical with that imposed by the Revenue Act of 1921 in so far as the present question is concerned. In construing Section 270 of the New York Tax Law, the following situation was encountered and presented to the Attorney General of that State for a ruling thereon:

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

"A testator left certain personal property, including shares of stock, in trust to be held by two named trustees, and in case of the death of either the survivor to have the right to nominate a co-trustee to succeed the one deceased. One of the trustees having died, the survivor nominated the Brooklyn Trust Company as successor co-trustee and the latter was duly appointed co-trustee with the survivor by order of the court."

"The stock in question which had stood in the joint names of the two trustees appointed by the will, and upon which stamps had been affixed at the time of the transfer to the trustees from the executors, is about to be surrendered by the surviving trustee for new certificates in the joint names of himself and the Brooklyn Trust Company as co-trustee."

Upon the above stated facts the following decision was made:

"Generally speaking, at least, the word 'transfer' as used in section 270 of the Tax Law has reference to a transaction between living parties and not to cases of devolution of title by death. (Reports of Attorney General 1911, Vol. 2, p. 107; 1912, Vol. 2, p. 211.)

"In cases of this character the title to the stock vests, by operation of law, in the succeeding trustee upon his appointment and there is no transfer within the meaning of section 270 of the Tax Law, but a mere substitution of evidences of title, which is insufficient to subject the transaction to the payment of a tax." Rept. of Attorney General (1912 N. Y.) Vol. 11, p. 352.

The above ruling was subsequently extended by the same authority to apply to the case of where two of three co-trustees resigned and pursuant to the provisions of the will the one remaining trustee appointed a fourth person to serve with him as trustee. Rept. of Attorney General (1914 N. Y.) Vol. 11, p. 345.

4033 In view of the above mentioned opinions of the Attorney General of New York, you are advised in reply to the questions enumerated in your letter that:

(1) No stamp tax accrues on the transfer of stock from a trustee who has died to a substituted trustee appointed by a New York court to continue the same trust.

(2) No stamp tax accrues where there are two trustees and on the death of one the title is transferred from the deceased trustee to the surviving trustee alone.

(3) No stamp tax accrues where there are two or more trustees and one dies and the court appoints a new trustee to fill the place of the one deceased with no change in the ownership of the surviving trustees; or where a trustee has resigned and a substituted trustee is appointed to continue the trust pursuant to the terms of the will.

The foregoing is applicable only in the case of transfers of stock to trustees appointed under the laws of the State of New York. (Letter to Geller, Rolston and Blanc, New York, N. Y., signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated January 31, 1923.)

(T. D. 3446.)

4034 Sales and transfers of stock not subject to tax.—Paragraphs (k) and (l) of Article 13, Regulations 40, 1922 Edition, are hereby amended to read as follows:

4035 “(k) The mere delivery of a certificate of stock by or on behalf of 3625 a customer to his broker solely for the purpose of enabling such broker to make a sale thereof for the customer where the broker has no ownership or interest therein, is not subject to stamp tax and does not require an exemption certificate. The transfer of a certificate of stock from the name of the owner thereof to the name of a broker, solely for the purpose of enabling such broker to make a sale thereof for the owner, is not subject to tax, provided the broker shall in every case, at the time of such transfer to him, make and sign a certificate stating that he has no ownership in such stock and that the transfer to him was made solely to enable him to sell the stock for the owner. Such certificate shall in every case be attached to the certificate of stock and presented to the transfer agent at the time such certificate of stock is surrendered for transfer and shall be preserved, together with the old certificate, by such transfer agent, for the inspection of the revenue officer.

4036 “(l) The mere delivery of a certificate of stock from a broker to his 3626 customer for whom he has purchased such certificate and when such broker has no ownership or interest therein, is not subject to the stamp tax and does not require an exemption certificate. The transfer of a certificate of stock from the name of a broker to the name of his customer for whom and upon whose order he has purchased such stock, where the tax has been paid upon the transfer of the stock to the broker, is not subject to tax, provided that the broker shall in every case, at the time of such transfer from him, make and sign a certificate stating that the transfer from the broker to his customer is made solely to complete the purchase made by such broker for such customer. Such certificate in every case shall be attached to the certificate of stock and presented to the transfer agent at the time such certificate of stock is surrendered for transfer, and shall be preserved, together with the old certificate, by such transfer agent, for the inspection of the revenue officer.”

4037 Article 13 of Regulations 40, 1922 Edition, is hereby amended by adding two new paragraphs (o) and (p) reading as follows:

4038 “(o) A ‘call’ is an agreement to sell and is taxable; but a transfer 3629 of a certificate of stock pursuant to the ‘call’ is not taxable, being only a fulfillment of the original agreement. The seller shall execute and attach to the certificate of stock his certificate, which shall be accepted by the transfer agent and shall be preserved by him for inspection of the revenue officer. The certificate here prescribed shall be in the following form:

"We hereby certify that the transfer of.....shares of the within stock to.....has been made pursuant to a 'call,' and that the Federal stock transfer stamps for the transaction are affixed to such 'call,' which is in our possession.

4039 "(p) Where, under Paragraph (k) of this Article, a certificate of 3629 stock, standing either in the name of the owner or any other person, has been delivered by the owner thereof to a broker for sale, and subsequently, under paragraph (l) of this Article, such certificate has been delivered by a broker to his customer for whom it is purchased and the tax has been paid upon the delivery of such certificate from the seller's broker to the buyer's broker, the transfer of such certificate of stock into the name of the buyer is not subject to tax, provided, that either requisite stamps shall have been affixed to the certificate of stock upon its delivery to the buyer's broker, or the memorandum of sale evidencing the transaction between the seller's broker and the buyer's broker, with the requisite stamps affixed thereto, shall have been attached to such certificate at such time and presented to the transfer agent at the time such certificate is surrendered for transfer. The old certificate, together with the memorandum of sale, if used, shall be preserved by such transfer agent for the inspection of the revenue officer."

3582 Amended.—Article 5(g) of Regulations 40, 1922 Edition, is hereby amended to read as follows:

"(g) The issue of certificates of stock in exchange for outstanding certificates, for the purpose of splitting up a certificate for a number of shares into two or more certificates for a smaller number of shares of the same kind of stock, where there is no change in ownership or in the total amount of such stock issued, is not subject to tax." (T. D. 3466, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated April 13, 1923.)

4041 Taxability of instruments entitled "Sale of Oil and Gas Royalty," 3841 and "Oil and Gas Leases."—Reference is made to your letter of 3866 February 28, 1923, with respect to the taxability of instruments entitled "Sale of Oil and Gas Royalty" and "Oil and Gas Lease," copies of which were enclosed.

In the instrument entitled "Sale of Oil and Gas Royalty" the grantor grants, bargains, sells, conveys and sets over to ———, his heirs, successors and assigns an undivided ——— interest in all the oil, gas, coal and other minerals now, or any time hereafter, lying in or under certain described land; also an undivided ——— interest in the grantor's right, title and estate, under and by virtue of an oil and gas mining lease, or other mineral lease, now or hereafter existing upon said land; also the perpetual and irrevocable right, privilege, and easement of entering upon said land and searching for, drilling wells, and taking and carrying away all of the oil, gas, etc., in or under said lands or that may be found therein or thereunder. It contains the usual

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

habendum clause and a warranty of title. It provides that the land described in the conveyance is subject to a certain oil and gas mining lease and that such lease passes to and vests in the grantee. It also expressly declares that it is the true intent and purpose of the conveyance to pass to and vest in the grantee an undivided ——— interest in all the mineral and mineral rights in the land specified to all intents and purposes as if the grantee were the absolute owner of the entire title and estate in that land.

4042 The instrument entitled "Oil and Gas Lease" is what it purports to be, namely, a lease, and grants merely a right or license to enter and explore for oil and gas and to sever them if found.

4043 Schedule A-6, Title XI, of the Revenue Act of 1921, provides:

"Conveyances: Deed, instrument, or writing, whereby any lands tenements, or other realty sold shall be granted, assigned, transferred or otherwise conveyed to, or vested in the purchaser or purchasers, or any other person or persons, by his, her, or their direction, when the consideration or value of the interest or property conveyed, exclusive of the value of any lien or encumbrance remaining thereon at the time of sale, exceeds $100 and does not exceed $500, 50 cents; and for each additional $500 or fractional part thereof, 50 cents. This subdivision shall not apply to any instrument or writing given to secure a debt."

4044 Article 63 (a) of Regulations 55, (1922 Edition) provides in part [¶3841]:

"Art. 63. What constitutes real property determinable by law of State where located.—(a) What constitutes 'lands, tenements, or other realty' is determinable by the law of the State in which the property is situated."

4045 Section 6590, Revised Laws of Oklahoma, 1910, provides:

"Real property defined. Real or immovable property consists of:

"First. Land.

"Second. That which is affixed to land.

"Third. That which is incidental or appurtenant to land.

"Fourth. That which is immovable by law."

4046 Section 6591 provides:

"Land defined. Land is the solid material of the earth, whatever may be the ingredients of which it is composed, whether soil, rock or other substance."

4047 Section 6593 provides in part:

"Appurtenances defined. A thing is deemed to be incidental or appurtenant to land when it is by right used with the land for its benefit, as in the case of a way or water-course, or of a passage for light, air or heat, from or across the land of another."

4048 Section 6594 provides:

"Personal property defined. Every kind of property that is not real is personal."

4049 It clearly appears from the above statutes that minerals, including oil and gas, are in the State of Oklahoma a part of the realty while in place in and under land and, as such, are subject to sale and conveyance. (Rich v. Doneghy (Okla.), 177 Pac. 86). This also appears to be the law in most jurisdictions. The real question involved is whether a particular instrument relating to oil and gas and other minerals in place operates as a lease or as a conveyance of realty. The provisions of the instrument designated "Sale of Oil and Gas Royalty" show that it was intended to and in fact operates as an absolute conveyance of oil, gas and other minerals in place.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(Rich v. Doneghy, supra.) It is accordingly subject to the tax imposed by Schedule A-6, Title XI, of the Revenue Act of 1921. The provisions of the instrument designated "Oil and Gas Lease" clearly show that it was intended to and in fact operates as an oil and gas lease and vests no right to the lessee in the real estate, nor any interest therein or any right thereto, save to explore for oil, etc. (Kelly v. Harris, 162 Pac. 129 (Okla.)). It is, therefore, not subject to the tax imposed by Schedule A-6. See Article 87 of Regulations 55 (1922 Edition) [¶3866]. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Deputy Commissioner F. G. Matson, and dated April 28, 1923.)

Car Trust Certificates issued under the Pennsylvania Plan held not to be taxable as "Certificates of Indebtedness."

IN THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE THIRD CIRCUIT

FIDELITY TRUST COMPANY,
Plaintiff in Error,

vs.
EPHRAIM LEDERER, Collector of Internal Revenue,
Defendant in Error,

In Error to the District Court of the United States for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania

4050 Before BUFFINGTON and DAVIS, Circuit Judges, and McKEEHAN, 3520 District Judge. Buffington, Circuit Judge.—This case concerns the 3757 assessment of a stamp tax on car equipment trust certificates issued 4010 under what is known as the Philadelphia plan. The government 4027 assessed and collected such tax, basing its right so to do on the provision of the Revenue Act of 1918, quoted in the margin.* The plaintiff, having paid the tax under protest, brought suit against the Collector to recover the same back, but the Court held it had been properly assessed, and entered judgment for the defendant. Thereupon the plaintiff sued out this writ, and the question involved is whether the equipment trust certificates here concerned fall within the purview of the statute as being "Certificates of Indebtedness * * * issued by any corporation with interest coupons * * * known generally as corporate securities."
4051 Turning to that question, we note that the certificate issued by the

*"1. Bonds of Indebtedness: On all bonds, debentures or certificates of indebtedness issued by any person, and all instruments, however, termed, issued by any corporation with interest coupons or in registered form known generally as corporate securities, on each one hundred dollars of face value or fraction thereof five cents: provided, that every renewal of the foregoing shall be taxed as a new issue: Provided further, That when a bond conditioned for the repayment or payment of money is given in a penal sum greater than the debt secured, the tax shall be based upon the amount secured."

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

plaintiff, a copy of which is printed in the margin† does not evidence, or certify to, any indebtedness owing by the plaintiff to the bearer, nor is it the coupon contract usually accompanying corporate securities, to pay periodic interest indebtedness. On the contrary, it is simply a certificate of the right of its holder to participate in a rental payable under a certain lease which lease restricts the right of the certificate holder to payment solely "from and out of the deferred rentals when paid as provided for in a lease of 500 steel cars made by Fidelity Trust Company, Trustee, to Interstate Railroad Company, bearing date the 2nd day of February, 1920, which rentals are payable to the Trustee for the benefit of the holders of this and other certificates amounting at par to $900,000, to which lease and the agreement hereinbefore mentioned reference is made for a statement of the rights of the holders of such certificates." These certificates are issued under what is known as the Philadelphia plan, which was devised many years ago to provide for such a legal bailment of railroad equipment as would allow railroads to hold possession and use property owned by third parties. The legal method of financing such transactions was subscription to a fund—in this case, $900,000—which was handled by a trustee company and used to buy railroad equipment—in this case 500 steel cars—which were then leased to a railroad—in this case, the Interstate Railroad Company—at an annual rentals, the car meanwhile being marked "Fidelity Trust Company, Trustee, owner and lessor."

4052 It will thus be seen that when the transaction is viewed as a whole, as must be the case, and the certificate in question measured from that standpoint, no indebtedness is involved or obligation incurred by the trustee to the holder, but it is simply a certificate of the holder's right to proportionate participation in a rental when paid.

4053 Car trust certificates such as here involved, have been so long and so largely used in the financial world and are so vital a factor in the financing and equipment of railroads, that it would seem that Congress, had it intended taxing them, would have so covered them by a specific designation or by proper generic description, as to leave no question of its intent.

4054 In our judgment, the law and facts are with the plaintiff and the judgment of the District Court [¶4010 and ¶4027] is therefore reversed and the cause remanded to said Court for further procedure in accordance with this opinion.

†"Due to the bearer hereof on the 1st day of APRIL, 1923, on surrender hereof at the office of Fidelity Trust Company, Philadelphia, the sum of Thirty.....00/100 Dollars ($30.00) in United States Gold Coin, being the semi-annual dividend on Certificate No. .... of Interstate Railroad Equipment Trust Series C, payable only out of the rentals under the Lease referred to in the said Certificates.

4055 Memorandum for sales not required to show price per share at amended.—Article 15 of Regulations 40 (1922 Edition) is hereby amended to read as follows:

“Art. 15. Memorandum for sales.—Every person who makes an agreement to sell or transfer title to shares of stock by delivery of certificates assigned in blank, shall as a part of such transaction promptly make and deliver to the buyer a bill or memorandum of such sale or agreement to sell, duly signed by the seller or his agent, to which the requisite stamps shall be affixed and cancelled, which bill or memorandum shall show the date of the transaction, the names of the seller and buyer and the name and number of shares of stock,* and the tax paid thereon, and in the case of a transaction made on an exchange shall bear a number upon the face thereof and have printed and written in ink thereon the words “Subject to the Revenue Act of 1921 and regulations made in accordance therewith.” No more than one such bill or memorandum made by the seller on any given date shall bear the same number: Provided, however, That no single transaction or purchase or sale that is made upon an exchange by one member to another member shall require to be evidenced by more than one stamped memorandum of sale or agreement to sell.” (T. D. 3503, signed by Acting Commissioner, C. R. Nash, and dated August 2, 1923.)

*Omitting “and the price per share.”

4056 The form and face of the stock certificate determines the rate of 3591 transfer tax where stock is sold after an amendment of the issuing corporation's charter authorizing the exchange of new par value stock for existing no par value stock.—Consideration has been given your letter of April 16, 1923, objecting to the ruling of this Bureau, dated April 7, 1923, relative to the payment of stamp tax upon transfers of stock of the — Company in cases where the certificates transferred are, upon their face, of no par value though sold after an amendment of the Company's charter which authorizes the issuance of shares of the par value of $10 in exchange for an equal number of shares of no par value.

4057 This Bureau cannot concede the correctness of your position that the tax imposed under Schedule A-3, Title XI, of the Revenue Act of 1921 [¶3523], is not a tax upon the stock certificate but is a tax upon the transfer of title and that because of that fact the value of the shares as shown by the amended certificate of incorporation—not the face of the stock certificate—should control in determining the amount of the tax.

4058 Since under the specific language of section 1100 [¶3500], the tax is to be paid “for and in respect of the certificates of stock * * * and other documents or for or in respect of the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which such instruments are written * * * or printed” it is apparent that the tax is intended as a tax on the documents themselves. It is true the tax provided in Schedule A-3 [¶3523] is contingent upon the sale, agreement to sell, etc., shares or certificates of stock, but upon the performance of the acts described the tax attaches to the paper which evidences the transaction. The amount of the tax is to be computed, as specified in Schedule

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

A-3 on each $100 of face value, or where such shares are without par or face value it is to be computed on each share involved in the transaction.

4060 In the opinion of this Bureau this language though applied to a section of the Act relating to the issuance of certificates of stock applies with equal force to the section relating to the transfer of certificates of stock.

4061 In view of the language of the Act itself and in view of the decisions above cited this Bureau cannot depart from the well settled rule laid down in the case of U. S. v. Isham, above cited, that, "The liability of an instrument to a stamp duty, as well as the amount of such duty is determined by the form and face of the instrument and cannot be affected by proof of facts outside of the instrument itself." This Bureau therefore must adhere to its former ruling that the transfer tax liability should be computed on shares of no par value at the rate of 2 cents per share and that on shares which show the change to a par value of $10 the tax should be computed at the rate of 2 cents for each $100 of par value of fraction thereof. (Extracts from a letter to a subscriber, signed by Deputy Commissioner, F. G. Matson, and dated May 23, 1923.)

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

4062 The issue of four $25 shares in exchange for each outstanding 3561 $100 share (otherwise of the same kind) and the subsequent issue of a share of no par value stock in exchange for each $25 share, all pursuant to amendments of the issuing corporation's charter increasing the number of shares but not the amount of its capital, held not subject to original issue tax.—[Comment: In West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company
vs. Bowers, Collector (U. S. District Court—New York, Southern District, August 1, 1923), the plaintiff sought to recover stamp taxes paid under protest on that which the Collector termed original issues of stock on reorganization, and thereupon taxed as such pursuant to the provisions of Article 4 (h), Regulations 40 [Par. 3561], and which consisted of the exchange of 4 shares of new $25 par value common stock for each share of outstanding $100 par value common stock, otherwise of the same kind, in accordance with an amendment of the plaintiff's charter increasing the number of shares from 200,000 to 800,000 without change in the amount of its capital which remained $20,000,000, and the subsequent exchange of one share of no par value stock for each share of $25 par value stock pursuant to further amendment of the corporation's charter.—The Corporation Trust Company.]

Memorandum Opinion.—Knox, J.: In a case such as this there is little use for a court of first instance to enter upon a discussion of its views as to the interpretation to be placed upon a particular taxing statute. Any decision of mine will be but a conduit through which a more authoritative ruling will be had, and for such reason I forbear to elaborate upon my conclusions.
 It is enough to say that in my judgment the acts of plaintiff giving rise to the assessment of the tax in question are not within the purview of the statute upon which defendant relies. What plaintiff did, in my opinion, is not to be regarded as an original issuance of stock, either upon organization or reorganization. No essential change in the capital with which plaintiff does business has taken place, and the rights of its stockholders have been neither increased nor lessened. They continue to hold their respective portions of the original issue of stock save that such portions are now evidenced by an increased number of pieces of paper, and these they may have without their corporation being subjected to the tax assessed against it. Defendant's motion for judgment of dismissal is denied and unless defendant desires to litigate the allegations of fact set up in the complaint there is no reason why plaintiff should not have judgment for the sum sued for.

July 24, 1923.

The prorata issue, under amendment to charter, of a number of shares of reduced par value in exchange for each share outstanding, and aggregating the par value thereof, without change of character in the stock and without increasing the total capitalization held not to be subject to tax as original issue on reorganization.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE UNITED STATES, SOUTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO, WESTERN DIVISION

The American Laundry Machinery Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Ohio, Plaintiff, No. 3259

vs.

Charles M. Dean, United States Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of Ohio, Defendant.

The Procter & Gamble Company, a corporation organized and existing under the laws of the State of Ohio, Plaintiff, vs. No. 3244

Ruling of court on demurrer to Plaintiff's petition.

For plaintiffs: Dinsmore, Shohl and Sawyer, Cincinnati, Ohio.

4063 Hickenlooper, District Judge (orally): These petitions are filed by the several plaintiffs for recovery of taxes paid under Section 1100, Schedule A, Paragraph 2, of the Revenue Act of 1921 (42 Stat. 227, 301, 303), and Section 1100, Schedule A, Paragraph 3, of the Act of February 24, 1919, commonly known as the Revenue Act of 1918. The language of both sections is identical, and by both it is provided that there shall be "levied, collected and paid, for and in respect of * * * certificates of stock * * * or for or in respect of the vellum, parchment, or paper upon which such instruments * * * are written or printed * * * the several taxes specified in such schedule." Schedule A, Paragraph 2, provides for the above mentioned stamp tax "on each original issue, whether on organization or reorganization, of certificates of stock * * * by any corporation, on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof, 5 cents."

4064 In order to facilitate dealing in the stock of the plaintiff corporations and the acquisition and wider distribution of such stock by and among employees, customers, and the public in general, amendments to the articles of incorporation were secured whereby the par value of the outstanding and issued capital stock was reduced in amount, and holders of stock of the original $100 par value shares were given the right to, and did, transfer or convert such shares into the larger number of shares of reduced par value. Neither the aggregate par value of any holder nor the aggregate par value of all stockholders was increased, nor was the type of stock changed in other respect than in the number of shares outstanding. In other words, before the amendment the common capital stock of the Procter & Gamble Company consisted of $19,714,000 divided into 197,140 shares of the par value of $100 each, while after the amendment had become effective such common capital stock still continued as the sum of $19,714,000 divided into 985,700 shares of the par value of $20 each, and each holder of one share of the par value of $100 each had received in lieu of his certificate therefor a certificate for five shares of $20 par value each. The defendant contends that these newly-issued certificates are subject to tax under the laws above quoted.

4065 There is no question that the taxes provided by the revenue acts in question are documentary stamp taxes. Malley, Collector, v. Bowditch, et al., 259 Fed. 809; Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co., 264 Fed. 610. But, unlike the stamp tax upon promissory notes, the provisions of the law are not applicable to all certificates of stock, but by their express terms pertain only to certificates of "original issue." The question is not whether the certificates themselves are original, but whether the issue is original.

4066 The defendant contends that in passing upon this point the court is constrained to look only to the certificates themselves, and to determine whether any certificates identical in kind had heretofore been issued and outstanding, citing United States v. Isham, 17 Wall. 496. Were the question whether the certificates were in fact certificates of stock, or debentures, or some other type of instrument, the citation would be applicable, but since the court is of the opinion that the criterion must be the originality of the issue, inquiry must extend beyond the certificates themselves. An original issue of capital stock involves the idea of a change in the amount or kind of stock outstanding. Capital stock of corporations may be divided into several well-known classes. We thus find, among the recognized corporate issues, common stock, preferred stock of various classes, issues, and priorities, and the more recent and somewhat unique no-par value stock. We are not at this time prepared to say that a change from par value common stock to no-par value common stock would not constitute a change in the kind of capital stock outstanding just as much as a change of common stock to a preferred stock, and vice versa, would constitute such change in kind, but we are firmly of the opinion that no original issue of stock can exist without either a change in the amount of such stock outstanding or in the kind or character of such stock.

4067 Counsel for the plaintiff alleges that the criterion should be whether a corporation has assumed different obligations towards its several stockholders, or whether the stockholders have secured different "ultimate rights" against the corporation. This might be made the criterion were the change in the kind or character of the stock outstanding, but will not apply if the change be in amount of capital stock outstanding. No change of obligation upon the part of the corporation, or of ultimate right on the part of the stockholders, exist after the issuance of stock as a stock dividend, but there can be no question but that stock issued by way of dividend is an original issue and subject to tax.

4068 The court places no reliance whatever upon the language of the law "whether on organization or reorganization." These are not words of limitation, restricting the operation of the tax to the cases of original organization or reorganization of corporations, but are simply declaratory of the application of the law to cases of original organization and reorganization, as well as cases of all other original issues. As above stated, therefore, the question resolves itself into whether the present issues are original issues in the sense this phrase is used in the statute.

4069 The defendant contends that the new smaller par value shares cannot be a substitution for the shares turned in, of larger par value, because of the excess in number of the former over the latter. In the opinion of the court this argument is specious in that the law makes the par value of the stock the foundation of the tax, and not the number of shares. If the number of shares of the same par value were increased, and old certificates were exchangeable for new certificates for a greater number of shares, but each of the same par value, the point would be well taken, and no objection could be successfully urged against the taxation upon the additional number of shares so issued. In such a case there would be a change in the amount of such stock outstanding. In the present case, however, there is no change in the par value of the common stock outstanding after the exchange and before. Nor is there any change in the rights and privileges, either in sharing in the earnings or participating in the management, as to any stockholder before and after he has exchanged his stock. The right to cast four or five votes, where the stockholder previously had the right to cast but one, in no way changes the proportionate voting power of the stockholder or his proportionate interest in the assets and earnings of the corporation."

4070 We are clearly of the opinion that before any issue of capital stock can be designated an "original issue" some stock must pass from the treasury of the corporation into the hands of a stockholder which either differs as to kind, class, or privileges from stock which had theretofore been outstanding, or which increases the aggregate par value of some previously outstanding class of stock. The change of kind, class, or privileges referred to must be a change in substance and in fact, and not a mere change in name or form. In the instant case there was, in the opinion of the court, no change in the amount of the common capital stock outstanding. In each case this remained identically the same, as is already illustrated by the Procter & Gamble Company case cited above. There the aggregate par value of the common stock outstanding was the sum of $19,714,000 both before and after all shares had been exchanged for the lower par value. Nor was there any real change in the privileges attached to stock ownership. Certainly, the kind or character of the stock was not changed, being common stock both before and after the transaction. Nor was the transaction a reorganization of the corporation in the sense in which that word is used in the statute. Reorganization, as there used, contemplates the surrender of the old stock and the receipt of either stock in a new corporation or stock of a different kind or class in the old corporation.

4071 Not only do the several federal revenue acts predicate the tax upon the par value of the issue, thus recognizing capital stock as consisting of a definite monetary figure, but the general corporation laws of Ohio so define and fix the meaning of capital stock. Such capital stock consists of a definite, named amount of money, and the par value thereof, or the number of shares into which this fund is divided, is a collateral incident. In our opinion the increase in the number of shares, with a corresponding reduction in the par value of each, involves no change in either the amount or kind of stock of the plaintiff companies, issued and outstanding, and cannot be considered as an original issue.

The demurrers must, therefore, be overruled.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

September 22, 1923.

The issue of four shares of $25 par value for each outstanding share of $100 par value, pursuant to charter amendment reducing par value of shares, is not subject to tax as original issue on reorganization.

DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO
EASTERN DIVISION

The Trumbull Steel Company, Plaintiff,

vs.

C. F. Routzahn, Collector of Internal Revenue, Defendant.

4072 WESTENHAVER, District Judge:—The sole question presented is 3561 what issues of stock by a corporation are subject to the stamp tax 4062 imposed by Secs. 1100 and 1107, Schedule A, Par. 2, War Revenue 4063 Act approved Nov. 23, 1921, (42 Stat. 227, 301, 303; Supplement 1923 U. S. Comp. Stat. Sec. 6318i, 6318p, Schedule A, Par. 2).

4073 Prior to August 16, 1920, The Trumbull Steel Company had issued and outstanding, 131,681 shares of stock evidenced by certificates of par value of $100 each. On that date, pursuant to Secs. 8719-8722 G. C. of Ohio, the company amended its articles of incorporation, changing the par value of each share of $100 to $25. The outstanding certificates were thereafter called in and four new certificates for each of the old were issued.
No other change in stock ownership or stock privileges or corporate organization was made. A tax of five cents on each $100 par value of the new certificates was levied and assessed, paid under protest, and application for a refund made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and by him refused. Hence this action.

4074 Secs. 1100 and 1107, Revenue Act of 1921 are precisely the same as the corresponding sections of War Revenue Act of 1918 approved Feb. 24, 1919 (40 Stat. 1057, 1133, 1135). In all provisions pertinent to this controversy, these two revenue acts are precisely the same as the War Revenue Act of 1917 approved Oct. 3, 1917, (40 Stat. 300, 319, 321) and, as was pointed out in Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. (2 C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 610, the provisions of the War Revenue Act of 1917 were substantially the same, so far as they pertain to this subject matter, as corresponding provisions in the Spanish War Revenue Act approved June 13, 1898 (30 Stat. 458) and of the Emergency War Revenue Act approved Oct. 22, 1914 (38 Stat. 753). This being true, a construction given to the provisions of the War Revenue Act of 1917 or of the two other revenue acts referred to prior to the re-enactment of the same provisions in the Revenue Act of 1921, is controlling, upon the familiar rule that the re-enactment by Congress without change of a statute which has previously received a certain construction, whether judicial or departmental, is an adoption by Congress of such construction. Sewing Machine Companies

4075 The Act in question imposed a stamp tax of five cents on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof of capital stock. The language describing the same is "on each original issue, whether on organization or reorganization, of certificates of stock * * * by any corporation."

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

Transfers, sales, or reissue of certificates are subject to a different tax and are provided for in other paragraphs of Sec. 1107. Hence the question is, what is an original issue of certificates? Or, differently stated, what is an original issue on reorganization?

4076 These questions were fully considered in Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. supra. It arose under War Revenue Act of 1917 and was decided Feb. 8, 1920. The Wabash Ry. Co. had outstanding two classes of preferred stock and also common stock. It called in one class of preferred stock and converted it part into preferred and part into common and issued new certificates to the holders thereof, conferring new and different rights and privileges in the corporate property and management. It was held that this readjustment of the stock of the corporation was not an original issue either on organization or reorganization, and that the new certificates were not subject to the documentary stamp imposed by the War Revenue Act of 1917. This readjustment of corporate rights and privileges among stockholders was more fundamental and more worthy to be called a reorganization of the corporation than the changes effected by the plaintiff herein among its stockholders. In the former case the rights and privileges of the stockholders were, as between themselves, and in the assets of the corporation, substantially changed and readjusted, whereas in the present case no change was effected but each stockholder at the end of the process had merely four certificates evidencing precisely the same rights and privileges as were previously evidenced by a single certificate.

4077 Upon the principle and authorities above stated, this case is controlling. It is pointed out in the opinion that the provisions of the Spanish War Revenue Act imposing a stamp tax on stock certificates was given a departmental construction excluding therefrom re-issues where there was no change of ownership but merely a substitution in the hands of the same stockholder of certificates for one class of stock in lieu of certificates for another class (T. D. 20694, Feb. 7, 1899); and also that a like departmental construction had been given to the corresponding provisions of the Emergency War Revenue Act of 1914 (T. D. 2051, March 9, 1914); and that this departmental construction thus declared and acquiesced in was not changed until 1918 (T. D. 2752, Aug. 14, 1918). It was held that the re-enactment of the same language in the War Revenue Act of 1917 after this departmental construction had been established, was the equivalent of an adoption by Congress of that construction. In addition thereto we now have the re-enactment by Congress of the exact language of the War Revenue Act of 1917 after a judicial construction to the same effect.

4079 What is a reorganization of a corporation such as makes new certificates as original issue subject to the stamp tax, need not be further considered. Cook on Corporations, 6th Ed., Sec. 883, attempts a definition of a corporate reorganization. Obviously, that part of this definition which might be taken as classifying as a reorganization a mere adjustment of stock among stockholders, is excluded by Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co., and the reenactment by Congress of the same provisions without change of language after this construction was declared.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

Defendant's demurrer is overruled. An exception is noted.

4080 Lederer vs. Fidelity Trust Company.—[The United States Supreme 4050 Court, on October 22, 1923, granted the petition for a writ of certiorari in this case (§4050). (Docket No. 582, October Term, 1923.)—

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(T. D. 3530.)

4084. Bonds of indebtedness and certificates of indebtedness under the 1918 Act.—Court decision.—The decision of the United States District Court for the Southern District of Illinois in the case of Danville Building Association, A Corporation, v. John L. Pickering, Collector, the syllabus of which appears below [¶4085 to ¶4087] is published not as a ruling of the Treasury Department, but for the information of internal revenue officers and others concerned.

[The syllabus referred to in ¶4084 above, follows.]

4085 1. Bonds of Indebtedness—Scope of Title XI, Section 1100, Revenue Act of 1918 (Subdivision 1, Schedule A).—Title XI, Section 1100, of the Revenue Act of 1918 (Subdivision 1, Schedule A), lays a documentary stamp tax upon an instrument in writing, under seal, conditioned for the repayment of money borrowed and obligating the borrower to do certain things under penalty of forfeiture and foreclosure, regardless of whether the seal is necessary or unnecessary, regardless of whether the instrument is called by some other name than a bond of indebtedness, and regardless of whether it is negotiable or assignable or non-negotiable and non-assignable.

4086 2. Bonds of Indebtedness—Taxability Determined by the Face of the Instrument.—Under Title XI, Section 1100, of the Revenue Act of 1918 (Subdivision 1, Schedule A) the taxability of an instrument is determined by looking to its form and substance, and not particularly to its operation. Denominating a writing as a "contract" does not serve to exempt it from the tax if it is apparent from its face and substance that it is a taxable instrument.

4087 3. Certificate of Indebtedness—Negotiability and Assignability.—Title XI, Section 1100 of the Revenue Act of 1918 (Subdivision 1, Schedule A), taxing certificates of indebtedness, makes no exception in favor of such certificates as are non-negotiable and non-assignable and have none of the attributes of investment securities. (T. D. 3530, signed by Acting Commissioner C. R. Nash, and dated November 10, 1923.—Bull. II (23)-33, p. 13.)

[Consumption Tax on Jewelry to be Paid by Vendor.]

4529 (b) Every person selling any of the articles enumerated in this section shall make returns under oath in duplicate (monthly or quarterly as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may prescribe) and pay the taxes imposed in respect to such articles by this section to the collector for the district in which is located the principal place of business. Such returns shall contain such information and be made at such times and in such manner as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, may by regulations prescribe.

4530 (c) The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time so fixed for filing the return. If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per centum, together with interest at the rate of 1 per centum for each full month, from the time when the tax became due.

[Bona Fide Prior Contracts Made.]

4531 Sec. 906. (a) That if (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with a dealer for the sale or lease, after the tax takes effect, of any article in respect to which a tax is imposed by section 900 or 904, or by this subdivision, and in respect to which no corresponding tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (2) such contract does not permit the adding, to the amount to be paid thereunder, of the whole of the tax imposed by section 900 or 904 of this Act or by this subdivision; then the vendee or lessee shall, in lieu of the vendor or lessor, pay so much of the tax imposed by section 900 or 904 of this Act or by this subdivision as is not so permitted to be added to the contract price. If a contract of the character above described was made with any person other than a dealer, no tax shall be collected under this Act.

4532 (b) If (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with any other person for the sale or lease, after the tax takes effect, of any article in respect to which a tax is imposed by section 900 of this Act, and in respect to which a corresponding but greater tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, (2) the contract price includes the amount of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (3) such contract does not permit the deduction, from the amount to be paid thereunder, of the whole of the difference between the corresponding tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and the tax imposed by section 900 of this Act; then the vendor or lessor shall refund to the vendee or lessee so much of the amount of such difference as is not so permitted to be deducted from the contract price.

4533 (c) If (1) any person has, prior to August 15, 1921, made a bona fide contract with any other person for the sale or lease, after December 31, 1921, of any article in respect to which a tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and in respect to which no corresponding tax is imposed by section 900 of this Act, (2) the contract price includes the amount of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, and (3) such contract does not permit deduction, from the amount to be paid thereunder, of the tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918; then the vendor or lessor shall refund to the vendee or lessee so much of the amount of such tax as is not so permitted to be deducted from the contract price.

[Method of Handling Taxes Payable by Vendee.]

4534 (d) The taxes payable by the vendee or lessee under subdivision (a), shall be paid to the vendor or lessor at the time the sale or lease is consummated, and collected, returned, and paid to the United States by such vendor or lessor in the same manner and subject to the same penalties and interest as provided by section 903.

4535 (e) Any refund by the vendor or lessor under subdivision (b) or (c) shall be made at the time the sale or lease is consummated. Upon the failure of the vendor or lessor so to refund, he shall be liable to the vendee or lessee for damages in the amount of three times the amount of such refund, and the court shall include in any judgment in favor of the vendee or lessee in any suit for the recovery of such damages, costs of the suit and a reasonable attorney's fee to be fixed by the court.

[The Term "Dealer" Defined.]

4536 (f) A vendee who purchases any article with intent to use it in the manufacture or production of another article intended for sale shall be included in the term "dealer," as used in this section.

[Frauds on Purchasers.]

4537 Sec. 1326 [of Title XIII of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That whoever in connection with the sale or lease, or offer for sale or lease, of any article, or for the purpose of making such sale or lease, makes any statement, written or oral, (1) intended or calculated to lead any person to believe that any part of the price at which such article is sold or leased, or offered for sale or lease, consists of a tax imposed under the authority of the United States, or (2) ascribing a particular part of such price to a tax imposed under the authority of the United States, knowing that such statement is false or that the tax is not so great as the portion of such price ascribed to such tax, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment not exceeding one year, or both.

[Export Sales.]

4538 Sec. 1305 [of Title XIII of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe, the taxes imposed under the provisions of Titles VI, VII or IX shall not apply in respect to articles sold or leased for export and in due course so exported. Under such rules and regulations the amount of any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally collected in respect to exported articles may be refunded to the exporter of the article, instead of to the manufacturer, if the manufacturer waives any claim for the amount so to be refunded.

[Articles Purchased from and Sold to Virgin Islands.]

4539 Sec. 1304 [of Title XIII of the Revenue Act of 1918, which section has not been repealed]. That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in the United States, upon articles coming into the United States from the Virgin Islands, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the United States upon like articles of domestic manufacture; such articles shipped from such islands to the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of such islands: Provided, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in such islands, upon articles imported from the United States, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in such islands upon like articles there manufactured; and such articles going into such islands from the United States shall be exempt from payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States.

Credit may also be taken as outlined in the regulations. A complete and detailed record of such overpayment must be kept by the person taking credit therefor. In case credit is taken on this return for an overpayment made on a previous return, full information must be attached showing the reasons therefor and designating the kind of tax, the month for which the previous return was filed, and the date of payment. In the case of illegal or erroneous payment, such as exports, nontaxable articles, etc., claim for refund on Form 46 must be filed.

6. RECORDS.—Every manufacturer, producer, or importer required to make returns must keep such records as will clearly show each taxable transaction, in order that returns may be easily verified by revenue officers.

7. PENALTIES.—Failure to file on time, 25 per cent of tax. Failure to pay on time, 5 per cent of tax and 1 per cent interest a month. Severe penalties for failure to file returns or for false or fraudulent returns.

INSTRUCTIONS.

(For full instructions, see Regulations No. 45, Revised.)

1. TAX.—Section 902 of the Revenue Act of 1921 provides: "That there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid upon sculpture, paintings, statuary, art porcelains, and bronzes, sold by any person other than the artist, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the price for which so sold. This section shall not apply to the sale of any such article (1) to an educational institution or public art museum, or (2) by any dealer in such articles to another dealer in such articles for resale."

Section 905 of the Revenue Act of 1921 provides: "That on and after January 1, 1922, there shall be levied, assessed, collected, and paid (in lieu of the tax imposed by section 905 of the Revenue Act of 1918) upon all articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry, whether real or imitation; pearls, precious and semiprecious stones, and imitations thereof; articles made of, or ornamented, mounted or fitted with, precious metals or imitations thereof or ivory (not including surgical instruments, eyeglasses, and spectacles); watches; clocks; opera glasses; longuettes; marine glasses; field glasses; and binoculars; upon any of the above when sold by or for a dealer or his estate for consumption or use, a tax equivalent to 5 per centum of the price for which so sold."

2. COMPUTATION OF TAX.—Any person other than the artist who sells any of the articles enumerated in section 902 is required to make returns based on sales. Any dealer who sells any of the articles enumerated in section 905 is required to make returns based on sales.

Returns must be signed and sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, but if the tax is less than $10 the return may be signed or acknowledged before two subscribing witnesses.

4. CREDITS.—In case of any overpayment of tax due to an error in calculation, credit may be taken therefor against taxes due upon any subsequent monthly return. Credit may also be taken as outlined in the regulations. A complete and detailed record of such overpayment must be kept by the person taking credit therefor. In case credit is taken on this return for an overpayment made on a previous return, full information must be attached showing the reasons therefor and designating the kind of tax, the month for which the previous return was filed and the date of payment.

Imposition of tax.

4540 Art. 1. Effective date.—The tax is imposed on all articles sold or 4500 leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer on or after January 4521 1, 1922, even though manufactured, produced, or imported before that date.

4541 Art. 2. Use of terms.—In these regulations, for convenience, unless obviously inapplicable, the term "manufacturer" is used to include also "producer" and "importer;" the term "sale" or "sold" to include "lease" of "leased;" the term "purchaser" to include "lessee," and the term "vendor" to include "lessor." The term "person" is used to include partnerships, corporations, and associations, as well as individuals.

4542 Art. 3. Basis of tax.—The tax is imposed on the sale by the manufacturer and should be returned and paid by him whether the sales price is actually collected or not. It is measured by the price for which the article is sold by the manufacturer and not by the list price where that differs from the actual sales price. If the price of a taxable article is increased to cover the tax, and the article is sold at such price, including the tax, the tax is on such increased price.

4543 The manufacturer may reimburse himself in the amount of the tax by agreement with the purchaser in the following manner: (a) By quoting the selling price and the tax in separate and exact amounts, and where invoices are rendered, by segregating these amounts on the invoices as outlined in examples (1) and (6) below; or (b) by stating to the purchaser in advance of the sale what portion of the quoted price represents the price charged for the article and what portion represents tax, and where invoices are rendered by invoicing in the manner outlined in examples (2) and (3).

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

below, in which cases the amount of the tax need not be included in the price of the article in computing the tax.

4544 Where goods are ordered direct from the manufacturer with no agreement as to price, the tax is based on the amount billed or invoiced to the purchaser as the selling price. Mere statements or agreements that the quoted or contract price includes the tax do not operate to exclude any part thereof from tax, unless the price is billed in the manner outlined in example (1), (2), (3), or (6) below.

4545 Where a lump sum is specified as the price of a taxable article or articles, and other articles not taxable and not a component part of the taxable articles are included in the price, the tax attaches to the entire amount unless the selling prices of the taxable and nontaxable articles are segregated. In such case the tax will be measured by the price specified as the selling price of the taxable article or articles (examples 4 and 5). The following examples illustrate the method by which the manufacturer may separate the tax from the selling price in invoicing goods to the purchaser.

4546 Example (1). A, the manufacturer, quotes a selling price to B of $1 and bills the goods to B as:

“Article No. 1, selling price, $1; tax, $0.05.”

4547 Example (2). A, the manufacturer, quotes a selling price of $1.05, stating that the price includes a tax of 5 cents, and bills the goods to B as: “Article No. 1, selling price $1.05, 5 cents of the total represents tax.”

4548 Example (3). A, the manufacturer, quotes a selling price of $1.05, stating that 1-21 of the price represents tax, and bills the goods to B as: “Article No. 1, selling price $1.05, 1-21 of the total represents tax.”

It should be noted that example (3) applies only to articles taxable under section 900, and not to articles taxable under section 904.

4549 The tax in examples (1), (2), and (3) is computed upon $1, the quoted and actual selling price.

4550 Example (4). A, the manufacturer, quotes a cost price or contracts to sell goods at $1.05, including tax, and bills the goods to B as:

“Article No. 1, selling price including tax $1.05.”

The tax is computed upon $1.05, the quoted and invoiced selling price.

4551 Example (5). A manufacturer sells an automobile to B, including insurance, gas, and oil, and bills it as: “One car, $2,150.”

The tax is based on the full amount of $2,150.

4552 Example (6). If in example (5) the invoice separates the charges into items as, “car $2,000, gas and oil $20, insurance $30, tax $100,” the tax is based on $2,000, the selling price of the car as specified.

4553 Art. 4. Discounts and expenses.—A discount for cash or discount made subsequently to the sale can not be deducted in computing the price for the purpose of the tax.

4554 An adjustment in price, where articles are sold over a period of time, under an agreement for a quantity rebate, or an agreement for a rebate on goods remaining unsold in the hands of the dealer, and which were purchased by such dealer within a definitely specified period, in case of a decline in the market, is held not to be a discount made subsequently to the sale, and the tax, if originally computed on the gross price, may be adjusted in the return for the month in which the price is finally determined. If in such cases the tax assumed to be due on the original selling price has been billed to the dealer and by him to the purchaser as a separate item, and collected from the purchaser, the overcollection of tax arising from the asjustment of the sale price under the contract between the manufacturer and the dealer must be refunded to the purchaser.

4555 Commissions to agents and other expenses of sale are not deductible from the price.

4556 Freight and delivery charges are taxable as part of the sales price when the price to the purchaser includes transportation and delivery charges paid by the manufacturer, or when the amount charged the purchaser, whether billed as a separate item or not, does not represent the actual transportation charges.

4557 Freight and delivery charges are not part of the sales price when the goods are sold at the factory or f. o. b. cars at place of manufacture, when the transportation charges are paid by the purchaser as a specific item, or when the goods are sold delivered at a definite price less actual transportation charges to be paid by the purchaser. [This Article 4 was amended by T. D. 3307, March 20, 1922, but was subsequently restored to read as formerly and as here by T. D. 3358, June 22, 1922.]

4558 Art. 5. Exchanges.—If articles sold are returned and the sale entirely rescinded, no tax is payable, and if paid it may be credited against the tax included in a subsequent monthly return. (See article 40.) If a part only of the articles sold at one time is returned, and credit or rebate allowed by the vendor therefor, the portion of the tax to be credited will be only the proportion of the total tax paid which the amount allowed as a credit or rebate bears to the total sales price of all the articles.

4559 If an article is sold under a guaranty as to its quality or service and is thereafter returned and a rebate made pursuant to the guaranty, the manufacturer may claim as a credit against the tax included in a subsequent return such portion of the tax originally paid in respect of the article as is proportionate to the amount of the price refunded.

4560 Where any article taxable under section 900 or 904 is returned to the manufacturer thereof for adjustment, replacement, or exchange, under a guaranty as to quality or service, and a new article given pursuant to a guaranty, free or at a reduced price, the tax shall be computed on the actual price, if any, to be paid to the manufacturer for the new article.

4561 If an article is sold and thereafter, before use, exchanged for another article of a higher price, the purchaser paying the difference, the manufacturer should pay the tax on the second sale, but may take as a credit against such tax such part of the tax paid on the returned article, which the amount allowed as a credit for the return of such article on the second sale bears to the amount of the purchase price in the case of the first sale. The tax also attaches to the subsequent sale by the manufacturer of the article so returned.

4562 Art. 6. Credit for taxes already paid.—A manufacturer may take as a credit against the tax imposed on him in respect to the sale of any article taxable under section 900 an amount equal to any tax imposed under section 900 which he has reimbursed to the manufacturer from whom he purchased any article forming a component part (whether or not changed in form by process of manufacture) of the article sold by him and in respect to which tax is paid by him, provided the tax was billed to him as a specific item and in the exact amount of the tax. Similarly, he may take credit against a tax imposed on an article under section 904, a tax under the same section.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Credit is not allowed unless: (1) The article forms a component part of an article sold by such manufacturer and in respect to which a tax is payable by him; (2) such manufacturer has, in fact, reimbursed the manufacturer from whom purchased, who has himself, in fact, paid the tax upon which such credit is sought; (3) unless the taxpayer keeps such records and evidence as will clearly establish his right to the same.

4563 The following records and evidence will be deemed sufficient to establish this right of exemption: (1) Any record or statement showing the exact amount of tax paid upon such article; (2) a certificate or statement of the following tenor: "The undersigned hereby certifies that the articles on which credit for tax is claimed were tax paid and that said articles were used by _____ in the further manufacture of other articles taxable under section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1921. (Signed)_____." In cases of doubt, in order to avoid penalty for default if the claim is not established, the tax should be paid in full and application made for refund.

4564 Art. 7. Who is a manufacturer.—A manufacturer is generally a person who (1) actually makes a taxable article, or (2) by changes in the form of an article produces a taxable article, or (3) by the combination of two or more articles produces a taxable article. Under certain circumstances, however, the person who actually makes, produces, or assembles the taxable article is not the manufacturer for the purpose of the tax. There may be several stages of manufacture and several manufacturers, each of whom must pay a tax. In such cases the tax attaches on successive sales, subject to the provisions as to credits (see art. 6.). The following examples are merely illustrative:

4565 Example 1. "A," an automobile manufacturer, sells an automobile in a knockdown condition but complete as to all the component parts. "B," a dealer, assembles these component parts into a complete usable automobile, without further manufacture, and sells the automobile. "A" is the manufacturer.

4566 Example 2. "A," an automobile body manufacturer, sells an automobile body in a knockdown condition but complete as to all its component parts, to "B," a dealer, who assembles these component parts into a complete usable automobile body, and installs it, or causes it to be installed on a chassis which he has purchased from a manufacturer who is a different person from the manufacturer of the body, and sells the completed automobile. "A" is the manufacturer of the automobile body, but may sell the same to "B" tax free under the certificate provided for in article 14. "B" is the manufacturer of the automobile and subject to tax on the selling price of the completed automobile, but may take credit for the amount of tax paid by the manufacturer of the chassis. (See arts. 3 and 6.)

4567 Example 3. "A," a dealer or jobber, contracts with "B" for the manufacture of a taxable article, whereby "B" receives from "A" the cost of materials and labor plus a specified profit. "A" is the manufacturer.

4568 Example 4. "A," a dealer or jobber, contracts with "B" for the manufacture of a taxable article, whereby "A" furnishes "B" all or a portion of the material to be used and pays "B" for the labor plus a specified profit. "A" is the manufacturer.

4569 Example 5. "A," a dealer or jobber, owns a patent, trade-mark, formula, or recipe for a taxable article, and contracts with "B" for the manufacture thereof, the contract specifying that "B" can manufacture the article only for "A"; that "A" will take the entire output; and that it will be sold by "A" as the manufacturer, "B's" name not appearing on the article. "A" is the manufacturer.

4570 Art. 8. Tax payable by the manufacturer.—The tax is to be paid by the manufacturer on all sales made directly by him or through an agent.

4571 If the manufacturer has a sales agent or sales agency to whom he only nominally sells an article, but retains an interest in the profits from the resale of the article, the taxable sale is that made by the sales agent or sales agency.

4572 On articles manufactured for a jobber by a foreign manufacturer, the jobber must pay the tax as the importer.

4573 A receiver or trustee in bankruptcy of a manufacturer conducting a business under court order is liable to the tax upon articles sold by him.

4574 Where a manufacturer consigns articles to a dealer, retaining ownership in them until they are disposed of by the dealer, the manufacturer must pay the tax upon the basis of the manufacturer's selling price on all goods sold to the dealer, as shown by reports to be procured by him monthly from the dealer. Where the agent of a manufacturer makes a sale, it is to be treated as a sale by the manufacturer.

4575 Where a so-called sales agent or distributor is a separate corporation and the sale to it is absolute and at prices and under terms and conditions such as ordinarily obtain between persons dealing at arm's length with no further payment or benefit accruing to the manufacturer upon resale or otherwise except the receipt of dividends on stock holdings, the taxable sale is that made by the manufacturer to such sales corporation even though all or substantially all of the stock of such sales corporation is held by or for the benefit of the manufacturer or the stockholders in the manufacturing corporation. Where, however, there are special arrangements between the manufacturer and the selling corporation such as special terms, prices, etc., the taxable sale is the sale by the selling corporation as the selling agent of the manufacturer. The same rule applies in the case of the selling corporation which owns substantially all the stock of a manufacturing corporation.

4576 Art. 9. When tax attaches.—The tax attaches when the title to an article passes from the manufacturer to the purchaser pursuant to a contract of sale.

4577 When title passes is a question of fact dependent upon the intention of the parties as gathered from the contract of sale and the attendant circumstances.

4578 Where goods are segregated from other goods owned by the vendor and it is the intention of both the vendor and the purchaser at the time the goods are so segregated that they shall then belong to the purchaser, the title will be presumed to pass at such time.

4579 In the absence of an intention to the contrary the title is presumed to pass upon delivery of the article to the purchaser or to a carrier for the purchaser.

4580 In the case of a conditional sale, where title is reserved in the vendor until payment of the purchase price in full, the tax attaches (a) upon such payment, or (b) when title passes if before completion of the payments, or (c) when, before completion of the payments, the dealer disposes of the sale by charging off by any method of accounting he may adopt the unpaid portion of the contract price, or (d) when the vendor discounts the notes of the purchaser for cash or otherwise, or (e) when the vendor transfers to another his title in the article sold.

4581 Art. 10. Sales to the Government or a State.—The tax applies to articles enumerated in sections 900 and 904, except those enumerated under subdivision 7, section 900 (see art. 20), when sold to the United States Government. The same is true of articles sold to a State or political subdivision thereof, even though they are to be paid for entirely out of public moneys and are to be used in the carrying on of governmental operation. Where the Government supplies a manufacturer with all materials and parts, except a small portion furnished by the manufacturer under a contract stipulating that the manufacturer shall be guaranteed a certain profit, no tax is payable. Articles manufactured for Government use in plants taken over and operated by the Government are not subject to tax. The rules applicable to the taxability of sales to the United States Government apply equally in the case of articles sold to foreign Governments. (See also art. 20.)

Automobiles.

4582 Art. 11. Automobiles: Scope of tax.—An automobile truck, automobile wagon, or other automobile is a self-propelling vehicle designed to transport along highways and roads persons or property or both.

4583 Where the vehicle is capable of transporting both property and persons, the primary use for which it is designed will control as to whether it is taxable at 3 per cent under subdivision (1) as an automobile truck or automobile wagon, or at 5 per cent under subdivision (2) as an "other automobile."

4584 The act specifically exempts tractors. A tractor is a machine operated and controlled by its own motive power, and designed to draw or pull, as distinguished from carry, a load. So-called tractors or "semitractors," which carry a portion of the load, are taxable as automobile trucks or automobile wagons.

4585 Trailers are not taxable. A trailer is a vehicle not operated or controlled by its own motive power, but which is pulled or drawn behind another vehicle containing the motive power. So-called trailers or "semitrailer" so designed that a portion of the load or the weight thereof is carried or borne by the tractor or "semitractor" are taxable as "parts" of automobile trucks or automobile wagons.

4586 A usable substantially completed automobile or automobile truck produced by assembling new parts of trucks or cars is subject to tax, but a rebuilt car is not subject to tax as such, although the new parts thereof are subject to tax when sold by the manufacturer. (See Arts. 12 and 13 for examples of articles taxable and not taxable, and Art. 15 for the classification of chassis.)

4587 Art. 12. Automobile trucks and automobile wagons.—The tax is 3 per cent of the price for which automobile trucks and automobile wagons are sold by the manufacturer. It applies to automobile trucks and automobile wagons primarily designed or adapted for the transportation of property along highways and roads, although persons may incidentally be transported at the same time, as outlined in article 11, and to automobile truck and automobile wagon chassis as defined in article 15.

4588 For example, fire apparatus, including fire engines, hose carts, hook and ladder trucks, water-tower trucks, etc., tank trucks for carrying oil, gasoline, water, etc., moving and furniture vans, and drays, delivery wagons, etc., are all taxable as automobile trucks and wagons. Automobile hearses are taxable as automobile trucks or automobile wagons.

4589 An automobile truck or automobile wagon formed by joining together a so-called tractor or "semitractor" which carries or bears a portion of the load, and a so-called trailer or "semitrailer" is taxable as whole as an automobile truck or an automobile wagon.

4590 When sold separately the so-called tractor or "semitractor" is taxable as an automobile truck or automobile wagon, and the so-called trailer or "semitrailer" as a "part" of an automobile truck or automobile wagon.

4591 Motor-driven machines for pulling or drawing vehicles around factories and railway stations, small trucks for handling baggage and trunks at railway stations and for transporting materials, articles, or goods around and adapted for restricted use in factory yards or elsewhere as distinguished from use on highways and roads, are not subject to tax.

4592 Self-propelling motor-driven machines, such as concrete mixers, stone crushers, excavating shovels, ditch diggers, etc., and machines which perform a mechanical function as they move along highways and roads, such as road graders, road scrapers, street sweepers, road sprinklers and oilers, are not taxable. Where, however, the mechanical part of a machine, as the mixing machine of a concrete mixer, the blades of a road scraper, the tank of a street sprinkler, or the boiler of a road oiler, is superimposed or mounted on a truck chassis, the chassis is taxable at 3 per cent when sold by the manufacturer.

4593 Motor-propelled wheel or rolling chairs, motor-driven machine-gun and artillery carriages of the tractor type, motor-driven railroad cars and vehicles designed and adapted solely for use on rails or tracks, and not capable of use on highways and roads, are not taxable.

4594 Any tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for automobile trucks and automobile wagons sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof are taxable at 3 per cent as part of the selling price of the automobile truck or automobile wagon. This applies only to such tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories as are not in excess of the quantities usually sold in the ordinary course of trade to a single customer at the time and in connection with the sale of an automobile truck or an automobile wagon. Any quantity of tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories in excess of this amount is taxable under subdivision (3) at 5 per cent of the selling price thereof.

4595 Art. 13. Other automobiles and motor cycles.—The tax is 5 per cent of the price for which such articles are sold by the manufacturer. It applies to automobiles primarily designed for carrying persons, although property may incidentally be transported at the same time, as outlined in Article 11, and to other automobile chassis as defined in Article 15.

4596 It also applies to all motor cycles sold separately and to motor cycles sold with side cars attached.

4597 Automobiles that are designed and primarily adapted for the transportation of persons as distinguished from property are taxable as "other automobiles." For example, ordinary passenger or pleasure cars, taxicabs, automobile busses, sight-seeing cars, hotel busses, omnibusses, police patrols, ambulances, cars used by fire department chiefs and marshals, mourners' coaches with accommodations for persons other than that afforded by the seat occupied in whole or in part by the driver, etc.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4598 Where an automobile chassis of such construction that it is ordinarily used as an automobile truck or an automobile wagon is fitted with a body designed for the carriage of persons, the completed whole is taxable at 5 per cent as an "other automobile."

4599 A side car sold separately from a motor cycle is taxable as a "part" under subdivision (3).

4600 Tires, inner tubes, parts and accessories for other automobiles and motor cycles sold on or in connection therewith or with the sale thereof or separately are taxable at 5 per cent.

Automobile Parts and Accessories.

4601 Art. 14. Tires, inner tubes, parts, and accessories sold to manufacturers.—The words "tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories" shall be understood to embrace only such tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories as have reached such a stage of manufacture that they constitute articles commonly or commercially known as "tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories," and shall not be understood to embrace raw materials used in the manufacture of such articles.

4602 Unvulcanized sheet rubber, liquid rubber vulcanizing cement, and friction fabrics are considered raw materials, and are exempt from tax.

4603 Any article which has reached a state of manufacture wherein it is in itself a component part or accessory, and is of such a nature that it may be used or attached by an ordinary repair man or individual user as distinguished from a manufacturer or producer, is subject to tax as a "part or accessory."

4604 Subdivision (3) exempts from tax sales of tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories to a manufacturer or producer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories.

4605 In order to come within the exemption of the statute, the sale must be made by a manufacturer and such manufacturer must, at the time the goods are shipped or sold (whichever is prior), have in his possession an order or contract of sale, with certificate of the purchaser printed thereon or in writing, permanently attached thereto, to the effect that the purchaser is a manufacturer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories; that he is purchasing the articles in question as such manufacturer for resale in some form or manner, or for free replacement under contract or guaranty; and that he will account to the internal-revenue collector and pay the tax on the sale of such articles, unless such sales by him are exempted as provided in article 16 on account of being purchased for other uses or are made to another manufacturer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for resale by him in some form or manner or for free replacement, in which case he will require the same form of certificate from such manufacturer; that when such tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories are sold other than on or in connection with the sale of new automobile trucks, wagons, automobiles, or motor cycles he will pay the tax on such sales (unless exempted in accordance with the regulations); that when such articles are sold on or in connection with the sale of such new vehicles he will pay the tax on the selling price of such vehicles, including such articles.

4606 Manufacturers furnishing such certificate will be deemed manufacturers within the meaning of the law and subject to the tax imposed on sales of such articles by manufacturers, unless the sales are made to another manufacturer or producer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for resale by him in some form or manner or for free replacement under a contract or guaranty, who furnishes a certificate so stating.

4607 Jobbers or dealers, who are not manufacturers, and users who are not manufacturing for resale, are not entitled to purchase tax free under certificate.

4608 Following is a form of the certificate or statement which will be accepted and in substance must be strictly adhered to:

The undersigned hereby certifies that he is a manufacturer or producer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories, and that the tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories purchased hereunder are purchased by him as such a manufacturer or producer for resale in some form or manner or for free replacement under contract or guaranty and agrees if any of the tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories are sold by him exempt from tax to another manufacturer or producer of automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for like purposes he will require a similar certificate from such manufacturer or producer. The undersigned further agrees that in respect to all tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories sold by him, unless such sale is made to such a manufacturer or producer, he will pay the tax on such sale direct to the internal-revenue collector, including it in his tax return covering the month in which such sale is made; said tax to be paid on the basis of the taxpayer's selling price of such articles when sold other than on or in connection with the sale of new automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, motor cycles, tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories, and on the selling price of such vehicles or articles when the same includes such articles.

4609 If it is impracticable to furnish a certificate for each order, a certificate covering all orders between given dates (such period not to exceed a month) will be accepted. If in any case such an order and certificate can not be produced on demand of any authorized agent of the department, the tax in respect to the sale will be considered in default.

4610 Where the form of certificate outlined in this article is used it must be in the exact form specified, except that when such form is used to cover orders for a period of one month the language may be altered to indicate that fact.

4612 The term includes bodies, wheels, engines, springs, axles, radiators, etc. When sold separately a side car and a so-called trailer or "semi-trailer" so designed that a portion of the load or the weight thereof is carried or borne by the tractor or "semitractor" are taxable as "parts."

4613 Mere stock or commercial commodities, such as bolts, nuts, washers, screws, etc., though used as components for such vehicles, are not "parts" within the meaning of subdivision (3). Articles, however, which ordinarily would be classed as commercial commodities become parts when, because of their design or construction, they are primarily adapted for use as component parts of such vehicles.

4614 Component parts of articles taxable under this definition are taxable when sold separately if they have reached such stage of manufacture that they are primarily adapted for use as a component part. Blow-out shoes are subject to tax as "parts" regardless of the fact that they may be made from old casings.

4615 A chassis provided with a "superstructure" of such design that it is without substantial additions adaptable for hauling heavy loads is an "automobile truck" or "automobile wagon" and taxable at the rate of 3 per cent when sold by the manufacturer thereof. The term "superstructure" means any chassis frame of steel or wood or other material which is adaptable by the addition of a few bolsters or planks for carrying a heavy load. A chassis not so equipped is an "other automobile" or a "part" taxable at the rate of 5 per cent when sold by the manufacturer thereof unless (1) the manufacturer has actual knowledge from the construction of the chassis which he sells that it is to be used as an automobile truck or automobile wagon or has in his possession at the time the chassis is shipped or sold (whichever is prior) an order or contract of sale with a certificate of the purchaser printed thereon or in writing permanently attached thereto, showing that the chassis specified in the order is to be so used, in which case the chassis will be taxable at the rate of 3 per cent when sold by the manufacturer thereof; or (2) unless the manufacturer has in his possession at the time the chassis is shipped or sold (whichever is prior) an order or contract of sale with certificate of the purchaser printed thereon or in writing permanently attached thereto, showing that the chassis specified in the order is to be used by him in the further manufacture and sale of an automobile truck, automobile wagon, or other automobile, in which case the chassis may be sold as a "part" free from tax if the purchaser furnishes the certificate provided for in article 14, for purchasing parts tax free. In the case of a chassis which is taxable as an automobile truck or automobile wagon at the rate of 3 per cent, the manufacturer of the chassis must return the tax to the Government in all instances.

4616 It should be noted that a chassis which is essentially an automobile truck or automobile wagon chassis can not be sold tax free under the certificate provided for in article 14. The exemption from tax in the sale of a chassis can be taken advantage of only in the sale of a chassis that is essentially a passenger car chassis (as distinguished from an automobile truck or automobile wagon chassis), and which is to be used by the purchaser in the further manufacture and sale of an automobile truck, automobile wagon, or other automobile.

4618 A manufacturer who purchases from the manufacturer thereof tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories for use in further manufacturing an automobile truck, automobile wagon, other automobile or motor cycle, may purchase them tax exempt by furnishing the certificate provided for in article 14.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4619 In all cases where a subsequent manufacturer does not furnish the certificate provided for in article 14, and the original manufacturer pays the tax thereon, if the subsequent manufacturer uses such tires, inner tubes, parts, or accessories in the manufacture and sale of an automobile truck, automobile wagon, other automobile, motorcycle, tire, inner tube, part, or accessory, he may take credit for such tax paid by the original manufacturer, in the same manner as is provided in the case of a chassis.

4620 If a person manufactures for sale separately parts or accessories and is also engaged in the business of repairing and rebuilding automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, or motor cycles, such parts or accessories used for repair or rebuilding purposes are subject to taxation upon the amount charged for the entire job, unless the amount charged for the parts so used is billed separately, in which case the tax will attach to the sale price of the parts only.

4621 A concern which does not manufacture for sale separately any part or accessory, but is engaged in doing strictly a repair business, and makes only occasionally a part which may be needed for an immediate repair job performed by it, is not considered a manufacturer and is not required to pay any tax in respect to parts so manufactured and used.

4622 A person, partnership, or corporation engaged in the business of building over automobile tops or bodies for installation on new or old chassis is not considered to be doing strictly a repair business, even though all such tops or bodies are manufactured as needed for an immediate job, but is held to be a manufacturer of automobile "parts or accessories" and subject to a tax as such.

4623 Art. 16. Definition of accessories.—An "accessory" for an automobile truck, automobile wagon, other automobile, or motor cycle is any article designed to be attached to or used in connection with such vehicle to add to its utility or ornamentation and which is primarily adapted for use in connection with such vehicle, whether or not essential to its operation.

4624 The term "accessories" includes, for example, automobile tops, back and side curtains, horns, speedometers, self-starters, spot lights, shock absorbers, tire pumps, and pressure gauges. (This paragraph is as amended by T. D. 3415, Dec. 2, 1922.)

4625 Articles which have a general commercial use and which are not especially designed and peculiarly adapted for use in connection with automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, or motor cycles are not subject to tax as "parts" or "accessories." Thus a wrench or other tool of a kind ordinarily sold in hardware stores for general purposes is not subject to tax when sold separately, but if incorporated in an automobile tool kit, designed, intended, advertised, or held out for use on an automobile as distinguished from garage or shop equipment, is taxable as part of the completed kit.

4626 A wrench or other tool of special design or construction primarily adapted for use in connection with automobiles is taxable.

4627 If any doubt exists as to the special adaptability of any article, the fact of its sale by the manufacturer to be used with an automobile, or to an automobile accessories dealer, would determine its taxability.

4628 Robes, goggles, and lunch kits are not subject to tax. Asbestos brake-band linings, generator tubing, and radiator hose are not subject to tax unless sold in prepared sizes, lengths, shapes, or with such fittings as make them adapted for use only on or in connection with automobiles.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4629 Parts or accessories for automobile trucks, automobile wagons, other automobiles, or motorcycles primarily adapted for use on or in connection therewith when sold for any other purpose are not taxable provided the purchaser files with his order a statement that such parts or accessories are to be used on or in connection with another article of commerce not enumerated or included in subdivisions (1), (2), or (3) of section 900. For example, a self-starter primarily adapted for use on an automobile if sold to a manufacturer of motor boats, such manufacturer stating in his order that it is to be used in the manufacture of a motor boat and not upon an automobile, is not taxable.

Cameras

4630 Art. 17. Cameras and lenses.—The tax is 10 per cent of the price for which cameras weighing not more than 100 pounds, and lenses for such cameras, are sold by the manufacturer. Stands and tripods are not to be weighed in computing the weight of the camera. Process and motion-picture cameras are subject to the tax. Toy cameras are taxable if capable of taking a picture. Parts of cameras other than lenses are not taxable, unless sold in combination with a camera.

Films

4631 Art. 18. Photographic films and plates.—The tax is 5 per cent of the manufacturer's selling price of photographic films and plates, other than moving-picture films. X-ray plates are taxable as photographic plates. Motion-picture film cut up and placed in packets inclosed in a patented wrapper and known as dental films are taxable under this section. Unsensitized squeegee, and ferrotype plates are not taxable.

Candy

4632 Art. 19. Candy.—Candy within the meaning of this subdivision—4506 (a) Includes chocolate creams, bonbons, gumdrops, jelly drops, jelly beans, imperials, caramels, stick candy, lozenges, taffies, candy kisses, wafers, fudges, or Italian creams, nougats, peanut brittle, sugared almonds, chocolate-covered fruits and nuts, glaze or candied fruits and nuts not specified in paragraph (b) of this subdivision; pop corn and other cereals or cereal products not specified in paragraph (b) of this subdivision, mixed with or covered with molasses, sugar, or other sweetening agent; hard candies, plain and chocolate-covered marshmallows; candy cough drops sold in bulk and without remedial claims; sweetened licorice; sweet chocolate and sweet-milk chocolate, whether plain or mixed with fruit or nuts, not specified in paragraph (b) of this subdivision; maple sugar mixed with fruit, nuts, etc., not specified in paragraph (b) of this subdivision; and all similar articles however designated; but

4633 (b) Does not include cereal breakfast foods, cake and pastries, bitter chocolate which needs the addition of sugar before it becomes pleasing to the taste, powdered chocolate, maple sugar or sirup not mixed with nuts, etc., marshmallow paste, glaze or candied fruit peel and citron, or sweet chocolate, glaze or candied fruits and nuts sold by the manufacturer under circumstances where it is obvious from the condition of the product, method of packing, or from other facts in connection with the sale, that it will not be consumed in the form in which it is then sold.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4634 Where a manufacturer sells candy which is packed or put up for sale in a fancy or plain box or container the tax is computed upon the selling price of the candy and container, whether the container is billed separately or not. However, where candy is purchased and the purchaser selects a fancy box or container in which the candy is placed the tax attaches to the selling price of the candy and not to the cost of the box. In such cases, if the sale is billed, the container and candy must be billed as separate items. [Sweet chocolate manufactured and sold for consumption in the form sold, and not for cooking or domestic purposes, is within the meaning of the word "candy."—Malley vs. Walter Baker & Co. (281 Fed. 41.—1922 War Tax Service, p. 946.—T. D. 3344.)]

Firearms

4635 Art. 20. Firearms, shells, and cartridges.—A firearm is any weapon from which shot is discharged by an explosive. For the purpose of the act, firearms include only portable firearms, as pistols, revolvers, rifles, carbines, machine guns, shotguns, and fowling pieces. Shells and cartridges include projectiles for all such portable arms when in such completed state that they may be discharged from firearms without further manufacture.

Knives

4636 Art. 21. Hunting knives, dirk knives, daggers, etc.—A hunting or bowie knife is a knife with a blade over 3 inches in length, having a sharp point and one cutting edge, especially adapted for sticking, skinning, and cutting game. The knife may be of a rigid type, carried in a sheath, or it may be of a clasp type, containing devices other than the blades. Hunting and bowie knives are subject to a tax of 10 per cent of the manufacturer's selling price, whereas the weapons described in (9) are subject to a tax of 100 per cent upon the price for which sold by the manufacturers.

Smokers' Articles

4637 Art. 22. Cigar and cigarette holders, pipes, humidors, and smoking stands.—For the purpose of the tax a humidor is either (1) a device for maintaining moist atmosphere in any receptacle used for holding tobacco products, or (2) a portable receptacle used for holding tobacco products and fitted with a device for maintaining moist atmosphere therein. A smoking stand is (1) a tobacco ash tray having a pedestal and base, or (2) a stand supporting two or more ash trays in an upright position from a common base and designed to be placed on a table, desk, floor, or other surface. Cigar and cigarette holders and pipes, made wholly or in part of briar or other material, as distinguished from meerschaum, and fitted with a mouthpiece of amber, are taxable under section 900, even though ornamented, mounted, or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory. Cigar and cigarette holders and pipes with no meerschaum or amber in their composition are not taxable under section 900, but if ornamented, mounted, or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory, are taxable under section 905. (See Regulations 48) [page 934].

Slot Machines

4638 Art. 23. Automatic slot-device machine.—A machine used for both vending and weighing is taxable as a weighing machine. For the purpose of the tax fair market value is deemed to be the average wholesale price at which like machines have been sold by the manufacturer at wholesale during the month next preceding the month in which such machine is put into operation. In case there has been no prior sale of such machines, fair market value is deemed to be the average wholesale price for which similar machines are sold at the time the taxable machine is put into operation. Automatic machines operated by a hand lever released by dropping a coin are taxable as automatic machines.

Liveries

4639 Art. 24. Liveries and livery boots and hats.—For the purpose of the 4512 tax the enumerated articles include the liveries and uniforms, hats, and caps, of personal or domestic servants as maids, nurses and like help, or doormen, footmen, pages, bell boys, ushers and similar employees of clubs, hotels, theaters, cafes, stores, bakeries, safe-deposit companies, newspapers and similar places; but uniforms otherwise taxed, and the uniforms of employees of public-service corporations, such as railroads, telegraph, and telephone companies, are not taxable. Uniforms manufactured for any of the personal or domestic servants mentioned in this article are defined to be such uniforms as are of a description, character, or design prescribed by the person in whose service they are worn as an evidence of such service and possess some distinctive characteristic to distinguish them from ordinary dress. A chauffeur's uniform is not taxable as a livery unless it has some distinctive characteristic to distinguish it from civil dress.

The following uniforms are not taxable under this section: Uniforms of members of an orchestra (not employed by a hotel or similar place); private watchmen; court attendants; letter carriers; elevator conductors and operators, or other similar employees of a public building; police reserves; Indians in the United States Indian Service; hospital attendants (private and public hospitals); Army and Navy officers and students at military schools; bands and musical organizations (when sold to the organization or to an individual member); actors or participants in any theatrical production; attendants of public zoological parks, museums of art and natural history; officers of steamship companies; chauffeurs of taxicab companies, if such taxicab companies are adjuncts of public service corporations; fraternal organizations, G. A. R., Spanish War Veterans, and the American Legion; overalls.

Hunting Garments

4640 Art. 25. Hunting and shooting garments and riding habits.—Hunting 4513 and shooting garments and riding habits are deemed to include clothing primarily adapted for use in hunting, shooting, and riding, and commonly so used, such as hunting coats, sleeveless and other; duck shooters' jackets and coats; shooting caps and hats; shell belts; ladies' divided skirts and shell skirts; ladies' riding coats, men's riding breeches and coats, riding hats and caps.

Leather puttees and canvas or other leggings are not taxable as hunting or shooting garments or riding habits.

Pleasure Boats

4641 Art. 26. Yachts and motor boats.—Yachts and motor boats include 4514 vessels driven by steam, sail, or motor and not designed for trade, fishing, or national defense. Vessels adapted to the public transport.

Copyright 1923, by The Corporation Trust Company.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

tation of persons or property, or both, or for the carrying on of a commercial enterprise, are designed for trade. Thus, excursion steamers, freighters, pilot boats, lighters, and the like are designed for trade. To be classed as designed for fishing a vessel must be adapted to commercial fishing carried on as a means of livelihood. Vessels built according to plans and specifications previously approved by the Navy Department are held to be designed for national defense and are not taxable. The sale of vessels constructed according to a design adapted to racing, to the personal comfort or convenience of the owner, or to official use other than in national defense, is taxable as the sale of a yacht or motor boat not designed for trade, fishing, or national defense.

4642 Pleasure boats include small open boats driven by oars, paddles, or sails, not capable of long trips, when adapted for pleasure or recreation of the owner or lessee. The sale thereof is taxable if the selling price is greater than $100.

Manufacturer also Retailer

4643 Art. 27. Manufacturer also retailer.—It should be noted that the provisions of this subdivision apply only to articles taxable under section 900.

4644 By "customarily sells" is meant a bona fide practice of selling the same article at both wholesale and retail, in substantial quantities, and not mere occasional sales at wholesale, with the bulk of the business done at retail. Only a manufacturer who does a legitimate wholesale and retail business and holds himself out as a wholesaler as well as a retailer with respect to the goods sold will be entitled to compute the tax upon goods sold at retail on the price for which like articles are sold by him at wholesale.

4645 It should be noted that the provision of the law is that the tax in respect to retail sales shall be computed "on the price for which like articles are sold" at wholesale. To take advantage of this provision, therefore, it is necessary that a manufacturer shall have sold identical articles both at wholesale and at retail, in order to arrive at a basis for computing the tax.

4646 In arriving at the basis of tax on retail sales, if a manufacturer has but one regular wholesale selling price or rate of discount from list, the basis of tax on all sales, whether wholesale or retail, is the same—that is, his regular wholesale selling price.

4647 If a manufacturer sells regularly at wholesale at two or more rates of discount, it will be necessary for him to arrive at his average wholesale selling price to determine the basis of tax on retail sales; and this must be done by dividing the sum of the actual wholesale selling prices of the article in question by the total number of such articles so sold, and not by the process of "averaging discounts."

4648 Except as provided herein, the basis of tax on retail sales for any given calendar month shall be the manufacturer's actual average wholesale selling price for the same month. But if the manufacturer desires to pass the tax on as such and to bill his customer a definite amount as tax previous to the determination of his actual average wholesale selling price for that month, he may base the tax on his average wholesale selling price for the second calendar month preceding that in which such retail sale is made, provided no change has been made in the meantime in his retail list price; if his retail list price has been changed, the average wholesale price determined as aforesaid must be adjusted accordingly, so that the amount upon which the tax is based will bear the same proportion to the retail list price then in force as the average wholesale price for the second preceding month bears to the retail list price then in force.

4649 For example, the tax on retail sales made in June may be based on the manufacturer's average wholesale selling price for the same article during the month of April, provided he has made no change in his retail list price of the article. If in April his retail list was $15 and his average wholesale price was $10, and in June his retail list price had been increased 20 per centum, to $18, the average wholesale price or basis of tax would be likewise increased 20 per centum, to $12.

4650 For the purpose of the tax, a wholesale sale is held to be a sale to a vendor for resale, or a sale to a consumer or user in wholesale quantity as distinguished from a sale to a consumer or user at a wholesale price. All sales at wholesale are subject to tax on the basis of the actual selling price of each article sold. (See Art. 3.)

Repeal of Former Taxes

4651 Art. 28. Repeal of former taxes.—The present taxes, under section 4516 900 of the 1921 Act, supersede the excise taxes imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918 upon the sale of automobiles, musical instruments, sporting goods, chewing gum, cameras, toilet soaps, and similar articles. The Revenue Act of 1918 remains in force for the assessment and collection of all taxes which have accrued thereunder, and for the imposition and collection of all penalties or forfeitures which have accrued and may accrue, in relation to any such taxes. In the case of any tax imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, if there is a tax imposed by the present statute in lieu thereof, the provision imposing such tax remains in force until the corresponding tax under the present statute takes effect. See section 1400 of the statute [§8076].

Colorable Sales

4652 Art. 29. Colorable sales.—If a manufacturer, through the device of 4517 a selling branch or in any other manner, contrives to sell under the market price, with the result of benefiting his business or with the intent to cause such benefit, the tax shall be based on the fair market value of the articles and not on their nominal selling price, such fair market value to be determined by the Commissioner in each instance. (See Art. 8.)

4653 If a manufacturer sells a taxable article to a subsidiary corporation at less than the fair market value thereof, the tax shall be based on the selling price of the subsidiary corporation.

Carpets and Rugs

4654 Art. 30.—For the purpose of the tax, carpets and rugs shall include 4522 all merchandise commonly or commercially known as carpets, rugs, or matting, either woven or felted, and whether used as floor coverings or otherwise, or mats when used as floor covering.

4655 A rug shall be held to be distinguishable from carpet when manufactured as one piece or made by the manufacturer from breadths which are united so as to form one piece, of a distinctive manufacture, size, shape, and design, figured or plain. Carpet, when sold by the yard and sewed together so as to produce a certain size or design desired by the purchaser, shall not be deemed to be a rug within the meaning of the act.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4656 The unit of measurement is the square yard. Therefore, the size of a rug or the quantity of carpet shall be so calculated as to be capable of applying the tax thereto at so much per square yard. All lineal yardage, whether the strips be wider or narrower than 36 inches, must be converted into square measure. For example, a lineal yard of carpet of the ordinary width of 27 inches contains but three-quarters of a square yard. If such carpet is sold for more than $3.37½ per lineal yard, it is taxable, because $3.37½ per lineal yard is equivalent to $4.50 per square yard. Fringe will not be considered in computing the yardage.

4657 If carpet is sold at a specified price per yard and such price includes sewing, sizing, or laying, the tax shall attach to the combined price in excess of $4.50 per square yard, unless the sewing, sizing, or laying is billed separately, in which case the tax attaches only to the price of the carpet in excess of $4.50 per square yard.

Trunks

4658 Art. 31. For the purpose of the tax the term "trunks" shall be held to include all receptacles which are commonly or commercially designated as trunks, designed to be used wherein to convey the effects of a traveler. It shall not, however, be held to include articles such as hampers, packing boxes or cases, nor chests designed to be used wherein to convey tools, medicine, or silver.

Valises, Bags, Etc.

4659 Art. 32. For the purposes of the tax valises, traveling bags, and suit cases shall include all receptacles which are commonly or commercially designated as such or designed to be used wherein to carry in the hand the effects of a traveler. Hat boxes shall include any receptacle designed to be used wherein to convey hats in traveling. Fitted toilet cases shall not be limited in meaning to those designed and used for traveling purposes, but shall include all receptacles of any form whatsoever (other than purses, pocketbooks, shopping and hand bags, as defined in Art. 33) designed and fitted to contain toilet articles.

Purses, Pocketbooks, Etc.

4660 Art. 33. For the purpose of the tax purses shall be deemed to include all receptacles used for carrying money on or about the person. The term "pocketbook" is broader in meaning than "purse," and includes any receptacle other than a purse for carrying money, papers, cards, memoranda, etc., in the pocket or on or about the person. The term "shopping and hand bags" shall include all bags, whether or not fitted with toilet articles, designed to be carried in the hand or on the arm for the purpose of conveying commodities or personal effects; but it shall not include articles such as valises, traveling bags, suit cases, and fitted toilet cases mentioned in article 32. The fact that a purse, pocketbook, hand or shopping bag is fitted with or for toilet articles does not take it from this subdivision nor make it taxable under the provisions of article 32.

Portable Lighting Fixtures

4661 Art. 34. For the purpose of the tax, portable lighting figures and portable lamps shall be deemed to include all lighting devices adapted for interior illumination and not designed to be affixed permanently in one location, and all articles commonly or commercially known as such, irrespective of the principle of illumination used. A portable lamp and shade, even though sold at the same time, shall not be regarded as a single item, but as separate items, and in computing the tax the manufacturer shall be entitled to a separate $10 deduction as to each item. For example, if the selling price of a lamp is $50 and a shade $30, even though the two articles are sold to one purchaser, the tax on the sale of the lamp will be $2.00 and on the sale of the shade $1.00.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Fans

4662 Art. 35. For the purpose of the tax, fans shall be deemed to include 4527 those articles commonly or commercially known by this name, designed to produce movements of the air by waving in the hand.

Return and Payment of Tax

4663 Art. 36. Return and payment of tax.—Each manufacturer of any of 4519 the articles hereinabove enumerated must make monthly returns under oath in duplicate on Form 728 (revised) [page 907], and pay the taxes imposed on such articles to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which his principal place of business is located.

4665 The returns must be rendered and the tax paid in time to be in the office of the collector or zone deputy on or before the last day of each month, covering all the transactions of the preceding month, the first return to cover all transactions after January 1, 1922.

4666 Branch houses should in general make reports to the parent house, which is liable to make monthly returns of the sales of the branch house. An itinerant manufacturer should make return and pay the tax to the collector of the district where the sales were made.

4667 The books of every person liable to the tax shall be open at all times for inspection by examining internal-revenue officers. (As to penalties, see Art. 39.)

4668 The person responsible for the return and payment of the tax shall, in order that returns may be readily checked and verified by examining internal-revenue officers, keep such records and memoranda as will clearly show the amounts of the sales of taxable articles for each month.

Trade with Possessions of United States

4669 Art. 37. Trade with possessions of United States.—A sale which 4539 results in the shipment of articles into the United States from the Virgin Islands is taxable to the same extent as a sale of articles within the United States. Articles going into the Virgin Islands from the United States are free from tax in the United States. The same rules apply to trade with Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. (See section 1000 of the Revenue Act of 1917, and Section V of the Act of August 4, 1909, as amended by Section IV, Subdivision C, of the Act of October 3, 1913.) The tax attaches, however, to articles shipped to other possessions of the United States, including the Canal Zone. [Same by Title III, Secs. 301 and 302 by Tariff Act of 1922 (Public—No. 318—67th Congress).]

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Extens' on of Existing Statutes

4670 Art. 38. Aids to collection of tax.—In collecting the excise taxes the 8000 Commissioner has the benefit of all existing internal-revenue laws.
 8001 In aid of the enforcement of the statute the Commissioner may re-8002 quire any person to keep specified records, to render returns and statements as directed, to submit himself and his books to examination, and to comply with such regulations as may be prescribed.

Penalties

4671 Art. 39. Penalties.—Any manufacturer who fails to file a return 8014 within the time prescribed is liable under section 3176 to a penalty 8071 of 25 per cent of the amount of the tax, unless it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect.
4672 Any manufacturer who willfully files a false or fraudulent return is liable under section 3176 to a penalty of 50 per cent of the amount of the tax.
4673 Any manufacturer who fails to pay a tax when due is liable under section 903 to a penalty of 5 per cent of the amount of the tax, together with interest at the rate of 1 per cent per month. (See Art. 36.)
4674 In addition to the above, under certain circumstances the penalties provided under section 1302 may also be imposed on any such manufacturer and also on the officer, partner, or employee whose duty it was to perform the duties in respect of which the violation occurred. (See also sec.
 906 and Art. 46.)

Credits and Refunds

4675 Art. 40. Credits and refunds.—If a manufacturer overpays the tax 4535 due with one monthly return, or if, under section 906 of the statute he 8018 overcollects the tax, he may take credit for the overpayment or over-collection against the tax due with a succeeding return. If he over-collects the tax, he shall upon proper application refund the over-collection to the person entitled thereto, even though such amount has already been paid over to the collector of internal revenue and no corresponding credit has yet been secured. In case a credit is claimed, a statement shall be attached to the return setting forth fully the facts regarding alleged over-payment or overcollection. In the case of the overcollection of a tax, no credit for the amount overcollected shall be allowed until the manufacturer making the overcollection submits a sworn statement showing that the tax in each case so overcollected has been returned to the person making the overpayment, that no claim for a refund of any part of such amount has been filed with the collector or commissioner on behalf of any person who paid such amounts, and a complete list of such persons. It should be noted that a credit may be taken under section 1304 only in the case of overpayment or overcollection as distinguished from an illegal or erroneous payment or collection.
4676 In all cases where a tax has been collected or paid and such collection or payment is alleged to be illegal or erroneous, it will be necessary for the person so paying the tax to file claim for refund on Treasury Department Form 46 [page 1609]. For procedure with reference to claims for refunds see sections 3220 [§8023.] and 3225 [§8047.] of the Revised Statutes, as amended by sections 1315 and 1323 of the Revenue Act of 1921, and Regulations 14 (revised).

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Exports

4677 Art. 41. Sales for export.—The tax does not attach to the sale of an 4538 article which is sold for export by the manufacturer and in due course so exported.

4678 An article may be sold for export but never exported or not exported in due course. Also, an article may be exported in due course by the purchaser, although not sold for export.

4679 In order to be exempt from tax, however, it is necessary that the article be both sold for export by the manufacturer and in due course so exported.

4680 An article will be regarded as having been sold for export if the manufacturer has in his possession at the time that title passes or of shipment (whichever is prior) (a) an order or contract of sale or document incidental thereto showing in writing that the manufacturer is to ship the article direct to a foreign destination; or (b) where the delivery is to be made to the purchaser or his agent within the United States, a certificate from such purchaser or agent, as the case may be, showing (1) that the article is purchased either to fill a firm order then held by such purchaser requiring shipment to a foreign destination, or for shipment (or transportation) by him in due course to himself or to his agent or to his principal in a foreign country, or that the article is purchased to fill future orders calling for shipment thereof by the purchaser direct to a foreign destination, and (2) that the article will be transported to a foreign destination in due course prior to use, resale, or further manufacture within the United States.

4681 In these cases the manufacturer, for a period of twelve months from the date when title passes or of shipment (whichever is prior), is excused from filing returns for the articles so sold. This temporary exemption becomes permanent upon the manufacturer's attaching to such order, contract, or certificate before the expiration of such period of twelve months due proof of exportation (see Art. 42). On the other hand, if within such period of twelve months the manufacturer has not received and attached to such order or contract such "proof of exportation," then the temporary exemption ceases and the manufacturer shall include a tax on the sale of such article in his return for the month in which such period of twelve months expires. The order or contract of sale and certificate and the "proof of exportation" must be preserved by the manufacturer in such a way as to be readily accessible for inspection by internal-revenue officers. No sale shall be considered to be exempt from tax under section 1305 of the Act, unless its character as an export sale has been established in accordance with the above provisions.

4682 Art. 42. Proof of exportation.—By the term "proof of exportation" is meant an affidavit of the exporter (who, if not the manufacturer, must be the purchaser from the manufacturer or an agent of one or the other) containing the following information: (1) The name and address of manufacturer; (2) the name and address of the exporter; (3) whether exporter is acting in his own behalf or as agent, and if agent name of principal; (4) a brief description of the article; (5) the date upon which the article was delivered to a carrier for transportation beyond the limits of the United States (or if not transported by carrier the actual date and manner of transportation out of the United States); (6) the name of carrier issuing export bill of lading, and if a carrier by sea, the name of vessel carrying the article and date of departure from United States; (7) destination of article; (8) statement that the article was in fact exported in due course prior to use, resale, or further manufacture within the United States.

4683 Where the manufacturer is the exporter there may be attached to the original contract or order as proof of exportation, in lieu of the affidavit provided for in the preceding paragraph, (1) a copy of export bill of lading, or (2) a certificate by the agent or representative of the export carrier showing exportation of the article, or (3) certificate of mailing, where the article was shipped by parcel post. Where the exportation is accomplished by a person other than the manufacturer, the exporter must carefully preserve in his own files a copy of export bill of lading or other shipping document and all other papers bearing on the transaction, readily accessible for inspection by any authorized official of the United States.

4684 Where the exportation is accomplished by a person other than the manufacturer, the affidavit above required may cover all the articles received from the manufacturer upon any one contract or shipment, whether exported on different dates or shipped to different consignees.

4685 In any case where the manufacturer does not have in his possession, within the twelve months' period, proof of exportation as outlined herein, the manufacturer must pay the tax. Whenever proper proof of exportation is available, claim for refund of the amounts so paid may be filed.

Transfer of Burden of Tax

4686 Art. 43. Contract of sale prior to August 15, 1921, of article taxed 4531 under section 900 or 904, 1921 Act, on which no corresponding tax was levied under section 900 of the 1918 Act.—If before August 15, 1921, "A," a manufacturer, made with "B," a dealer, a contract of sale for an article taxed under section 900 or 904 of the Revenue Act of 1921, and in respect to which no corresponding tax was imposed by section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, which does not permit the addition of the tax to the amount payable under the contract, then the liability for the tax is on "B," with the duty on "A" only to collect and pay it to the collector as provided in article 46. If, however, "A," before August 15, 1921, made a contract of the character described with any person other than a dealer as defined in article 47, no tax is payable in respect of the sale by him, since on August 15, 1921, no tax was in force on the sale of the articles.

4687 Art. 44. Contract of sale before August 15, 1921, of article taxable 4532 under section 900, 1918 Act, at rate greater than tax on same article under section 900, 1921 Act.—If before August 15, 1921, "A," a manufacturer of candy taxable at 5 per cent under section 900 of the Revenue Act of 1918, made a contract with "B," a dealer or not, which included in the price stipulated in the contract the tax under section 900 of the 1918 Act, and the contract does not permit the deduction from the amount to be paid of the difference between the tax at 5 per cent under section 900 of the 1918 Act and the tax at 3 per cent under section 900 of the 1921 Act, "A" must refund to "B" so much of the amount of such difference as is not permitted to be deducted from the contract price. (See articles 40 and 46 as to credits for such refunds.)

4688 Art. 45. Contract of sale prior to August 15, 1921, of article taxable 4533 under section 900, 1918 Act, on which no corresponding tax under section 900, 1921 Act.—If before August 15, 1921, "A," a manufacturer of chewing gum, taxable under section 900 of the 1918 Act, but not

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

taxable under section 900 of the 1921 Act, made a contract with "B," a dealer or not, which includes in the price stipulated in the contract the tax imposed under section 900 of the 1918 Act, and the contract does not permit the deduction from the amount to be paid of such tax, "A" must refund to "B" so much of the amount of such tax as is not so permitted to be deducted from the contract price. (See articles 40 and 46 as to credit for such refunds.)

4689 Art. 46. Return of tax.—Each person receiving any payments referred 4534 to in section 906 of the statute shall collect the amount of the tax, if any, imposed by such section from the person making such payments, and shall make monthly returns under oath in duplicate and pay the taxes so collected to the collector of the district in which his principal office or place of business is located. If sale is made on credit, other than on conditional sale, the manufacturer shall return the tax at the time of sale, but may defer collection thereof from the purchaser.

4690 Any person making a refund of any payment upon which the tax is so 4535 collected may repay therewith the amount of the tax collected on such payment, and if the tax on the sale in respect to which refund is made has been paid to the Government the amount of the tax so repaid to the purchaser may be credited against amounts included in any subsequent monthly return. (See also Art. 40.)

4691 The return must be made on Form 728 (revised) [page 907] in time to be in the office of the collector or zone deputy on or before the last day of the month following the month in which the sale is made, as provided in article 36.

4692 The tax shall, without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector, be due and payable to the collector at the time fixed for filing the return.

4693 If the tax is not paid when due, there shall be added as a part of the tax a penalty of 5 per cent, together with interest at the rate of 1 per cent for each full month from the time when the tax became due.

4694 Art. 47. Meaning of "dealer."—The term "dealer" includes not only 4536 dealers in the ordinary sense—that is, persons engaged in the business of selling articles—but also a person who purchases an article with the intention of using it in the manufacture or production of any article intended for sale. The term does not include a person buying an article for his personal consumption or use. The United States, a State, Territory, or a political subdivision thereof, or a foreign Government, purchasing an article for its own use is not a dealer.

Fractional Part of Cent

4695 Art. 48. When fractional part of cent may be disregarded.—In the 8019 payment of taxes, a fractional part of a cent may be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

Medium of Payment of Tax

4696 Art. 49. Payment of tax by uncertified checks.—Collectors may accept 8020 uncertified checks in payment of excise taxes, provided such checks are collectible at par—that is, for their full amount, without any deduction for exchange or other charges. The collector will stamp on the face of each check before deposit the words, "This check is in payment of an obligation to the United States and must be paid at par. No protest," with his name and title. The day on which the collector receives the check will be considered the date of payment so far as the taxpayer is concerned, unless the check is returned dishonored. If one check is remitted to cover two or more persons' taxes, the remittance must be accompanied by a letter of transmittal stating (a) the name of the drawer of the check; (b) the amount of the check; (c) the amount of any cash, money order, or other instruments included in the same remittance; (d) the name of each person whose tax is to be paid by the remittance; (e) the amount of the payment on account of each person; and (f) the kind of tax paid.

4697 Art. 50. Procedure with respect to dishonored checks.—If the bank on which any such check is drawn should refuse to pay it at par, the check should be returned through the depository bank and be treated in the same manner as a bad check. All expenses incident to the attempt to collect such a check and the return of it through the depository bank must be paid by the drawer of the check to the bank on which it is drawn, since no deduction can be made from amounts received in payment of taxes. See section 3210 of the Revised Statutes. If any taxpayer whose check has been returned uncollected by the depository bank should fail at once to make the check good the collector should proceed to collect the tax as though no check had been given. A taxpayer who tenders a certified check in payment for taxes is also not released from his obligation until the check has been paid. See chapter 191 of the Act of March 2, 1911 (36 Stats. 965).

Misrepresentation of Tax

4698 Art. 51. Misrepresentation of tax.—If a manufacturer or other vendor 4537 misrepresents the tax he is guilty of a misdemeanor and is liable to a fine of $1,000 and to imprisonment for a year. This provision is designed, among other things, to prevent a vendor adding more than the amount of the tax to the price of an article and representing that the increase is due to the tax.

Authority for Regulations

4699 Art. 52. Promulgation of regulations.—In pursuance of the statute 8009 the foregoing regulations are hereby made and promulgated and all rulings inconsistent herewith are hereby revoked.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

GENERAL PROVISIONS

4700 Article 1. Basis of tax.—The tax is measured by the price for which 4518 the article is sold. It is on the actual sales price of the goods, and 4528 not on the list price, where that differs from the sales price. If the price of a taxable article is increased to cover the tax, the tax is on such increased price. Where, however, the tax is billed as a separate item, such amount need not be included in the price of the article in computing the tax. The tax is payable in respect to a sale made whether or not the purchase price is actually collected. A discount for cash or other discount made subsequently to the sale can not be deducted in computing the price for the purpose of the tax. Where, however, articles are sold over a period of time under an agreement for a quantity rebate, the tax, if originally computed on the gross price, may be adjusted in the return for the month in which the price is finally determined. Commissions to agents and other expenses of sale are not deductible from the price. If articles are sold and the delivery charges to point of delivery are paid by the purchaser as a specific item, or if they are sold delivered at a sum less delivery charges to be paid by the purchaser, such charges need not be included as a part of the price of the goods; but if the vendor sells goods at a delivered price and pays the delivery charges, he is not entitled to make any deduction on account of the inclusion in the price of such charges.

4701 Art. 2. Rescission of sales.—If articles sold are returned and the sale entirely rescinded, no tax is payable, and if paid it may be credited against the tax included in a subsequent monthly return. See Article 34.
If part only of articles sold at one time is returned, and credit or rebate allowed by the vendor therefor, the portion of the tax to be credited will be only the proportion of the total tax paid which the amount allowed as credit or rebate bears to the total sale price of all the articles. If an article is sold and thereafter exchanged for another article of a higher price, the purchaser paying the difference, the vendor should pay the tax on the second sale, but may take as a credit against such tax the proportion of the tax paid on the returned article which the amount allowed as a credit for the return of such article on the second sale bears to the amount of the purchase price in the case of the first sale.

4702 Art. 3. Tax payable by vendor.—The tax is to be paid by the vendor on all sales made direct by him or through an agent, whether a sales agent, broker, or auctioneer. In the case of articles taxable under section 905, where an article is consigned to a dealer, the taxable sale is that made by the consignee, provided the article is sold for consumption or use.

4703 Art. 4. When tax attaches.—The tax attaches when the article is sold; that is to say, when the title to it passes from the vendor to the purchaser. When title passes is a question of fact, dependent upon the intention of the parties as gathered from the contract of sale and the attendant circumstances. Where goods are segregated from other goods owned by the vendor and it is the intention of both the vendor and the purchaser at the time the goods are segregated that they shall then belong to the purchaser, the title will be presumed to pass at such time. In the absence of any intention to the contrary the title is presumed to pass upon delivery of the article to the purchaser or to a carrier for the purchaser. In the case of a conditional sale, where the title is reserved until payment of the purchase price

in full, the tax attaches (a) upon such payment, or (b) when title passes if before completion of the payments, or (c) when before completion of the payments, the dealer disposes of the sale by charging off by any method of accounting he may adopt the unpaid portion of the contract price, or (d) when the vendor discounts the notes of the purchaser for cash or otherwise, or (e) when the vendor transfers his title in the article sold to another.

4704 Art. 5. Giving of premiums.—The giving of so-called “premiums” in return for wrappers, labels, coupons, trading stamps, or other scrip delivered or sold in connection with the sale of a commodity is a sale within the meaning of section 902 and section 905 if the premium is within the class of articles enumerated in those sections. In such cases the tax attaches at the time title in the premium passes to the person receiving it in exchange for such scrip, and is to be computed on the fair market value of the premium at such time. No tax attaches to the gift of an article which if sold would be taxable. Premiums given in return for wrappers, labels, coupons, trading stamps, or other scrip are not considered as gifts.

4705 Art. 6. Sale to the United States or a State.—The tax applies to articles enumerated in sections 902 and 905 when sold to the United States, or to a State or political subdivision thereof for use in carrying on its governmental operations.

WORKS OF ART

4706 Art. 7. Effective date.—The tax applies to all sales made on or after January 1, 1922.

4707 Art. 8. Taxable sales.—The tax imposed by section 902 is on any sale of the articles enumerated other than a sale by the actual artist, or to an educational institution or public art museum, or by any dealer in such articles to another dealer in such articles, for resale. The tax attaches whether the sale is made directly or through an agent. If made through an agent the tax is payable by the owner, but the agent may make return and pay the tax for the owner. A receiver conducting a business under court order is liable to the tax upon articles sold by him. When a person other than the artist consigns articles, retaining ownership in them until they are disposed of by the consignees, such person must pay the tax upon all such goods sold by the consignee.

4708 Art. 9. Taxable sales: Examples.—The tax applies to all sales from private owner to private owner, or from private owner to dealer, or from dealer to private owner, and the tax to be paid upon each such sale is to be reckoned upon the full amount of the price for which the article was sold. For example, a picture is sold by a private owner to a dealer for $10,000; the private owner must pay a tax of 5 per cent of $10,000, or $500, but if this picture is thereafter sold to another dealer for $15,000, and the second dealer in turn sells the picture to a third dealer for $20,000, no tax is payable on such sales by one dealer to another for the purpose of resale. However, if the third dealer sells the painting to a private collector for $25,000, the third dealer must pay a tax of 5 per cent of $25,000, or $1,250. Should the private owner sell it to another private owner for $30,000, the former must pay a tax of 5 per cent of $30,000, or $1,500.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4709 Art. 10. Sales by the artist.—Sales by the artist are not taxable.

By "artist" is meant the individual who by his own hands, completely or as to the important part so far as the article's artistic merit is concerned, produces the article. The artist's sale may be made directly or through a dealer, commission merchant, or other person. The exempt sale is only the original sale by the artist. If the artist regains title to an article and again sells it, such sale is taxable.

Sculpture

4710 Art. 11. Articles taxed: Sculpture.—The term "sculpture" means any production (whether antique or modern, and whether original, replica, copy, or reproduction) which is cut or carved by hand from marble, stone, alabaster, agate, crystal, jade, lapis lazuli, or other semiprecious stone, terra cotta, ivory, bone, wood, clay, wax, metal, or any other substance, and which is of such a character that the use to which under general custom or ordinary usage it should be put (irrespective of the use to which the purchaser intends to put it) is entirely or principally an ornamental or decorative one as distinguished from a useful or utilitarian one. The following list, not intended to be exhaustive, is given to show the class of articles embraced within this definition, viz: Statues, statuettes, figures, figurines, groups, busts, haut or bas-reliefs, plaques, pedestals, vases, flower bowls, or holders, jardinières, brackets, fountains, sundials, book ends, paper weights, cabinet pieces or curios, and the numerous articles included within the term bric-a-brac, when such articles are cut or carved by hand. The term "sculpture" shall not be understood to include (a) such articles as are in the nature of material, work, or labor furnished in connection with the erection or construction of a building and which form an integral part thereof, or (b) cut glassware, or engravings on metal, wood, shell, stone, or other substance, or (c) furniture, altars, candlesticks, chandeliers, railings, gates, doors, memorial monuments, tombstones, or other articles designed primarily for a useful purpose.

Paintings

4711 Art. 12. Articles taxed: Paintings.—The terms "paintings" means any pictures, images, likenesses, scenes, designs, or sketches, wholly or in part in oil, mineral, water, or other colors on canvas or other textile, wood, paper, metal, plaster, or other material, (a) whether antique or modern, (b) whether originals, replicas, copies, or reproductions, and (c) whether or not intended for reproduction by printing or other processes. The term "paintings" shall not be understood to include (1) such as are in the nature of work or labor furnished in connection with the erection or construction of a building and which form an integral part thereof; (2) furniture, windows, tableware, toilet articles, glove, handkerchief, candy, or other fancy boxes, menu, place, greeting, and similar cards, stationery, candlesticks, signs, placards, desk fittings, and other articles of utility when the same are ornamented or decorated with oil, mineral, water, or other colors; (3) such as are produced wholly or in part by stenciling, printing, or other mechanical process; and (4) pastels or drawings. The term "drawings" as used in this article shall include only pictures, images, likenesses, scenes, designs, or sketches produced by means of lines.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Statuary

4712 Art. 13. Articles taxed: Statuary.—The term “statuary” means any production (whether anique or modern and whether original, replica, copy, or reproduction) cut, carved, or otherwise wrought by hand from marble, stone, alabaster, agate, crystal, jade, lapis lazuli, or other semi-precious stone, terra cotta, ivory, bone, wood, clay, wax, metal, or other substance, when such production is a representation in the round of the human or animal form (irrespective of size), whether real, mythical, fabulous, or allegorical. The term “statuary” shall not be understood to include (a) such productions as are in the nature of material, work, or labor furnished in connection with the erection or construction of a building and which form an integral part thereof, (b) dolls or toys, or (c) such productions as are designed for a primarily useful purpose.

Art Porcelains

4713 Art. 14. Articles taxed: Art porcelains.—The term “art porcelains” means that class of articles, such as statues, statuettes, figures, figurines, groups, busts, haut or bas-reliefs, plaques, pedestals, vases, flower bowls or holders, jardinières, brackets, fountains, sundials, cabinet pieces or curios, and the numerous articles included within the term bric-a-brac by whatever process made (except as provided in the following paragraph) when such articles are made wholly or in chief value (a) of any ceramic production of translucent ware, of hard or soft paste, whether vitrified or semi-vitrified, by whatever name known; or (b) of that which is commonly or commercially known as porcelain, in either case, whether or not decorated, colored, or ornamented, whether modern or antique, and whether originals, replicas, copies, or reproductions, which are of such a character that the use to which under general custom or ordinary usage they should be put (irrespective of the use to which the purchaser intends to put them) is entirely or principally an ornamental or decorative one as distinguished from a useful or utilitarian one.

4714 The term “art porcelains” shall not be understood to include (a) such articles as are in the nature of material, work, or labor furnished in connection with the erection or construction of a building and which form an integral part thereof, (b) tableware or other articles designed for a primarily useful purpose, or (c) such articles as are duplicated by the manufacturer in commercial quantity wholly or chiefly by the ordinary mechanical processes of manufacture. Articles shall not be deemed to be duplicated in commercial quantity if they are ordinarily sold by the manufacturer in quantities of less than a dozen.

Bronzes

4715 Art. 15. Articles taxed: Bronzes.—The term “bronzes” means that class of articles covered by “sculpture” and “statuary” as defined in articles 11 and 13 by whatever process made, when such articles are made wholly or in chief value of that substance which is commonly or commercially known as bronze, whether such articles are modern or antique, and whether originals, replicas, copies, or reproductions, which are of such a character that the use to which under general custom or ordinary usage they should be put (irrespective of the use to which the purchaser intends to put them) is entirely or principally an ornamental or decorative one as distinguished from a useful or utilitarian one. The term “bronzes” shall not be understood to include (a) architectural bronzes, (b) such articles as are in the nature of material, work, or labor furnished in connection with the erection or construction of a building and which form an integral part thereof, (c) medals, memorial or commemorative tablets, or (d) such articles as are designed for a primarily useful purpose. The sale to an artist by a foundry of a casting made from the artist's model is not subject to the tax.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Frames

4716 Art. 16. Articles taxed: Frames.—If a taxable article is sold in a frame, the tax attaches to the price for which both the article and the frame are sold. If, however, the article is sold without the frame, the tax applies only to the price at which the article itself is sold. The frame, however, if sold separately, may be taxable under section 905 of the Revenue Act of 1921.

JEWELRY

4717 Art. 17. Effective date.—The tax is effective as to all sales made on or after January 1, 1922.

4718 Art. 18. Use of terms.—For the purpose of the tax and as used in these regulations, the term "dealer" means any individual, partnership, association, or corporation engaged in the business of selling for profit any of the enumerated articles to a purchaser for consumption or use, and the estate of such a dealer. Thus, a dealer may be a manufacturer, jobber, wholesaler, retailer, mail-order house, installment house, trustee in bankruptcy, receiver, pawnbroker, or peddler, if the sale is for consumption or use; but a casual sale, not in the course of trade or business, by an individual of any of the enumerated articles, does not constitute the vendor a "dealer" within the meaning of section 905. An auctioneer or broker is a dealer within the meaning of the act in respect to all sales made by him of articles in which he has title, but not in respect to articles which he is selling as an agent.

4719 Art. 19. Articles tax paid under other acts.—The tax is on the sale by or for a dealer or his estate when any of the enumerated articles are sold for consumption or use, whether or not a tax under any other law has been previously paid on such articles.

4720 Art. 20. Consumption or use.—An article is sold "for consumption or use" within the meaning of section 905 of the act if it is sold for any other purpose than to be sold, leased, or otherwise disposed of for profit, whether or not after change in form by process of manufacture.

4721 Unless the purchaser is a wholesaler, retailer, or manufacturer customarily engaged in the business of selling or further manufacturing the articles in respect to which the applicability of the tax is in question, the sale to such purchaser will be deemed to be for consumption or use, unless the contrary is clearly shown.

Common or Commercial Jewelry

4722 Art. 21. Jewelry.—The following articles are taxable as jewelry:

4723 (1) Articles to be worn on the person or apparel for purpose of adornment, which according to general custom or ordinary usage are worn so as to be displayed, such as brooches, rings, chains, cuff buttons, necklaces, fobs, and shoe buckles. Such articles are taxable regardless of the substance of which made (except as provided in subdivision (1) of article 22), and regardless of their utilitarian value.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4724 The term "worn on the person" as used in this paragraph does not include articles to be carried in the hand or hung over the arm, such as bags or purses.

4725 (2) Articles to be carried in the hand, or hung on the arm, or carried or worn concealed on the person, whether in pocket or bag or under the outer garment, such as cigarette cases, eyeglass cases, pencils, powder boxes, garter buckles, purses or hand bags. Such articles are taxable as jewelry only if made of or ornamented, mounted or fitted with pearls, precious or semiprecious stones, or imitations thereof; but if so made, ornamented, mounted, or fitted, they are taxable regardless of their utilitarian value. See also article 24.

4726 (3) Articles not taxable under the following articles may be taxable by reason of being articles commonly or commercially known as jewelry, real or imitation. It should be carefully noted that the rulings in this article are only as to articles taxable as jewelry. Articles which are not taxable as jewelry may be taxable under articles 23 or 24. Thus a cigarette case, if made of, or ornamented, mounted, or fitted with a precious metal or imitation thereof, although not taxable under this article is taxable under article 24. It should also be noted that the examples given in this article are not intended to be exhaustive, but merely illustrative.

Articles Not Taxable

4727 Art. 22. Articles not taxable.—(1) The following articles of personal adornment are not taxable under section 905, unless ornamented, mounted or fitted with pearls, precious or semi-precious stones, or imitations thereof: (a) Articles made of textiles or feathers; (b) hat trimmings (not including hatpins); (c) shoe trimmings (not including buckles); (d) buttons ordinarily worn permanently attached to wearing apparel.

4728 (2) Articles used as ornaments for wearing apparel are taxable if coming within the classification of subdivision (1) or (2) of article 21, or if within the provisions of any of the following articles:

Pearls, Stones, and Imitations

4729 Art. 23. Pearls, precious and semiprecious stones and imitations thereof.—The tax attaches to the sale of all pearls and precious or semiprecious stones, whether real or imitation, cut or uncut, whether or not drilled, mounted, or matched, and whether or not temporarily or permanently strung, and whether with or without clasps.

Articles Made of Precious Metals or Imitations or Ivory

4730 Art. 24.—Articles made of, or ornamented, mounted or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof or ivory.—The term "precious metals" includes silver, gold, platinum, and all metals more valuable than these. The term "imitations thereof" includes only platings or alloys of any of the above materials.

4731 The following articles are not taxable under the clause of section 905 construed in this article: (1) Articles made of imitation ivory; (2) surgical instruments, eyeglasses and spectacles; (3) articles merely ornamented or overlaid with gold or silver leaf or paint, such as picture frames, books, and Christmas cards.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

4732 Glassware, china, pottery, and like articles are only taxable if ornamented, mounted or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof, but are not taxable when ornamented with gold or silver leaf or paint.

4733 It should be carefully noted, however, that the articles above enumerated, although not taxable as "articles made of, or ornamented, mounted, or fitted with, precious metals or imitations thereof or ivory," may be taxable as jewelry. Thus a hatpin with a head of imitation ivory is taxable as jewelry. For articles taxable as jewelry see article 21.

4734 Shoe buckles not attached to shoes are taxable as jewelry under section 905, regardless of the material of which made, if they are ornamented, mounted, or fitted with pearls, precious or semi-precious stones, or imitations thereof. Shoe buckles made of or ornamented, mounted or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory, are taxable under section 905.

4735 Fountain pens equipped with gold pen points are taxable on the total price for which such pens are sold.

Watches and Clocks

4736 Art. 25. Watches and clocks.—Watch or clock movements sold separately are taxable. Watch or clock cases sold separately are taxable when made of or ornamented, mounted, or fitted with precious metals or imitations thereof or genuine ivory. Watches and clocks sold complete are taxable regardless of the substance of which made. Watch or clock cases and movements sold separately, but intended to be used together, are taxable.

4737 Art. 26. Opera glasses, lorgnettes, marine glasses, field glasses, and binoculars.—The enumeration in the statute includes only portable instruments. Instruments of the character enumerated, which by reason of their size or weight are ordinarily mounted upon tripods or other bases, are not taxable.

Second-hand Articles

4738 Art. 27. Second-hand articles.—Articles coming within the enumeration of section 905 are not exempt from taxation when sold by a dealer for consumption or use at second-hand or after being used, but are taxable on the price for which sold.

Repairs

4739 Art. 28. Repairs.—Ordinary repairs which do not increase the value of the article repaired are not taxable, but repairs involving the addition of precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory, are taxable upon the price of the added parts, which will be presumed to be the price charged for the job, unless the contrary is shown.

4740 Repairs which are merely such as to put the article in a serviceable condition as originally sold and which do not increase the original value of the article repaired, even though such repairs involve the addition of precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory, are not taxable under section 905. However, repairs involving the addition of precious metals or imitations thereof, or ivory, not falling in the above class, or pearls, precious and semiprecious stones and imitations thereof, are taxable upon the price of the added parts, which will be presumed to be the price charged for the job unless the contrary is shown.

ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

Exports

4741 Art. 29. Sales for export.—The tax does not attach to the sale of 4538 an article which is sold for export by the vendor, and in due course so exported.

4742 An article may be sold for export but never exported, or not exported in due course; also, an article may be exported in due course by the purchaser, although not sold for export.

4743 In order to be exempt from tax, however, it is necessary that the article be both sold for export by the vendor and in due course so exported.

4744 An article will be regarded as having been sold for export if the vendor has in his possession at the time that title passes or of shipment (whichever is prior) (a) an order or contract of sale or document incidental thereto showing in writing that the vendor is to ship the article direct to a foreign destination; or (b) where the delivery is to be made to the purchaser or his agent within the United States, a certificate from such purchaser or agent, as the case may be, showing (1) that the article is purchased either to fill a firm order then held by such purchaser requiring shipment to a foreign destination, or for shipment (or transportation) by him in due course to himself or to his agent or to his principal in a foreign country, or that the article is purchased to fill future orders calling for shipment thereof by the purchaser direct to a foreign destination, and (2) that the article will be transported to a foreign destination in due course prior to use, resale, or further manufacture within the United States.

4745 In these cases the vendor, for a period of 12 months from the date when title passes or of shipment (whichever is prior), is excused from filing returns for the articles so sold. This temporary exemption becomes permanent upon the vendor's attaching to such order, contract, or certificate before the expiration of such period of 12 months due proof of exportation (see Art. 30). On the other hand, if within such period of 12 months the vendor has not received and attached to such order or contract such "proof of exportation," then the temporary exemption ceases and the vendor shall include a tax on the sale of such article in his return for the month in which such period of 12 months expires. The order or contract of sale and certificate and the "proof of exportation" must be preserved by the vendor in such a way as to be readily accessible for inspection by internal-revenue officers.
 No sale shall be considered to be exempt from tax under section 1305 of the act unless its character as an export sale has been established in accordance with the above provisions.

4746 Art. 30. Proof of exportation.—By the term "proof of exportation" is meant an affidavit of the exporter (who, if not the vendor, must be the purchaser from the vendor or an agent of one or the other) containing the following information: (1) The name and address of vendor; (2) the name and address of the exporter; (3) whether exporter is acting in his own behalf or as agent, and if agent name of principal; (4) a brief description of the article; (5) the date upon which the article was delivered to a carrier for transportation beyond the limits of the United States (or if not transported by carrier the actual date and manner of transportation out of the United States); (6) the name of carrier issuing export bill of lading, and if a carrier by sea, the name of vessel carrying the article and date of departure; from

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

United States; (7) destination of article; (8) statement that the article was in fact exported in due course prior to use, resale, or further manufacture within the United States.

4747 Where the vendor is the exporter there may be attached to the original contract or order as proof of exportation, in lieu of the affidavit provided for in the preceding paragraph, (1) a copy of export bill of lading, or (2) a certificate by the agent or representative of the export carrier showing exportation of the article, or (3) certificate of mailing, where the article was shipped by parcel post. Where the exportation is accomplished by a person other than the vendor the exporter must carefully preserve in his own files a copy of export bill of lading or other shipping document and all other papers bearing on the transaction, readily accessible for inspection by any authorized official of the United States.

4748 Where the exportation is accomplished by a person other than the vendor, the affidavit above required may cover all the articles received from the vendor upon any one contract or shipment, whether exported on different dates or shipped to different consignees.

4749 In any case where the vendor does not have in his possession, within the 12-months' period, proof of exportation as outlined herein, the vendor must pay the tax. Whenever proper proof of exportation is available, claim for refund of the amounts so paid may be filed.

Trade with Possessions of the United States

4750 Art. 31. Trade with the possessions of the United States.—Section 1304 of the revenue act of 1918 provides as follows:

That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in the United States, upon articles coming into the United States from the Virgin Islands, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in the United States upon like articles of domestic manufacture; such articles shipped from such islands to the United States shall be exempt from the payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of such islands: Provided, That there shall be levied, collected, and paid in such islands, upon articles imported from the United States, a tax equal to the internal-revenue tax imposed in such islands upon like articles there manufactured; and such articles going into such islands from the United States shall be exempt from payment of any tax imposed by the internal-revenue laws of the United States.

4751 A sale which results in the shipment of articles into the United States from the Virgin Islands is taxable to the same extent as a sale of articles within the United States. Articles going into the Virgin Islands from the United States are free from tax in the United States. The same rules apply to trade with Porto Rico and the Philippine Islands. See section 1000 of the revenue act of 1917 and Section V of the act of August 4, 1909, as amended by Section IV, subdivision C, of the act of October 3, 1913. The tax attaches, however, to articles shipped to other possessions of the United States, including the Canal Zone. [See note at end of ¶4669.]

Return and Payment of Tax

4752 Art. 32. Return and payment of tax.—In accordance with the law sections here cited, every person liable for the tax in respect to the sale of any of the articles enumerated in section 902 or section 905 must make monthly returns under oath in duplicate (except that if the amount of tax covered thereby is not in excess of $10 such returns may be signed and acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath), and pay the taxes imposed on such articles to the collector of internal revenue for the district in which his principal place of business is located. If he has no place of business, return should be made to the collector for the district in which he resides. An itinerant dealer should make return and pay the tax to the collector of the district where the sales are made. The returns shall be made on Form 728A (Revised) [see page 909]. Instructions for preparing the return will be found on the back of the form. The returns are to be rendered and the tax paid on or before the last day of each month covering the transactions of the preceding month. The first return must cover all transactions from January 1 to January 31, 1922, both inclusive, and is to be made on or before February 28, 1922. The books of every person liable to the tax shall be open at all times for inspection by examining internal-revenue officers.

Returns By Agents

4753 Art. 33. Returns by agents.—Every auctioneer, agent, factor, broker, dealer, or other person selling any of the articles enumerated in section 902, as agent for the owner, unless such owner is the artist, shall make monthly return under oath to the collector for the district in which his principal place of business is located, stating as to each article sold for any such owner the name and address of such owner, the date and amount of the sale, and a brief description of the article.

Credits and Refunds

4754 Art. 34. Credits and refunds.—If a person overpays the tax due with one monthly return, he may take credit for the overpayment against the tax due with a succeeding return. For the procedure with reference to claims for refund see Regulations No. 14 (revised) and sections 1315 and 1323 of the revenue act of 1921, reenacting sections 3220 [¶8023] and 3225, [¶8047] of the Revised Statutes, as amended.

Fractional Part of Cent

4755 Art. 35. Fractional part of cent.—In computing the tax a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to a full cent.

Penalties

4756 Art. 36. Penalties.—[See ¶4520, ¶4530, ¶4537, ¶8014, ¶8073, ¶8074.]

Authority for Regulations

4757 Art. 37. Promulgation.—In pursuance of the statute the foregoing regulations are hereby made and promulgated and all rulings inconsistent herewith are hereby revoked.

EXCISE TAXES: REGULATIONS:

(Decision.)

February 7, 1923.

One who purchases automobile trucks and bodies from the respective manufacturers thereof and after installing a body on a chassis sells the combination at retail is a manufacturer of an automobile truck within the meaning of the Act and is liable to tax as such.

IN THE UNITED STATES CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS FOR THE NINTH CIRCUIT

R. C. KLEPPER, doing business under the fictitious name of

vs.

No. 23887

JOHN P. CARTER, Collector of Internal Revenue, Southern District of California, Defendant in Error.

Writ of Error to the United States District Court for the Southern District of California, Southern Division.

Before GILBERT, ROSS and HUNT, Circuit Judges.

4758 This case involves the legality of certain taxes paid by the plaintiff in error for the year 1919.

4759 Klepper, doing business under the fictitious name of Bethlehem Motors Company was a retail dealer in automobile trucks. The Bethlehem Motors Corporation of Pennsylvania was a manufacturer of automobile trucks with and without bodies, and sold bodies separately or bodies and chassis assembled. The Weber Auto Body and Trailer Works was a manufacturer of automobile truck bodies, but did not manufacture automobile trucks or chassis; Klepper at various times in 1919 bought automobile trucks from the Bethlehem Motors Corporation. The trucks were equipped with cabs, but the bodies were made by and purchased from the Weber Auto Body and Trailer Works, as such bodies were needed. Klepper sold the completed trucks at retail. The Bethlehem Corporation of Pennsylvania paid the war tax on the thirteen trucks at three per cent on the price for which the trucks were sold to Klepper, and added the amount of the tax to the invoice price, and Klepper paid to the Bethlehem Corporation the amount of such tax. The Weber Company paid the war tax on thirteen bodies at five per cent of the price at which the bodies were sold to Klepper and added the amount of the tax to the invoice price, and Klepper paid to the Weber Company the amount of such tax.

4760 Carter, as collector of internal revenue, demanded that Klepper pay an additional war tax of three per centum as a manufacturer, on the gross sales price for which Klepper sold the completed automobile trucks to his customers, with added penalties because of Klepper's failure to report such tax as a manufacturer. The collector, however, deducted the amount of tax paid by Klepper to the Bethlehem Corporation and to the Weber Company.

4761 In due course suit was brought, judgment went against Klepper and writ of error was brought.

4762 Section 900 of the Act of Congress approved February 24, 1919, chapter 18, provides for the levy, assessment and collection and payment upon designated articles sold by manufacturers, producers or importers, of a tax equivalent to the following percentages of the price for which so sold or leased: (1) Automobile trucks and automobile wagons, including tires, inner tubes, parts and accessories therefor, sold on or in connection therewith, or the sale thereof, three per centum. (3) Tires, inner tubes, parts or accessories for any of the articles enumerated in subdivision 1 or 2, sold to any person other than a manufacturer or producer of any of the articles enumerated in subdivision 1 or 2, five per centum. Section 903 provides for the making of returns in accordance with the regulations and for adding a penalty if the tax is not paid when due. By regulations of the commissioner of internal revenue, revised in December, 1920, a manufacturer may take as a credit against the tax imposed on him, in respect to the sale of any article taxable under section 900, which he has reimbursed to the manufacturer from whom he purchased any article forming a component part (whether or not changed in form by process of manufacture) of the article sold by him and in respect to which tax is paid by him, provided the tax was billed to him as a specific item and in the exact amount of the tax. Credit is not allowed unless: (1) the article forms a component part of an article sold by such manufacturer and in respect to which a tax is payable by him; (2) such manufacturer has not, in fact, reimbursed the manufacturer from whom he purchased, and has himself in fact paid the tax upon which such credit is sought. Article 7 defines a manufacturer as generally a person who (1) actually makes a taxable article; or (2) by changes in the form of an article produces a taxable article; or (3) by the combination of two or more articles produces a taxable article. The regulations give examples, including "Example 2: A, an automobile body manufacturer sells an automobile body in a knockdown condition, but complete as to all its component parts, to B, a dealer, who assembles these component parts into a complete usable automobile body, and installs it or causes it to be installed on a chassis, which he has purchased from a manufacturer, who is a different person from the manufacturer of the body, and sells the completed automobile. A is the manufacturer of the automobile body, but may sell the same to B tax free under the certificate provided for in article 14. B is the manufacturer of the automobile and subject to tax on the selling price of the completed automobile, but may take credit for the amount of the tax paid by the manufacturer of the chassis."

4763 HUNT, Circuit Judge, after stating the facts:—In our opinion Klepper was properly held to be a manufacturer or producer of automobile trucks. While he did not make any of the several parts, nevertheless, he bought the parts made by others and he sold a completed automobile truck. The fact that several different concerns did for him, a retail salesman, what, under the prevailing method the purchaser may have had to do for himself, does not affect the question.

4764 We are not going too far when we recognize that the commonly known general method of transacting the automobile truck business, was for a person to buy a chassis from one dealer or maker, and a body from another, and then to assemble the two. Klepper saved the purchaser all this trouble and made it his business to retail the product of his purchases as an automobile truck. Thus he produced or manufactured the truck. (Rech-Marbaker Co. vs. Lederer, Collector, 263 Fed. 593; Foss Hughes Co. v. Lederer, Collector, . . . Fed. . . .). In Carbon Steel Co. vs. Llewellyn, 251 U. S. 501, the Supreme Court considered an excise tax on the manufacture of shells measured by the sale price. The petitioner in the case asked for a rebate on the ground that he did not manufacture, but that the shells were manufactured by independent contractors. The Court held that the purchase of elemental parts of a completed product, or the doing of subsidiary work by a subcontractor did not take from the contractor the character of a "person manufacturing," as comprehended in sec. 301 of the Munitions Tax Act of September 8, 1916, Title III, 463, 39 St. 780.

4765 The decisions cited support us in the view that plaintiff manufactured or produced and sold complete trucks and that the judgment was right.

Affirmed.

(Decision.)

Revenue Act of 1917.

April 23, 1923.

Sale of articles under the Revenue Act of 1917 to domestic commission merchants for export on firm order, and under conditions stated, constitutes a tax-free sale as of articles exported.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES.

A. G. SPALDING & BROS., Plaintiff in Error,

vs.

WILLIAM H. EDWARDS, Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York.

4767 Mr. Justice HOLMES delivered the opinion of the Court.

4677 This is a suit to recover the amount of taxes collected by duress
4741 under color of the War Revenue Act of October 3, 1917, c. 63, §600 (f), 40 Stat. 300, 316. The plaintiff, a corporation, manufacturer of the goods in question, says that the tax was laid on articles exported from a State, (New York), in violation of Article I, Section 9, of the Constitution of the United States. Upon demurrer the complaint was dismissed by the District Court on the merits.

4768 The tax is 'upon all baseball bats . . . balls of all kinds . . . sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer' and was levied on three occasions admitted to be similar, so that the statement of one transaction will be enough. Delgado & Cia., a firm in the city of La Guaira, Venezuela, ordered Scholtz & Co., commission merchants in New York, to buy for their account and risk a certain number of baseballs and baseball bats, etc., at an agreed price and to mark the packages "D. & C.: S: La Guaira: No. 36" to indicate the purchasers and their place. Scholtz & Co. thereupon sent to the plaintiff in writing, dated December 10, 1918, this: "Export order from Scholtz & Co., Shipping and Commission Merchants . . . . . Please ship on or before the . . . . . per steamer . . . . . Rush . . . . . Errors in weight often entail heavy fines in foreign Customs houses, therefore be careful when weighing and marking goods, as we shall hold you responsible for any fines caused through your errors. Cases or crates must be made to fit goods as duty is paid by gross weight. Shipping mark and number to be put on packages. (As above, with statement of the goods wanted.) Please send Memo. Invoice at once so we can apply for license and clear at Custom House." Scholtz & Co., instructed the plaintiff to deliver the packages so marked to the Atlantic & Caribbean Steam Navigation Co., an exporting carrier in New York. The plaintiff marked and delivered the goods as directed and was given a receipt by the carrier which it sent to Scholtz & Co. and which was exchanged by them for an export bill of lading in their name, dated February 10, 1919. The goods were transported and delivered in due time to Delgado & Cia. Scholtz & Co. paid the plaintiff on February 1 and were paid their commission by Delgado & Cia. in ninety days from date of shipment. The transaction from start to finish was understood and intended by the plaintiff and Scholtz & Co. to be for the purpose of exporting the goods to Delgado & Cia. in Venezuela. The question is whether the sale was a step in exportation, assuming as appears to be the fact, that the title passed at the moment when the goods were delivered into the carrier's hands.

4769 The fact that the law under which the tax was imposed was a general law touching all sales of the class, and not aimed specially at exports, would not help the defendant if in this case the tax was "laid on articles exported from any State," because that is forbidden in terms by the Constitution. Article I, Section 9. United States v. Hvoslef, 237 U. S. 1, 18. Crew Levick Co. v. Pennsylvania, 245 U. S. 292. Articles in course of transportation cannot be taxed. William E. Peck & Co. v. Lowe, 247 U. S. 165, 173. So we return to the question that we have stated. To answer it with regard to any transaction we have to fix a point at which, in view of the purpose of the Constitution, the export must be said to begin. As elsewhere in the law there will be other points very near to it on the other side, so that if the necessity of fixing one definitely is not remembered, any determination may seem arbitrary. In this case, for instance, while the goods were in process of manufacture they were none the less subject to taxation if they were intended for export and made with specific reference to foreign wants. Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418. Heisler v. Thomas Colliery Co., November 27, 1922. On the other hand no one would doubt that they were exempt after they had been loaded upon the vessel for Venezuela and the bill of lading issued. It seems to us that the facts recited are closer to the latter than to the former side, and that the export had begun.

4770 The very act that passed the title and that would have incurred the tax had the transaction been domestic, committed the goods to the carrier that was to take them across the sea, for the purpose of export and with the direction to the foreign port upon the goods. The expected and accomplished effect of the act was to start them for that port. The fact that further acts were to be done before the goods would get to sea does not matter so long as they were only the regular steps to the contemplated result.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Getting the bill of lading stands no differently from putting the goods on board ship. Neither does it matter that the title was in Scholtz & Co. and that theoretically they might change their mind and retain the bats and balls for their own use. There was not the slightest probability of any such change and it did not occur. The purchase by Scholtz & Co. was solely for the purpose of Delgado & Cia. and for their account and risk. Theoretical possibilities may be left out of account. In Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co., 229 U. S. 336, the consignees might have retained the goods at New Orleans instead of shipping them abroad. The fact that they came to New Orleans by rail from another place in the State made no difference. The same principle was applied in Texas & New Orleans R. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 123. The overt act of delivering the goods to the carrier marks the point of distinction between this case and Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418. To put it at any later point would fail to give to exports the liberal protection that hitherto they have received; of which an example may be seen in Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co., Ltd. v. United States, 237 U. S. 19.

Judgment reversed.

4771 Time for filing returns and payment of sales taxes.—The sixth sentence of Article 41, Regulations 43, (Part 1); the fifth sentence of Article 13, Regulations 43, (Part 2); the fourth sentence of Article 36, Regulations 47; the sixth sentence of Article 32, Regulations 48; the first sentence of Article 20, Regulations 52; and the second sentence of Article 35, Regulations 57, are hereby amended by inserting a comma at the end thereof, and adding the following: "except that when the last day of the month in which a return and payment are due falls on Sunday or a legal holiday, the return may be filed and payment made to the Collector of Internal Revenue or Deputy Collector on the next secular or business day." (T. D. 3485, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated June 1, 1923.)

Sections 313, 315 and 600 of the Revenue Act of October 3, 1917.

4772 Sales of articles exported—Modification of T. D. 2739 and T. D. 2781.—In view of the recent decision of the Supreme Court in the case of Spalding and Bros. v. Edwards, 43 Sup. Ct. 485 (T. D. 3476) [4767], all prior rulings with respect to the tax paid under Sections 313, 315 and 600 of the Revenue Act of October 3, 1917, on sales by the manufacturer of articles exported to a foreign country are hereby modified to conform to the ruling laid down in that decision.

4773 Section 600 imposes a tax in respect of automobiles and other enumerated articles and Sections 313 and 315 in respect of nonalcoholic beverages and other enumerated articles sold by the manufacturer, producer, or importer. Section 9 of Article I of the Constitution of the United States provides that "no tax or duty shall be laid on articles exported from any State."

4774 The determining circumstance with respect to whether or not the sale of an article is exempt from taxation under the above Section of the Constitution is whether or not the sale was a step in the exportation of the article to its real and ultimate destination in a foreign country. If the sale and delivery by the manufacturer actually start the article to its destination in a foreign country, either by the immediate carrier or through connecting carriers the sale is exempt from taxation, and the fact that further acts are to be done before the goods get to sea does not matter so long as they are only the regular steps to the contemplated result—exportation. It is not necessary that shipment be upon through bills of lading.

4775 In the cases where a manufacturer sells an article to a domestic purchaser not engaged exclusively in the export business and who at the time of the sale has no contract with foreign purchasers for the fulfillment of which the purchase is made, such sales are subject to tax even though the article is ultimately exported. A sale to a concern doing business in the United States is a sale for domestic delivery unless compliance with the terms of the order or contract of sale results in starting the article on its course for delivery in a foreign country.

4776 Articles normally may be exported by the manufacturer tax free in several ways: (1) They may be shipped by the manufacturer to an agent in a foreign country and after reaching there may be sold by the agent; (2) they may be shipped by the manufacturer to a foreign purchaser to fill orders received by an agent in a foreign country; (3) they may be shipped by the manufacturer to a foreign purchaser to fill orders received by the manufacturer in the United States; (4) they may be shipped by the manufacturer to a foreign purchaser to fill orders solicited by mail and received by mail from the foreign purchaser. Articles may also be exported in certain other ways which will exempt the sale thereof from taxation.

4777 Examples of sales by a manufacturer which are not made direct to a purchaser in a foreign country, but which are nevertheless not subject to tax, are: (1) A sale to a dealer in the United States, effected by compliance with the terms of the contract and shipping instructions to export; (2) a sale to an export commission house in the United States purchasing on behalf of a foreign buyer, which is effected by a shipment, either direct to the foreign buyer or consigned to the commission house at a domestic port and which is followed by immediate exportation by the commission house to the foreign buyer in whose behalf the purchase was made; (3) a sale to a dealer located in the United States under a contract which prohibits a disposition of the article in the United States; (4) a sale to an agent for a foreign purchaser who conducts a buying business in the United States for his principal and exports all articles bought.

4778 No sale is exempt from taxation under the above-named Section of the Constitution, regardless of the circumstances under which made, unless the article sold is actually exported.

4779 The application of the tax in respect of positive moving-picture films leased by the manufacturer, producer, or importer is governed by the same rules.

4780 The taxes apply to articles sold in foreign commerce by a manufacturer located in a territory elsewhere in the United States than a State, and to articles going from the United States to any of its island or other possessions, including the Canal Zone, except that under acts of Congress articles going from the United States into the West Indian Islands acquired from Denmark, or into the Philippine Island or Porto Rico, are exempt from the taxes to the same extent as articles exported from a State to a foreign country.

4781 This decision is supplemental to Regulations No. 44, approved May 31, 1918, and supersedes T. D. 2739, and T. D. 2781. (T. D. 3495, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated July 10, 1923.)

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS

(Decision.)

November 7, 1923.

1917 and 1918 Acts.

Fire apparatus held to be subject to tax as automobile trucks or wagons, and even though sold to a municipality.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
WESTERN DISTRICT OF NEW YORK

American-La France Fire Engine Company, Inc.

vs.

Vincent H. Riordan, Collector.

4782 HAZEL, District Judge: [In part.] * * *
4581 Plaintiff's point that its vehicles or machines were not primarily 4588 intended for transporting persons or property or things, and hence are not included in the classification of Sec. 900 or any of the definitions of the words "automobile" and "automobile truck" is not in my opinion sustained since firemen and drivers and loads of course were intended to be carried to and from fires. To argue that their transportation was merely incidental to the operation of the machines or the extinguishing of fires is beside the point if the view taken is correct that Congress used broad and comprehensive terms in which plaintiff's productions are fairly included.

4783 The next contention arises from the sales of fire trucks and apparatus to municipalities. It is perfectly true that the Federal government can not burden the State or subdivision thereof to which automobile trucks, etc., were sold by plaintiff by imposing taxes upon them although there is no express provision of the Constitution prohibiting it. The well established exception of States and their subdivisions from tax by the Federal government is implied from our dual system of government and the principle that the National and State governments must function separately and separately maintain instrumentalities for conducting their governmental operations, and accordingly the states and municipalities can not be hampered or impaired in administering their own affairs by the taxing power of the National Congress. The tax in the present instance, however, was not a direct tax on the municipalities to which articles were sold, nor on the articles acquired.
 The tax imposed on plaintiff was for the privilege of vending and dealing in the manufactured articles. (Sec. 602.) There was no connection as agent or otherwise between plaintiff and the municipalities. It does not relieve plaintiff that sales to municipalities were under contract. This principle of taxation on sales finds support by analogy in various cases decided by the Supreme Court of which U. S. v. Perkins, 163 U. S. 625; Snyder v.
 Bettman, 190 U. S. 249, and South Carolina v. U. S. 199 U. S. 433, are believed fair examples. The first two cases related to taxation of bequests to the United States and to States and municipalities. The court held that the taxes imposed were upon the right to acquire property by succession or will and not upon the property of the State or municipality. In the South Carolina case certain persons, as agents of the State, were selling intoxicating liquor, and the court held that the salesmen were not relieved from paying the internal revenue tax even though they had no interest in the profits since the tax was not upon the property of the State but upon the means by which that property was acquired. By a parity of reasoning the municipalities which bought fire vehicles are not in fact required to pay the tax, and hence the liability therefor is upon the manufacturer or salesman.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS

4784 It is next urged that the earlier ruling by the Commissioner that the excise tax did not apply shows a persuasive uncertainty as to the inclusion of plaintiff's structures. In answer to this contention it must suffice to say that the erroneous interpretation of the statute by the Commission did not preclude the United States or the defendant from the right to impose and collect the tax on subsequent modification of the earlier rule. Nor has the later interpretation created equities which in fairness require the judicial adoption of the first interpretation. The tax is prescribed by statute, and, under Sec. 601 of the Revenue Act of 1917, no assessment was required, but monthly returns were necessary under oath by each manufacturer or producer, and payment of the tax apparently became self-executing. Dollar Savings Bank v. U. S., 19 Wall. 227; Christi-St. Com. Co. v. U. S. 129 Fed. 506. It is true that a construction by an Executive Department upon an Act of Congress ought not to be lightly overturned either by the Department itself or by the court. Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. 264 Fed. 610, and it should not be done without cogent and persuasive reasons.

4785 In the present case careful consideration has been given to the various questions involved, but in view of the conditions prevailing at the time the statute was passed, the emergency of war, and what seems to me to have been the evident intention of Congress to impose an excise tax on all kinds of automobiles and automobile trucks and wagons in which, without express exception, plaintiff's productions are included, I am constrained to the view that the ruling in favor of imposing the tax was correct and the original rulings were erroneous. The exception of tractors in the enactment adds force to the view that the intention of Congress is clearly expressed in the general language employed in both Acts. A case of long continued executive construction and payment of tax thereunder and adoption by Congress in consequence thereof is not presented, and hence the adjudications cited by plaintiff on that point are not controlling.

4786 My conclusion is that the excise taxes paid by the plaintiff under sections 600 and 900 of the Revenue Acts were legally exacted. A decree may be entered dismissing the bill with costs.

INSTRUCTIONS.

(For full instructions, see Regulations No. 57, Revised.)

Section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1921 imposes the following taxes upon telegraph and telephone messages:

(a) In the case of each telegraph, telephone, cable, or radio, dispatch, message, or conversation, which originates within the United States, and for the transmission of which the charge is more than 14 cents and not more than 50 cents, a tax of 5 cents; and if the charge is more than 50 cents, a tax of 10 cents:

(b) A tax of 10 per centum of the amount paid to any telegraph or telephone company for any leased-wire or talking-circuit special service furnished. This subdivision shall not apply to the amount paid for so much of such service as is utilized (1) in the collection and dissemination of news through the public press, or (2) in the conduct, by a common carrier or telegraph or telephone company, of its business as such.

1. COMPUTATION OF TAX.—The tax is imposed and must be computed and collected upon each separate service rendered and not upon the aggregate of charges made.

2. RETURNS AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—Return with remittance covering taxes collected in any month must be in the hands of the Collector of Internal Revenue (or his authorized representative) of the district in which the principal office or place of business of the person making the return is located on or before the last day of the succeeding month. Returns must be signed and sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, but if the tax is less than $10 the return may be signed or acknowledged before two subscribing witnesses.

3. CREDITS.—In case of any overpayment of tax due to an error in calculation, credit may be taken therefor against taxes due upon any subsequent monthly return. Credit may also be taken as outlined in the regulations. A complete and detailed record of such overpayment must be kept by the person taking credit therefor. In case credit is taken on this return for an overpayment made on a previous return, full information must be attached showing the reasons therefor and designating the kind of tax, and the month for which the previous return was filed and the date of payment.

4. RECORDS.—Every person, corporation, partnership, or association required to make this return must keep such records as will clearly show all charges upon which tax is required to be collected, in order that returns may be easily verified by revenue officers.

5. PENALTIES.—Failure to file on time, 25 per cent of tax. Failure to pay on time, 5 per cent of tax and 1 per cent interest a month. Severe penalties for failure to file returns or for false or fraudulent returns.

PART I.

TRANSMISSION OF DISPATCHES, MESSAGES, AND CONVERSATIONS

IMPOSITION OF TAX.

5510 Article 1. Imposition of the tax.—Transmission.—The tax is im-5500 posed upon the transmission of a message or conversation, by tele-5501 phone, telegraph, radio, or cable. Transmission includes services rendered and facilities provided by the carrier necessary or incidental to the actual movement of the message; for example, messenger service utilized in the movement of a toll message.

5511 Transmission begins when the message is delivered by the sender to the carrier or its agent, and continues until its receipt by the addressee or his agent. Where, therefore, a message passes by the combined facilities of several lines, there is one message and one transmission. But where a sender uses a telephone toll message to reach a telegraph office to secure the transmission of a telegraph message, the place of delivery of the telegraph message by the sender to the carrier is the telegraph office, and the transmission of the telegraph message begins there. The telephone message is a separate message and as such subject to the provisions of the act.

5512 Art. 2. Imposition of tax—Carrier.—The tax applies to transmission services when rendered for hire, whether or not the agency rendering them is a common carrier. Accordingly, a carrier of dispatches, messages, or conversations by telegraph, telephone, cable, or radio is held to be any person, corporation, partnership, or association who or which, for hire, furnishes the services or facilities described or referred to in section 500, subdivisions (a) and (b) of the act.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5513 Therefore, where the lessee of a leased wire or talking circuit special service transmits messages for hire, he is a carrier of such messages and liable to the provisions of the act relative to the collection, report, and payment of the taxes thereon.

ORIGIN OF MESSAGE DETERMINES TAXABILITY.

5514 Art. 3. Originating with the United States.—The tax is upon the transmission by telephone, telegraph, radio, or cable of dispatches, messages, and conversations originating within the United States.

5515 Messages transmitted from a point within the United States to a point without the United States are subject to the provisions of the act unless sent with charges "reversed" or "collect." Messages transmitted from a point without the United States to a point within the United States are not subject to the tax, unless sent with charges "reversed" or "collect."

5516 The term "United States" includes the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia; it also includes all inland waters (such as rivers, lakes, bays, etc.) lying wholly within the United States, and, where an international boundary line divides inland waters, the parts of such inland waters as lie within the boundary of the United States; and also the waters known as a marine league from low tide on the coast line. Radio messages sent from ships within the above limits are therefore subject to the provisions of the act.

5517 Art. 4. Reversed or collect messages.—The point of origin of messages transmitted with charges "reversed" or "collect" is the point at which the charge is collectible; that is, the point of receipt of the message by the addressee.

5518 Art. 5. Effective date of the law.—The tax imposed under subdivisions (a) and (b) of section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1921 is in lieu of the tax imposed under subdivisions (f) and (g) of section 500 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and is upon the transmission by telephone, telegraph, radio or cable, of dispatches, messages, and conversations originating on or after January 1, 1922. The rate of taxation is the same under both acts. The provisions of the Revenue Act of 1918 are effective as to all taxable services or facilities furnished between midnight of March 31, 1919, and midnight of December 31, 1921; the provisions of the Revenue Act of 1921 do not apply to services or facilities furnished prior to midnight of December 31, 1921, but do apply to such services or facilities furnished subsequent to midnight of December 31, 1921. The time of the payment of the charge is immaterial.

BASIS, RATE, AND COMPUTATION OF TAX.

5519 Art. 6. Basis, rate, and computation of tax.—The basis for the computation of the tax is the amount of the charge for the transmission of the message. (As to the meaning of transmission, see art. 1.) The term "the charge" means the amount charged by the carrier for the transmission of the particular message. Such charge may be due in money, services, or in any other valuable consideration.

WAR TAX 1106 SERVICE

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5520 Only two amounts of tax are provided, 5 cents and 10 cents, imposed as follows:

5521 (1) 5 cents on messages the charge for the transmission of which is more than 14 cents and not more than 50 cents.

5522 (2) 10 cents on messages the charge for the transmission of which is more than 50 cents.

5523 Art. 7. Franks.—If the message is in fact transmitted free, no tax applies; but if the carrier in fact makes a charge, in money, services, or any other consideration, for the transmission of the message, the tax applies and is to be computed upon the amount of the charge imposed.

5524 Art. 8. Overtime telephone messages.—The tax on overtime telephone messages is to be computed upon the total charge for the transmission of the message. The amount of the initial rate for such messages is immaterial.

5525 Art. 9. Messages transmitted under contract.—Where, by contract, a telegraph, telephone, radio, or cable company agrees, in consideration of the payment of a lump sum or of the performance of services, to transmit messages on frank, such messages are subject to the tax imposed by this section (500 (a)) of the act. The tax on each such message is to be computed upon the amount of the regular established charge for the transmission of similar messages for ordinary customers, calculated at the regular fixed rate provided in the tariffs of the transmitting carrier. The questions as to whether such messages relate to the operation of the business of a common carrier and whether they are "on line" or "off line" are immaterial. Thus, a telegraph company agrees to transmit over its lines on a railroad line all messages relating to railroad business "free" and all such messages over its lines off the railroad lines "free" to an amount not exceeding $10,000 per year calculated at its regular rates, and all messages over that amount at half rates, in consideration of services to be performed by the railroad in the transportation of men and materials of the telegraph company. All such messages, whether "on line" or "off line," and whether "free" or at half rates, are subject to the tax provided by this section (500 (a)) of the act. The tax must be computed, collected, and paid upon each such message.

EXEMPTIONS.

5526 Art. 10. Exemptions—Business of transmitting carrier.—The transmission of messages involved in the conduct of the business of the transmitting carrier, as such, is not subject to the tax.

5527 Art. 11. Exemption—Charges of 14 cents or less.—Dispatches, messages, or conversations, for the transmission of which by telegraph, telephone, radio, or cable the charge is 14 cents or less, are not subject to tax. (As to the meaning of transmission, see Art. 1; as to the computation of the tax, see Arts. 6-9.)

5528 Art. 12. Exemption—Services rendered to the United States or to 5503 any State or Territory or to the District of Columbia.—Telephone, telegraph, cable, and radio dispatches, messages, and conversations relating to Government business, which originate in the United States and which are a charge against the Treasurer of the United States, the District of Columbia, a State, or Territory, and are paid from the funds thereof, are exempt from the tax. Messages, conversations, and dispatches which are not paid from such funds are not exempt from tax, even though they relate to Government business.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5529 Art. 13. Political subdivisions of State or Territory.—The words "State" and "Territory" as used in section 500 (c) of the act and in article 12 (above) include political subdivisions thereof, such as counties, cities, towns, and other municipalities.

5530 Art. 14. Government agencies.—Services rendered to agencies of the United States are, subject to the conditions prescribed in article 12, exempt from tax. Such agencies include the American National Red Cross, United States Shipping Board, Emergency Fleet Corporation, Federal Farm Appraisers, Federal Land Banks, Federal Reserve Banks, Panama Railroad Co., and similar agencies supported by Government funds.

5531 Art. 15. Evidence of right of exemption.—Where a message is accepted and transmitted by a carrier as a Government message and entitled as such to exemption under section 500 from the tax on charges for transmission thereof, the right to such exemption shall be evidenced in one of the following ways:

5532 (a) Payment of such charge directly to the carrier by the Government to which the services are rendered.

5533 (b) A standard form of exemption certificate for use of the Federal Government, substantially in form following:

PART II.

LEASED WIRE AND TALKING CIRCUIT SPECIAL SERVICE.

IMPOSITION OF TAX.

5539 Art. 18. Imposition of the tax—Leased wire or talking circuit 5502 special service.—The tax is imposed upon the amount paid for any leased wire or talking circuit special service.

5540 Leased wire special service.—Leased wire special service includes exclusive leases of wires and also contracts by which the carrier agrees to furnish a circuit (that is, a wire or wires, instruments and electrical energy) for the transmission of messages in Morse characters or by spoken word between specified points or offices during specified hours. Operators may or may not be employees of the carrier.

5541 For administrative purposes it is held that where the area covered by leased wire special service is served by a local telephone exchange, tolls not being charged upon messages transmitted between points within such area, such special service does not come within the provisions of the act.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5542 Talking circuit special service.—Talking circuit special service is a limited class of leased wire special service and refers to such service where the transmission is telephonic.

5543 Such a talking circuit may by contract have one terminal at a switchboard of the carrier, allowing connection with any telephone within the local exchange area of the operating station. Such additional exchange and other incidental service is included in the term "talking circuit special service."

5544 Art. 19. Private branch exchange service.—Amounts paid for private branch exchange service (called P. B. X. service) where the exchange equipment is located on the premises of the lessee and is used for intercommunication between departments of the business or parts of the premises of the lessee, are not subject to tax. Any amount paid for special service at the central exchange in the handling of calls from such a private branch exchange is included in the term "private branch exchange service."

5545 Art. 20. Tie lines.—The term "tie line" is used to denote a line connecting two private branch exchanges. The amount paid for rental of a tie line connecting two or more private branch exchanges located within an area served by a local telephone exchange without charging tolls, is to be considered part of the amount paid for private branch exchange service and is not subject to tax. But a tie line connecting two or more private branch exchanges not within the same local telephone exchange area, tolls being ordinarily imposed upon the transmission of messages between the points of location of the private branch exchanges, is a leased wire and the amount paid for the rental thereof is subject to the provisions of this section of the act.

5546 Art. 21. Private lines and extension lines are subject to the same distinction and same rules as tie lines.

5547 Art. 22. Intercommunication and interior systems are subject to the same provisions as private branch exchanges.

5548 Art. 23. Long-distance terminals.—Amounts paid for a long-distance terminal, consisting of a special terminal loop from a local toll position or a long line switchboard to the subscriber's premises, and used only for long-distance calls at the regular toll, are not subject to the tax imposed by this section of the act. Messages transmitted over such wires are subject to the "message tax" provided for in section 500 (a).

BASIS, RATE, AND COMPUTATION OF TAX.

5549 Art. 24. Basis, rate, and computation of the tax.—The tax imposed is to be computed at 10 per cent of the amount paid for the services specified.

5550 The amount paid includes the contract consideration and all additional charges therein provided, including salaries of operators if in the employ of the carrier, charges for equipment, instruments, and other apparatus, drops intermediate to the terminals, branch or "leg" lines, exchange service, and overtime service. It also includes charges for incidental additional service, including charges for "service connection," "termination," and "moves" when such are involved in the special service contracted for; such charges not involved in such special service are not subject to the tax.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5551 In the payment of any tax under this section a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to one cent. (Sec. 1306 [18019] of the act.)

5552 Art. 25. Computation of tax—Effective date.—The tax provided in section 500 (b) applies where (a) the amount paid for such service is paid after January 1, 1922, and (b) the service is furnished after January 1, 1922. Therefore, where leased-wire special service was furnished on or after January 1, 1922, but the consideration therefor had been paid prior to that date, the tax imposed by section 500 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1921 does not apply, but the tax imposed by section 500 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1918 would apply if such consideration were paid subsequent to April 1, 1919. Where such service was furnished prior to or on April 1, 1919, the tax imposed by section 500 (g) of the Revenue Act of 1918 or by section 500 (b) of the Revenue Act of 1921 does not apply, regardless of the date of the payment of the charges therefor.

5553 Art. 26. Computation of tax—Service performed between a point within and a point without the United States.—When leased wire or talking circuit special service is furnished between a point or points within the United States and a point or points without the United States and there is in the contract no reasonable established division of charges as domestic and foreign, the tax shall be paid and collected upon the amounts paid for incidental services or facilities furnished within the United States plus that proportion of the general contract consideration as the wire mileage within the United States bears to the total wire mileage contracted for. Where there is a reasonable division of charges as domestic and foreign provided in the contract, the tax shall be paid and collected upon the amounts specified as payments for services or facilities rendered within the United States.

EXEMPTIONS.

5554 Art. 27. Exemptions—Services to United States, the States, the District of Columbia, and to Foreign Diplomats.—The exemptions of services rendered the United States, a State or Territory and the District of Columbia, and foreign diplomats described in Articles 12 to 17 above, apply also to this section of the act.

5555 Art. 28. Exemptions—Public press.—The tax does not apply to the amount paid for so much of such special service as is utilized in the collection and dissemination of news through the public press. "Public press" is not restricted to newspapers or to any particular portion of the product of printing presses. Magazines, periodicals, trade and scientific publications, published for the information of the public, are included. Organizations such as the Associated Press and the United Press are also included.

5556 "News" is a word to be liberally construed. Accounts of current events, public announcements, information relating to finance, science, commerce, religion, civic, or other public organizations are held to be news.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5557 The exemption does not apply to the publisher or to the publication as such. The exemption applies only to the amount paid for so much of such service as is utilized in the collection and dissemination of news in the public press. If, however, a contract between a person or company engaged in the collection and dissemination of news through the public press and a carrier provides for leased wire or talking circuit special service to be utilized exclusively in the business mentioned, the carrier is not required to collect the tax upon the amounts paid under such contract in the absence of actual knowledge on the part of the carrier that the service is being used for other purposes. The exemption has no application to the transmission of messages.

5558 Art. 29.<sup>7</sup> Exemption—Services utilized in the conduct of business of common carrier or telegraph or telephone company.—The tax does not apply to the amount paid for so much of such special service as is utilized in the conduct, by a common carrier or telegraph or telephone company, of its business as such.

5559 A common carrier is one who undertakes, for hire or reward, to transport the goods or person of such as choose to employ him from place to place.

5560 The exemption does not apply to common carriers, telegraph and telephone companies, as such. It applies only to the amount paid for so much of such service (leased wire or talking circuit) as is utilized in the conduct by a common carrier, telegraph or telephone company, of its business as such.

5561 Where, however, a contract between a common carrier (or telegraph or telephone company) and a telegraph, telephone, radio, or cable company provides for leased wire or talking circuit special service to be utilized exclusively in the conduct of the business of the common carrier (or telegraph or telephone company) as such, the telegraph, telephone, cable, or radio company is not required to collect the tax upon the amounts paid under such contract in the absence of actual knowledge on the part of the company that the service is being used for other purposes.

5562 The exemption does not apply to contracts which provide merely for the transmission of messages. Thus, where a telegraph or telephone company agrees by contract with a railroad to transmit, on frank or otherwise, the messages of such railroad, its officials, or employees, in a certain manner or upon certain terms, such a contract is a contract providing for the transmission of messages, and each such message is subject to the "message" tax. (See Art. 9 above.) No exemption exists by reason of such contract. The exemption applies only to leased wire or talking circuit special service utilized by a common carrier in the conduct of its business as such. Thus where a telegraph or telephone company agrees by contract to set apart a certain wire or wires for the use of a railroad in the conduct of its business as such, the amounts paid for such service are not subject to tax. A proviso in such a contract to the effect that when such wire or wires are not being used by the railroad they may be used by telegraph or telephone company for the transmission of commercial messages will not change the character of the contract.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

PART III.

PAYMENT, COLLECTION, RETURN, AND REMITTANCE OF TAXES.

5563 Art. 30. Payment of taxes.—Taxes imposed by section 500 (a) and 5505 (b) shall be paid by the person from whom the carrier collects the 5506 charges for the services or facilities rendered.

5564 Art. 31. Collection of taxes.—All such taxes shall be paid to and collected by the officers, agents, or other employees of the carrier to which the charges for the services or facilities are due.

5565 Art. 32. Credit.—Where credit is extended by a carrier to a sender or addressee for the payment of charges for the transmission of a message, or to the lessee of special service for the payment of charges for such service, and such charges are not paid, the tax nevertheless applies and the carrier is liable for the collection thereof.

5566 Art. 33. Records.—Records and accounts of telegraph, telephone, radio, and cable companies showing records of (1) all dispatches, messages, or conversations originating on the lines of such company, the charge for the transmission of which is over 14 cents, whether taxable or not, (2) leased wire and talking circuit special services rendered by the company, and (3) evidences of the right of exemption of dispatches, messages, conversations, and special service upon which tax is not collected, such records to contain sufficient information to determine the taxability of the message or service and the amount of tax, if any, upon same, shall at all times be open to the inspection of officers of the Treasury Department.

5567 Art. 34. Returns—Contents.—The returns of a telephone, telegraph, radio, or cable company shall be rendered on Form 727 (Revised) [page 1103] and shall include (a) all taxable dispatches, messages, or conversations originated by it or on its lines and (b) such leased wire or talking circuit special services, as are recorded and accounted for by the reporting company and reflected in its billing records for the month, following its usual business routine.

5568 Taxable messages which originate at the stations of rural or farmers' line associations and which are recorded and billed by the telephone company operating the exchange to which such stations are connected for service should be included in the return of said operating company. Taxable messages, if they originate at the station of such rural or farmers' line associations and are not recorded or billed by the operating company, should be reported by such association.

3569 Art. 35. Returns—When and where rendered.—Returns must be made for each calendar month. Such returns must be made under oath, in duplicate, and must be filed with the collector of the district in which the principal office or place of business of the company is located on or before the last day of the calendar month following the month for which return is made. Where a return covers a tax of $10 or less it may be signed and acknowledged before two witnesses, instead of under oath.

TELEGRAPH AND TELEPHONE REGULATIONS.

5570 Art. 36. Extension of time.—Where it is found impossible to make the proper return within the prescribed time, request may be filed with the collector for an extension of time, and upon a proper showing the collector is authorized to fix a definite time in each instance within which the return may be filed, such extension of time not to exceed 60 days.

5571 Art. 37. Remittance of taxes collected.—The tax is due and payable by the person collecting the tax to the collector of internal revenue at the time fixed for filing the return.

CREDITS AND REFUNDS.

Law ¶8018, ¶8023.

5572 Art. 38. Credit for overpayment.—Any individual, corporation, partnership, or association that has paid to the collector of internal revenue, as a tax under section 500 of the act, any amount erroneously or illegally assessed or collected or any amount in excess of the amount of the tax actually imposed by that section for the month covered by that payment, may claim credit for such overpayment against the amount of the tax imposed by that section which is due upon any other monthly return thereafter made in the same behalf on Form 727 (Revised). Such credit will only be granted, however, if, in making the claim, the instructions printed on the back of that form are carefully followed.

5573 Art. 39. Refund of overpayment.—Any individual, corporation, partnership, or association that has paid to the collector of internal revenue, as a tax under section 500 of the act, any amount erroneously or illegally assessed, or any amount in excess of the amount of the tax actually imposed by that section for the month covered by that payment, or any amount as a penalty for the collection of which there was no authority, may secure a refund of the amount so overpaid by filing with the collector to whom such payment was made a properly prepared claim on Form 46 (revised) [Form 843].

5574 Art. 40. Refund of overcollection.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association that has collected from any person, as a tax under section 500 of the act, any amount in excess of the amount of the tax imposed by that section actually due from such person, shall upon proper application promptly refund such amount to the person entitled thereto, even though such amount has already been paid over to the collector of internal revenue and no corresponding credit (see art. 38) or refund (see art. 39) has yet been secured. Any person making a refund of any payment upon which tax is collected under this section may repay therewith the amount of the tax collected on such payment.

PENALTIES.

5575 Art. 41. Penalties.—(1) Section 502 (d) of the act specifically provides that the taxes under section 500 shall (without assessment by the Commissioner or notice from the collector) be due at the time fixed for filing this return, and if the tax is not paid at such time there shall be added as part of the tax a penalty of 5 per cent, together with interest at the rate of 1 per cent for each full month from the time when the tax becomes due.

  - (c) Life members. Tax equivalent to that of active resident annual member to be paid at the time of payment of dues by such resident members.
  - 3. EXEMPTIONS.—(a) Dues or fees paid to fraternal societies operating under the lodge system.
  - (b) Admissions, all the proceeds of which inure (a) exclusively to the benefit of religious, educational, or charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, any post of the American Legion or the woman's auxiliary units thereof, societies for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, or societies or organizations conducted for the sole purpose of maintaining symphony orchestras and receiving substantial support from voluntary contributions, or of improving any city, town, village, or other municipality, or of maintaining a cooperative or community center moving picture theater—if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual; or (b) exclusively to the benefit of persons in the military or naval forces of the United States; or (c) exclusively to the benefit of persons who have served in such forces and are in need; or (2) any admissions to agricultural fairs if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any stockholders or members of the association conducting the same, or admissions to any exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature conducted by such association as part of any such fair, if the proceeds therefrom are used exclusively for the improvement, maintenance, and operation of such agricultural fairs. Claim, however, must be made for exemption on Form 759.

- 4. WHO MUST MAKE RETURN, COLLECT, AND PAY TAX.—Any person or organization receiving payment for admissions or dues or being a club and having taxable life members must collect the tax from the person paying admission, dues or fees, except in 1 (b) and 1 (c) above, when vendor must pay tax on the excess charge.
- 5. COMPUTATION OF TAX.—Tax on admissions is imposed on each payment, or upon each single admission. In the case of admissions by season ticket or subscription, the tax applies to the amount paid for each season ticket or subscription.
- 6. RETURNS AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—(a) Admissions. Return with remittance covering taxes on admissions collected in any month must be in the hands of the Collector of Internal Revenue (or his authorized representative) of the district in which is located the place or business of the person making such return and payment on or before the last day of the month following that for which it is made. See Art. 41, Reg. 43, Part 1 (Revised), and footnote.
- (b) Dues. Return with remittance covering taxes on dues collected in any month must be in the hands of the Collector of Internal Revenue (or his authorized representative) of the district in which is located the principal office or place of business of the person making such return and payment on or before the last day of the month following that for which it is made.
- 7. CREDITS.—In case of overpayment of tax due to an error in calculation, credit may be taken therefor upon any subsequent monthly return. Credit may also be taken as outlined in the regulations. A complete and detailed record of such overpayment must be kept by the person taking credit therefor. In case credit is taken on this return for an overpayment made on a previous return, full information must be attached showing the reasons therefor and designating the kind of tax, and the month for which the previous return was filed and the date of payment.
- 8. RECORDS.—Every person or organization required to make a return must keep such records as will show all payments, admissions, or members upon which tax is required to be collected, in order that returns may be easily verified by revenue officers.
- 9. ADMISSION TICKETS.—The price of the ticket shall be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped, or written on the face or back of that part of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement, together with the name of the vendor, if sold other than at the ticket office of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement. Penalty of not more than $100 for violation of the clause.
- 10. PENALTIES.—Failure to file on time, 25 per cent of tax. Failure to pay on time, 5 per cent of tax and 1 per cent interest a month. Severe penalties for failure to file returns or for false or fraudulent returns.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

REGULATIONS NO. 43 (REVISED)

PART 2

(As amended to January 1, 1923.)

Relating to the

TAX ON DUES

(Promulgated January 11, 1922.—Also designated as T. D. 3276.)

6513 Article 1. Payments within time scope of the Act.—The tax imposed under section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1921 applies only to amounts paid on or after January 1, 1922, "for any period after such date," as dues or membership fees, or as initiation fees, to any social, athletic, or sporting club or organization, provided such dues or fees are in excess of the amounts therein specified.

6514 However, a tax at the same rate and on identically the same basis was imposed under section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1918. This tax became effective April 1, 1919, and dues or fees paid after January 1, 1922, for a period prior to that date and while the 1918 Act was in force are taxable thereunder. Dues and fees paid prior to January 1, 1922, but for a period after that date, are likewise taxable under the 1918 Act.

6515 Art. 2. Rate and basis of tax.—The rate of the tax imposed by the Revenue Act of 1921 is 10 per cent of any amount paid as dues or membership fees or as initiation fees to clubs or organizations coming within its provisions. It applies to any amount paid (a) as dues or membership fees where the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year; or (b) as initiation fees, if such fees amount to more than $10, or if the dues or membership fees (not including initiation fees) of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year. Amounts paid for life memberships are not subject to the tax, but life members shall pay annually, at the time for the payment of dues by active resident annual members, a tax equivalent to the tax upon the amount paid by such a member. (See art. 11.)

6516 If the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year, the tax applies to the entire amount paid either as dues or membership fees or as initiation fees. The fact that the tax does not attach to dues or membership fees, where the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member are not in excess of $10 per year, does not imply that exemption to the extent of $10 applies where the dues or membership fees exceed this amount. In other words, no deduction is authorized in computing the tax due if the dues or membership fees are taxable under the Act.

6517 Likewise, if the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year, amounts paid by other classes of members are taxable even though the dues or membership fees of such members are less than $10 per year. (See art. 9.)

6518 Art. 3. Clubs and organizations included.—Dues or membership fees, or initiation fees, paid to any social, athletic, or sporting club or organization, excepting fraternal societies, orders, or associations, operating under the lodge system (see art. 7), if in excess of the amounts specified by the Act, are subject in toto to the tax imposed by section 801. The Act includes not only "clubs" but also "organizations" of a social, athletic, or sporting character.

6519 Art. 4. Determination of character of club.—The purposes and activities of a club and not its name determine its character for the purpose of the Tax on Dues. Every club or organization having social, athletic, or sporting features is presumed to be included within the meaning of the phrase, "any social, athletic, or sporting club or organization," until the contrary has been proved, and the burden of proof is upon it. Every such club or organization, therefore, unless it falls within the express exemption of the Act (see art. 7, below), must collect, return, and pay over the tax imposed by the Act, unless and until it has satisfied the Commissioner of Internal Revenue that it is not in fact "social, athletic, or sporting" within the meaning of the Act as defined in these regulations. (See arts. 5 and 6, below.) If any such club or organization desires to claim that it is not in fact "social, athletic, or sporting" it shall submit to the collector its charter or constitution and by-laws, together with a statement as to its actual purposes, activities, practices, and facilities, the character of its expenditures, and such other evidence as may be requested. Upon consideration of the evidence submitted the collector will determine whether or not such club or organization is included within the provisions of the Act. If, however, the collector is in doubt as to whether or not the club or organization is "social, athletic, or sporting," he will refer the statement and accompanying papers to the Commissioner for decision. When a club or organization has been held not to be a "social, athletic, or sporting" club or organization, it need not thereafter make a return of tax on dues or fees, or any further showing with respect to its status under the law, unless it changes the character of its organization or operations or the purpose for which it was originally created. Collectors will keep a list of all clubs or organizations held not to be "social, athletic, or sporting" clubs or organizations, to the end that they may occasionally inquire into their status and ascertain whether or not they are observing the conditions upon which their exemption is predicated. If the collector decides that the club or organization is included within the provisions of the Act and the club or organization is not satisfied with his decision, it may request that the matter be referred to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue at Washington for a ruling, and this will be done. If the collector or the Commissioner decides that the club or organization is not included within the provisions of the Act, then on the filing with the collector to whom the tax has been paid of a properly prepared claim (see art. 15 below) on Form 46 (Revised), the amount of tax already paid to the collector will be refunded to the club or organization for repayment by it to the original taxpayers.

WAR TAX 1308 SERVICE

The tax does not attach to dues or fees of a religious organization, singing society, chamber of commerce, commercial club, trade organization, or the like, merely because it has incidental social features, but, if the social features are a material purpose of the organization, then it is a "social * * * club or organization" within the meaning of the Act. An organization that has for its exclusive or predominant purpose religion or philanthropic social service (or the advancement of the business or commercial interest of a city or community) is so clearly not a "social * * * club or organization" that its possession and use of a building furnished with social-club facilities does not render taxable dues or fees paid to it. Most fraternal organizations are in effect social clubs, but if they are operating under the lodge system payments to them are expressly exempt. (See art. 7, below.)

6523 (3) An automobile dealers' association is organized and operated for the purpose of maintaining a social organization of persons residing in a certain city and engaged in the manufacture or sale, or both, of automobiles and their accessories, and for the further purpose of affording its members opportunity and inducement to enjoy healthful indoor games, and to acquire skill and efficiency therein, and promote social welfare and social intercourse between the members, thereby promoting their mental and bodily health, and further by debates and discussions between themselves at their meetings promote interest in automobile transportation, traffic, and knowledge of the industry in the city, and also to enable its members to cooperate in holding an annual automobile show and in securing judicious and needed legislation for the protection and advancement of the automobile industry in the city. This organization is a social club within the meaning of section 801.

6524 Art. 6. Athletic or sporting clubs.—Tennis, golf, boxing, boating, canoe, fishing, and hunting clubs, and any organization (of which the members are individuals) for the practice or promotion of athletics or sports, are included within the meaning of the words of the Act, "athletic, or sporting club or organization." A local, sectional, or national "athletic or sporting" association, the membership of which is composed wholly or partly of member clubs, is not within the scope of the Act. The possession and use of a gymnasium, swimming pool, or other athletic facilities by an organization having religion or philanthropic social service for its exclusive or predominant purpose does not bring the organization within the class of athletic or sporting clubs or organizations.

6525 Examples.—(1) An intercollegiate athletic association, whose membership is composed not of individuals but of the track teams of a group of colleges, is not within the scope of the Act, and dues and fees paid to it by the member teams are not taxable.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6526 (2) Dues and fees paid for membership in a Young Men's Christian Association or Young Men's Hebrew Association are not taxable, although they entitle the member to the use of a gymnasium, swimming pool, or other athletic facilities.

6527 Art. 7. Exempt organizations.—The Revenue Act of 1921 expressly 6510 exempts from tax "all amounts paid as dues or fees to a fraternal society, order, or association, operating under the lodge system." "Operating under the lodge system" means carrying on its activities under a form of organization that comprises local branches, chartered by a parent organization and largely self-governing, called "lodges," "chapters," or the like.

6528 Examples.—(1) An organization, formed for purely social purposes by Masons of the higher degrees, consisting of local "lodges" and a "grand lodge," falls within the exemption.

6529 (2) Dues and fees paid to a "chapter" of a college fraternity are exempt from tax.

6530 (3) Dues and fees paid to a "local" of a labor union are free from tax.

6531 (4) A national organization, of a social, athletic, or sporting character, comprising no local bodies but organized as a single and nation-wide unit, to which each member belongs directly, does not fall within the exemption.

6532 (5) Dues and fees paid by members of a local organization among the students of a college which is similar to chapters of the larger college fraternities are not exempt from tax.

6533 Art. 8. Foreign clubs.—Dues or fees paid to a club located outside of the United States and having no branch or organization in the United States are not taxable.

6534 Art. 9. Dues or membership fees.—The Revenue Act of 1921 imposes a tax of 10 per cent on any amount paid as dues or membership fees (including recurrent assessments, assessments for running expenses, and penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) to any club which is within the terms of the Act: Provided, That the regular dues or membership fees (including recurrent assessments, and assessments for running expenses, levied upon all active resident annual members but not including penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) of an "active resident annual member" of such club are in excess of $10 per year. "An active resident annual member" is a member who is neither a life nor a nonresident member, but who in other respects enjoys full club privileges, as distinguished from the restricted privileges enjoyed by a person holding an associate or other partial membership. (This paragraph is as amended by T. D. 3285, Feb. 11, 1922.)

6535 Thus in the case of a club or organization the regular dues or membership fees of which are less than $10 per year, but which levies an assessment on its active resident annual members each year, if the regular dues or membership fees, plus the assessment, exceed $10 per year, the tax is applicable. The tax would likewise apply in the case of a club or organization which collects no regular dues or membership fees but meets its expenses by levying assessments on its members as funds are required, provided, of course, the assessments aggregate more than $10 per year for members who enjoy the full privileges of the club or organization.

6536 Where the dues or membership fees, determined in the manner herein outlined, of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year, dues or membership fees paid by other classes of members,

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

whether or not they are in excess of $10 per year, are subject to the tax. So, also are extra charges which are imposed upon members for the privilege of using certain additional facilities for a period of time, as, for example, an additional charge of $60 per annum imposed upon members of a country club for the privilege of using the golf links. A "greens fee" charged to a guest is not taxable, unless the right or privilege granted in return is for a period of time, such as a season. A fine imposed for the violation of rules promulgated by a club or organization would be neither dues nor membership fees within the meaning of the Act, and therefore not taxable.

6537 As to the time for payment of the tax, see article 12.

6540 (3) The same athletic club levies in a certain year, in addition to its regular dues, an assessment of $10 on every associate member and provides a penalty of $1 if it be not paid within a month after due. This assessment is taxable, and so is the penalty if it be imposed.

6541 (4) A member of this same athletic club violates the house rules and is suspended until he pays a fine of $15. As a fine is neither dues nor membership fees, this $15 payment is not taxable.

6542 (5) A certain golf club's dues are $15 per year. Of this amount $10 is expended in the purchase for the member of a season ticket to a municipal golf course. The whole $15 is, nevertheless, taxable as dues.

6543 (6) A certain golf club charges a "green" fee of $1 for each guest that uses the course. Such a fee is not paid "as dues or membership fees," and is, therefore, not taxable as such.

6544 (7) The members of a certain curling club pay annual dues of $20. By the payment of $10 extra per year the privilege of skating on the club's rink can be secured for the member's family. A payment of this extra $10 is taxable as a membership fee.

6545 (8) A certain social club, the regular dues of which are $15 per year, has honorary members who pay no dues, but pay assessments when levied. Such members must pay tax on the amounts paid for assessments.

6546 (9) A tennis club in which the annual dues are $10, levies an assessment of $2 per year on each member to cover cost of tennis balls. The dues, fees, and assessments paid by members of this club are taxable.

6547 (10) A certain club, the dues and fees of which are taxable, requests a "subscription" of a definite amount from each resident member. Amounts paid by reason of such request are taxable.

6548 (11) A social club, the annual dues in which are $10, levies an assessment of $5 on members. The tax applies with respect to amounts paid as dues, fees, and assessments.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6549 (12) A certain social club, the dues and fees of which are taxable, passes a resolution providing that no membership dues or fees shall be collected from members who are in the military service of the United States. Such members thereafter pay no dues or fees and are therefore not liable for payment of tax with respect to membership in the club, but this does not relieve life members who are in the military service from payment of the tax on their life memberships.

6550 (13) A certain golf club, the dues and fees of which are taxable, issues to wives of members cards entitling them to the use of the course for one year, making a charge of $10 therefor. The amounts paid for such cards are taxable.

6551 (14) The membership of a certain social club is composed of its stockholders. No dues are collected, but the expenses of the club are met by annual assessments of the necessary amount on each share of stock. If a stockholder enjoying full privileges of the club must pay assessments aggregating more than $10 per year, then the tax applies with respect to all payments made to the club by any stockholder, whether in excess of $10 per year or not.

6552 Art. 10. Initiation fees.—Any amount paid as initiation fees to a club or organization coming within the provisions of section 801 of the Act is subject to the 10 per cent tax imposed thereunder (a) if such fees amount to more than $10, or (b) if the dues or membership fees (not including initiation fees) of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year.

6553 If the prescribed initiation fees amount to more than $10, the tax attaches regardless of the amount of dues or membership fees paid by an active resident annual member. On the other hand, if the initiation fees amount to less than $10, the tax does not apply unless the dues or membership fees, exclusive of initiation fees, of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year. If such dues or membership fees are in excess of $10 per year any amount paid as initiation fees is taxable whether or not such initiation fees amount to more than $10.

6554 Where the application of the tax to initiation fees depends upon the amount paid as dues or membership fees by an active resident annual member, recurrent assessments, and assessments for running expenses (but not penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) are to be considered in ascertaining whether such dues or membership fees are in excess of $10 per year. (This paragraph is as amended by T. D. 3285, Feb. 11, 1922.)

6555 The term "initiation fee" includes any payment to the club required for becoming a member, whether evidenced by a certificate of membership or a share of stock in the club or not. Thus, it includes amounts paid to such clubs or organizations for stock where the purchase of such stock is required as a prerequisite of membership. This applies only to stock purchased from the club or organization and not to amounts paid for stock purchased from retiring members or other sources.

6556 Examples.—(1) In the case of the social club described in the first example of article 9, above, an initiation fee paid by a "member" is taxable because it amounts to more than $10, but initiation fees paid by members of the other classes are not taxable.

6557 (2) In the case of the athletic club described in the second example in article 9, above, initiation fees paid by members of any class are taxable, because the regular dues of "an active resident annual member" are in excess of $10 per year.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

or March 1, July 1, and November 1, or April 1, August 1, and December 1, depending on the date on which the voting member was admitted to membership. If any installment is not paid on or before the 15th day of the month in which it is due a penalty of $2 must also be paid. In this case each life voting member must pay (to the club, for the Government imposes on it the duty of collection) a tax of $1 on May 1 and September 1, 1922, and on January 1, 1923, etc. If any one of these taxes is not paid to the club on or before the 15th day of the month in which it is payable, the tax will be $1.20 instead of $1. If it happens that an assessment of $20, in addition to the regular dues and payable November 15, 1922, is levied on the voting members, then a tax of $2 from each life voting member must also be paid on that date to the club. If the $500 life voting membership fee was paid before November 1, 1917, or on or after April 1, 1919, it is not itself taxable, but if paid on or after November 1, 1917, and before April 1, 1919, it is subject to a tax of $50 under the Revenue Act of 1917.

6567 (4) A certain club the dues and fees of which are taxable has life members who do not avail themselves of the privileges of membership. Each of such life members must pay the tax imposed by section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1921 so long as he holds a life membership in the club.

6568 (5) A certain social club the dues and fees of which are taxable passes a resolution providing that no membership dues or fees shall be collected from members who are in the military service of the United States. Such members thereafter pay no dues or fees and are therefore not liable for payment of tax with respect to membership in the club, but this does not relieve life members who are in the military service from payment of the tax on their life memberships.

COLLECTION, RETURN, AND PAYMENT OF TAX.

6569 Art. 12. Duty to collect, return, and pay tax.—Every club, organization, corporation, partnership, or individual receiving any taxable payment for dues or fees must, at the time of such receipt, collect the tax from the person making such payment. And there rests on such person the corresponding duty of then paying such tax. Where the dues or membership fees are payable in periodical installments, the tax shall be collected as and when each installment is paid. In the case of recurrent assessments, and assessments for running expenses, the tax is due and shall be collected and paid when such assessments are paid. The tax on initiation fees is due and payable at the time of payment of such fees. (This paragraph is as amended by T. D. 3285, Feb. 11, 1922.)

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6570 Every club or organization having life members taxable under the Revenue Act of 1921 must collect from such life members the tax imposed on them by that Act. And such life members must, on their part, promptly pay such tax. It shall be collected and paid "at the time for the payment of dues by active resident annual members." Thus, if the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member, or if another designation is used, the member whose privileges correspond to those usually enjoyed by active resident annual members (see art. 9), are payable in periodical installments the tax due from life members becomes due and shall be collected and paid as and when these installments are paid. If recurrent assessments or assessments for running expenses are levied on active resident annual members, there shall be collected from life members at the time such assessments are paid a tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the amount so paid. (This paragraph is as amended by T. D. 3285, Feb. 11, 1922.)

6571 A monthly return and payment of all taxes collected must be made in accordance with the provisions of article 13, below.

6572 Art. 13. Records, returns, and payments.—Every "social, athletic, or sporting club or organization," unless expressly exempted from the Tax on Dues, or unless free from that tax because neither the initiation fees of any class of its members nor the regular dues or membership fees of an "active resident annual member" exceed $10 per year, shall keep an up-to-date record showing the number of its members of each class. It shall also keep a record in which shall be entered each day (1) under the head of "Life membership:" (a) the number of life members from whom a life membership tax has been collected on that day, and (b) the total amount of tax so collected; and (2) under the head of each other class of membership: (a) the number of members of that class paying on that day dues or membership fees or initiation fees, (b) the total amount so paid by members of that class, and (c) the total amount of tax collected on such payments. Every such club or organization shall make up each month from this daily record a return in duplicate on Form 729 (revised), in accordance with the instructions printed on the back of that form. This return must be made under oath, unless the amount of the tax returned is $10 or less, in which case it may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of being under oath. This return together with the amount of the tax must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue of the district in which is located the principal office or place of business of the person making such return and payment, on or before the last day of the month following that for which it is made. (For penalties see art. 17, below.) A copy of Form 729 (revised) [page 1305] will, as far as possible, be mailed each month to every club or organization that filed a return for the preceding month, but a failure to receive such copy will not, of course, excuse a failure to return and pay the tax. A return must be made for each month whether or not taxable dues or fees have been collected. Where a club has no tax to report during any month, this fact should be noted on the return filed for that month. The records above described shall be preserved in the office of the club or organization for a period of two years in such a manner as to be readily accessible on request to internal revenue officers.

6573 Examples: (1) A member of a club the dues and fees of which are taxable fails to pay his dues and is carried for a specified time before being expelled. Such member is not liable for payment of tax with respect to unpaid dues so long as they remain unpaid, but should the club succeed in collecting dues covering the period during which the member was delinquent it must account for the tax.

6574 (2) A member of a club the dues and fees of which are taxable refuses to pay the tax to the club. The club should report the case to the collector of internal revenue for the district in accordance with article 17 of these Regulations. There is, however, nothing in the law to prevent a club paying the tax for its members if it desires to do so.

6576 Art. 15. Refund of overpayment.—Any club, organization, corporation, partnership, or individual that has paid to the collector of internal revenue, as a tax under section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1918, or section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1921, any amount erroneously or illegally assessed, or any amount in excess of the amount of the tax actually imposed by those sections for the month covered by that payment, or any amount as a penalty for the collection of which there was no authority, may secure a refund of the amount so overpaid by filing with the collector to whom such payment was made a properly prepared claim on Form 46 (revised). When a club or organization seeks to secure a refund to it of an amount collected by it from its members and then paid over by it to the collector of internal revenue, the claim on 46 (revised) must be accompanied by a list of members who paid such amount and by a sworn statement of a club officer that no claim for a refund of any such amount has been filed with the collector or Commissioner on behalf of any such members. [Form 843 instead of Form 46.]

6577 Art. 16. Refund by club of overcollection.—Every club, organization, corporation, partnership, or individual that has collected from any person, as a tax under section 801 of either the Revenue Act of 1918, or of 1921, any amount erroneously or illegally assessed, or any amount in excess of the amount of the tax imposed by that section actually due from such person, shall upon proper application promptly refund such amount to the person entitled thereto, even though such amount has already been paid over to the collector of internal revenue and no corresponding credit (see art. 14, above) or refund (see art. 15, above) has yet been secured.

PENALTIES

Act or Default Penalized	Penalty Applicable	Section of Revenue Act of 1921
"Failure to make and file" return "within the time prescribed" (when return not filed later and reasonable cause shown for failure to file in time).	25 per cent addition to tax (to be collected as part of tax or if tax already collected then in same manner as tax).	Section 3176, U. S. Revised Statutes, as re-enacted by section 1311.
Willfully making "false or fraudulent return."	50 per cent addition to tax (to be collected as above).	Do.
Failure to pay tax when due.....	5 per cent addition to tax and 1 per cent interest for each full month from time tax due.	502 (d).
Failure by any "person"* to "pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax, make any such return or supply any such information at the time or times required by law or regulation."	Penalty of not more than $1,000.	1302 (a).
Willful refusal by any "person"* to "pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax, make such return or supply such information at the time or times required by law or regulation," or willful attempt "in any manner to evade such tax."	Fine of not more than $10,000, or Imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.	1302 (b).
Willful refusal by any "person"* to "pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax."	100 per cent addition to tax.†	1302 (c).

*"Person" includes "an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs." (Section 1302 (d) [§8017].)

†"No penalty shall be assessed under this subdivision for any offense for which a penalty may be assessed under authority of section 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended," the substance of which is stated above. (Section 1302 (c) [§8016].)

6579 Art. 17. Penalties.—The scope of the penalties applicable to the Tax 5509 on Dues is so broad that reference will be made only to their most 8014 common applications. Every club or organization, on which there 8071 rests a duty (see art. 13, above) to file a monthly return on Form 729 (revised), that fails to file such return, and to pay over the tax due thereon, during the month which follows that for which such return should be made, is subject to certain automatic penalties. A mere failure to file the return within the following month causes to automatically accrue the 25 per cent penalty imposed by section 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended. The 50 per cent penalty computed on the total tax liability accrues when the return filed is false or fraudulent. A mere failure to pay over the tax within the month following its receipt by the club or organization causes to automatically accrue, under section 502 (d) of the Revenue Act of 1921 [¶5509], a penalty of 5 per cent, and of interest at 1 per cent per month for each full month of delay. Every club member who fails to pay to his club at the proper time the amount of the tax on his dues or fees and every club or organization which fails to collect or truly account for and pay over such tax (see art. 13, above) is subject, under section 1302 of the Revenue Act of 1921. [¶8014], to a penalty of not more than $1,000. If this failure amounts to a willful refusal to pay or an attempt to evade the tax on the part of the club member, or a willful refusal to collect or truly account for and pay over such tax on the part of the club or organization, such willful refusal subjects the offender to a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, and in addition a penalty of 100 per cent of the amount of the tax (see secs. 1302 (b) and (c) of the Revenue Act of 1921). It is the duty of the club officer who has charge of the collection of dues and fees to report to the collector of internal revenue the name and address of any member who refuses to pay his tax, together with the amount of the tax and such other information as will enable the collector to cause a proper investigation to be made.

6580 Example.—A certain social club collects $1,000 of taxable dues each month, but carelessly fails to file a return for April, May, and June, 1922, until September 2, 1922. The taxes and automatically imposed penalties then due for those months would be as follows:

April tax.....	$100.00
25 per cent penalty.....	25.00
5 per cent penalty.....	5.00
3 months' interest.....	3.90
		$133.90
May tax.....	100.00
25 per cent penalty.....	25.00
5 per cent penalty.....	5.00
2 months' interest.....	2.60
		132.60
June tax.....	100.00
25 per cent penalty.....	25.00
5 per cent penalty.....	5.00
1 month's interest.....	1.30
		131.30
Total of taxes and penalties.....		$397.80

6581 In addition the club would be liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

CHAPTER ONE

Taxes on Admissions

6589 Art. 1. Basis, rate, and computation of tax.—Any amount, if in 6500 excess of 10 cents, paid for admission to any place (see Art. 2) is 6501 subject under these provisions of the Act to a tax of 1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the whole amount so paid, which tax is to be paid by the person paying for such admission. This tax applies to the payment for admission, not to the admission itself, and as soon as payment for admission is made the tax applies, whether or not the admission itself ever takes place.<sup>1</sup> And the tax applies if the payment for admission occurs in the United States, even though the admission is to take place outside the territorial limits of the United States. No refund of the tax can be allowed by reason of nonuser unless the admission charge also is refunded (see Art. 45).

6590 The tax applies to the amount paid for each admission separately, and, therefore, if two or more admissions are paid for at once, the total tax is determined by computing separately the tax on each admission and by then adding together the taxes so obtained. In other words, the tax for 10 single admissions will always be 10 times the tax for each single admission. In the case of season tickets or subscriptions which entitle the holder or subscriber to more than one admission the tax is computed on the amount paid without regard to the number of admissions involved. However, if two or more season tickets are paid for at the same time, the tax would be computed on each ticket separately, and the same rule would apply to subscriptions.

6591 Where a single charge is made to cover admission to more than one attraction under the same management the tax is computed on the basis of such charge. If separate charges are made for each attraction, the tax is computed on each such charge. For example, if a circus issues a combination ticket entitling the holder to admission and to the use of a reserved seat for $1.50 the tax due is 15 cents, whereas if separate tickets for admission and for a seat are sold for 75 cents each, the tax on each charge would be 8 cents, making a total of 16 cents.

6592 The amount paid for admission to any place is the amount which must be paid to the person controlling such admission in order to secure that privilege. If a ticket or card of admission is sold by the person controlling said admission for an amount in excess of the regular or established price or charge therefor, the tax imposed by section 800 (a), paragraph (1), will apply to the entire amount for which it is so sold. In addition the theater or other place of amusement (or broker) selling such ticket or card of admission for an amount in excess of the regular or established price therefor will be subject to a tax on the amount of the excess charge. (See Chapter Four.)

6593 Art. 2. Meaning of the term "place."—The tax under these provisions of the Act is on "the amount paid for admission to any place."
 "Place" is a word of very broad meaning, and it is not defined or otherwise limited by the Act. But the basic idea it conveys is that of a definite location.
 The phrase, therefore, "to any place" does not narrow the meaning of the word "admission," except to the extent that it implies that the admission <sup>1</sup> The Act applies generally only to the mainland of the United States, Hawaii, and Alaska.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

is to a definite location on or beneath the surface of the earth, or to a structure whose location with relation to the earth is definitely fixed, at least temporarily. The "place" need not be within the territorial jurisdiction to which the act is applicable, for as has been noted (Art. 1) the tax applies to the payment, not to the admission. Places of amusement obviously constitute the most important class of places admission to which is subject to this tax.

6594 Examples.—(1) Each of the following is a "place" within the meaning of the Act:

(a) An outdoor amusement park, and such attractions therein as a scenic railway, a merry-go-round, a roller coaster, a Ferris wheel, a toboggan slide, a bump-the-bumps, a whip, a dip-the-dips, a speed-plane, a hilarity hall, and a dance hall.

(b) An observation tower on top of a high building.

(c) A grandstand built for the purpose of viewing a parade passing in the street or a baseball game in an adjoining baseball park.

(d) A cave.

(e) A space inclosed in which are seats from which to watch the bathing along the beach.

(f) A floating theater operating along a river, anchored or moored for each performance.

6595 (2) None of the following is a "place" within the meaning of the Act:

(a) A railway car (unless rendered stationary by sidetacking or removal from track).

(b) A street car (unless rendered stationary by sidetracking or removal from track).

(c) A steamboat (unless anchored or moored).

(d) A sight-seeing automobile.

(e) A railroad train or a boat following the course of a boat race.

6596 (3) Where an admission charge is made to a dancing pavilion and an additional charge is made, in the case of each dance, for admission to the dancing floor within this pavilion, admission to the dancing floor (as well as admission to the pavilion) is admission to a "place" within the meaning of the Act.

6597 (4) A tennis tournament is a contest and not a "place" and, therefore, an amount paid by a player to "enter" such a tournament is not "paid for admission to any place" within the meaning of the Act. On the other hand, the grandstand at the tennis tournament is a "place" within the meaning of the Act.

6598 (5) Amounts paid for rides in an airplane making exhibition flights are not taxable. It is not material that the flights start and terminate in a fair ground. Amounts paid for admission to a building or other inclosure to view an airplane are, however, taxable.

6599 (6) Admissions to the amusements called "shoot-the-chutes" and "the Old Mill" are taxable. A charge for admission to small boats operated and propelled by means of a current of water confined to a narrow channel which determines the course and direction of the boats, is taxable as an admission to a place. However, an amount paid for a ride on a boat in an open lake or stream where the boat may be steered in any direction or take any course desired is not taxable.

6600 As to the application of the tax where the charge includes the rental of property or services, see Article 4.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6601 Art. 3. Meaning of "admission."—The tax is imposed on "the 6507 amount paid for admission to any place." It applies only to amounts in excess of 10 cents which must be paid in order to gain admission to a place (see Art. 1). Hence the tax will not apply to voluntary contributions where no payment is required for admission to such place nor to payments made under certain other conditions (for which see Art. 5). The term "admission" primarily means being permitted the right or privilege to enter into a place. However, the Act specifically provides that it shall also include "seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations." A charge for their use, therefore, in any place, must be treated as a taxable charge for admission, and not as a rental charge, which would escape those taxes. (See Art. 4.) So an amount paid for the right to use a reserved seat in a theater or circus, a table in a roof garden, a seat in a hotel room or window to view a parade, or the like, is taxable. This is true whether the charge made for the use of the seat, table, or similar accommodation is combined with an admission charge proper to form a single charge, or is separate and distinct from an admission charge, or is itself the sole charge.

6602 Where an original admission charge carries the right to remain in a place, or to use a seat, table, or other similar accommodation for a limited time only, and an additional charge is made for an extension of such time, the extra charge is paid for "admission" within the meaning of the Act. For instance, amounts paid for second or repeat rides on roller coasters and merry-go-rounds are paid for "admission." Other examples which will illustrate the principle stated herein follow:

6603 Examples.—(1) Where 75 cents is paid for general admission to a circus and then 50 cents is paid for a reserved seat, the latter amount, equally with the former, is "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6604 (2) Where $10 is paid to a hotel to reserve a table for celebrating New Year's eve, this amount is "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6605 (3) An amount paid for the use of a swinging beach chair at a coast resort is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act unless it is located in a space so enclosed or set apart as to constitute a place. (See Art. 2.)

6606 (4) An amount paid for the use of a rolling or movable chair to be moved at the will of the occupant, no definite limits of space being set, is not "paid for admission to any place" within the meaning of the Act. (See Art. 2.)

6607 (5) While the use of a seat must be considered an "admission" within the meaning of the Act, an amount paid for a seat in a parlor car is not an "amount paid for admission to any place," because a parlor car is not a place within the meaning of the Act. (See Art. 2.)

6608 Art. 4. Charges for rental of property or services.—The provisions of this article do not relate to charges for "seats and tables . . . and other similar accommodations," which by the express terms of the Act are taxable as admissions (see Art. 3). Reference is here made to charges which are designated as rental or service charges, but which in fact may or may not represent, in whole or in part, admissions within the provisions of the Act.

6609 These charges are of two general classes, viz: (A) where there is a single undivided charge, and (B) where there are separate and distinct charges designated for admission and for rental or services. These will be considered in the order named.

A. Where There Is a Single Undivided Charge

6610 A charge imposed on a person admitted to a place which is not in fact or name an admission charge, but is a bona fide charge for the rental of real or personal property or equipment, or for personal services, is not taxable. If a charge involving rental or service is designated as an admission charge it will be presumed that it is in fact a charge for admission. The tax will apply in such case unless it is conclusively proven that the charge, in whole or in part, is for rental or service, and the burden of proof will rest on the person asserting that it is of such a character. On the other hand, the designation of a charge as a rental or service charge will not avoid the application of the tax if it in fact represents a charge for admission. In such cases the following rules will be applied in determining the true character of the charge:

6611 (1) If the charge actually includes the right to use property or equipment or the right to services, and applies only to persons availing themselves of the use of the property, equipment, or services provided, other persons being admitted free or not admitted at all, the tax does not apply.

6612 (2) If the charge (a) does not involve rental or service, or (b) is clearly unreasonable and excessive, the tax applies.

6613 (3) If persons are admitted who are not permitted to use property or equipment or avail themselves of the services afforded others, and persons so admitted are required to pay the same charge as is imposed on persons to whom property, equipment, or services are furnished, the tax applies to amounts paid by all persons admitted.

6614 (4) If persons not permitted to use property or equipment, or to avail themselves of services, are required to pay a lesser charge than persons who are furnished property, equipment, or services, this lesser charge is taxable as an admission.

6615 In the situation outlined in the preceding paragraph, such part of the charge exacted from persons using property, equipment, or services as equals the charge imposed on persons not using such property, equipment, or services is deemed to represent an admission charge and is taxable as such.

B. Where There Are Separate and Distinct Charges

6616 In cases where there is a charge (whether called an admission charge or not) generally applicable to persons admitted to a place, and also one or more bona fide separate charges for rental or services, as the case may be, then only the amount paid for the generally applicable charge is "paid for admission" within the meaning of the act.

6617 Examples.—(1) Where a charge is made for admission to a building or inclosure in which a roller or ice skating surface is located, such charge is taxable the same as an admission to any other place of amusement regardless of whether or not persons paying the charge are also furnished with skates and admitted to the skating surface without the payment of an additional amount. Therefore, where the manager of a skating rink makes a single charge of 50 cents for admission to a building or inclosure, the skating surface, and for the use of skates, the tax to be collected in this case is 5 cents.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

The same tax would be payable on this charge if it covered admission to the building or inclosure only.

6618 The building or inclosure in which the skating surface is located and the skating surface proper are separate places within the meaning of the law. Therefore, where single charges are made for admission to the building and the skating surface, the latter charge including the rental of skates, both charges are taxable as amounts paid for admission. For example, if a charge of 25 cents is made for admission to the building or inclosure and another charge of 25 cents covering rental of skates and admission to the skating surface, the tax to be collected is 3 cents on each charge.

6619 Where bona fide separate charges are made for admission to the skating rink, skating surface, and for rental of skates, and persons using their own skates are required to pay the first two charges and no more, the tax attaches only with respect to the admission charges. For example, where 20 cents is charged for admission to the rink, 10 cents for admission to the skating surface, and 30 cents for skate rental, tax would not attach to the skate rental charge.

6620 Where no charge is made for admission to the skating rink and a single charge covers rental of skates and admission to the skating surface, tax attaches to the entire amount of this charge.

6621 Where a charge is made for admission to the skating rink and separate charges are made for rental of skates and admission to the skating surface, the admission charges only are taxable provided persons using their own skates are required to pay the admission charges and no more.

6622 Whether a charge is made to the rink or not where persons using their own skates are not required to pay as much for admission to the skating surface as the charge exacted from persons who rent skates from the rink, the charge for admission to the skating surface shall be deemed to be the amount paid by persons using their own skates. For example, where 10 cents is charged for admission to the rink (or where no charge is made for admission to the rink), 10 cents for admission to the skating surface, and 30 cents for rental of skates—but a person using his own skates is required to pay 25 cents—the established price for admission to the skating surface is 25 cents.

6623 (2) A certain golf club charges guests and other nonmembers a "green fee" of $2 for each time they play on its course. This charge is not taxable as an amount paid for admissions.

6624 (3) In a certain amusement park is a tennis court which is rented for 50 cents per hour. This charge is clearly a rental charge for the use of the court and is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6625 (4) A certain bathing establishment at a coast resort makes a "rental" charge of 50 cents, for which it furnishes a bathing suit, towel, and a dressing room. The patrons bathe in the ocean from an uninclosed beach. Here the 50 cents is clearly for rental and is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6626 (5) A 50-cent charge is made to everyone going out on a certain fishing pier. This charge covers the use of fishing tackle. No one is allowed on the pier unless he fishes and everyone must pay the full charge whether he uses his own fishing tackle or not. In this case the amount paid is clearly "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6627 (6) A certain dancing school charges admission and an additional fee, which is reasonable, for "instruction." It is only imposed on persons desiring dancing instruction. This instruction charge is evidently paid for services and so is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6628 (7) The charge for "admission" to a certain dance is only $1 per person, but each person is charged by the management a "hat-checking fee" of 50 cents. This checking charge is so clearly unreasonable that the whole amount ($1.50) must be treated as an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6629 (8) The manager of a dancing academy permits persons attending classes to dance either with instructors or with other patrons of the academy. Amounts paid by all patrons, including those attending as students, are taxable as admissions.

6630 (9) The manager of a so-called dancing academy employs a number of young ladies whom he pays a nominal sum for their services as dancing partners. Gentlemen are charged $1 for the privilege of dancing and ladies are permitted to dance free. The charges made to gentlemen under these circumstances must be regarded as amounts paid for admission within the meaning of the Act, and the manager must collect a tax of ten cents from each gentleman admitted to the dance hall.

6631 (10) Where 25 cents an hour is charged for the use of a rowboat on a pond in an amusement park, this amount is clearly paid for rental and is not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6632 (11) Where a child pays 25 cents for a "ride" around a track on a pony, the amount paid is clearly for the rental of the pony or the services of the attendant, or both, and is not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6633 (12) A certain bath establishment makes a charge of $1 for a "Turkish bath" and does not allow anyone not taking such a bath to enter the Turkish bath section of its establishment. This charge is clearly not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6634 (13) An amount paid for the use of a seat in the window of a hotel room, in order to watch a parade, would clearly be an amount paid for rental were it not that section 800 (c) of the Act expressly provides that the use of "seats and tables, reserved or otherwise, and other similar accommodations," is included in the meaning of "admission" as used in the Act. In view of this provision of the Act such an amount must be treated as "paid for admission." If the whole room were rented, however, it is clear that the amount paid for it would not be "paid for admission."

6635 (14) A certain dance hall makes no charge for "admission" but forces everyone entering to pay 25 cents for "hat check privilege." The amount paid is clearly an "amount paid for admission."

6636 (15) A sanitarium makes a charge of 50 cents for the privilege of swimming in pools filled with medicated water and does not allow anyone not using the pools to enter that part of the establishment. This charge is not an amount paid for admission within the meaning of the Act.

6637 Art. 5. Nontaxable payments.—As stated in Art. 3, the tax imposed under section 800 of the Act applies only to amounts necessarily paid in order to gain admission to a place. Under peculiar circumstances amounts may apparently be paid for admission to a place, or in connection with such admission, which are not taxable as admissions. Instances in which this situation may arise, with examples to illustrate the principle involved, follow:

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

A. Cooperative Parties

6638 Where a group or organization of persons cooperate in giving a dance or other function for its own entertainment, and the expenses are prorated amongst the members of such group or organization, the amounts paid under such an arrangement are not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act. Such payments represent each individual's share of the rental and services constituting the expense of the affair and are not taxable. The fact that a limited number of persons, outside of the group or organization, are invited to attend as free guests or that the individual share of the expense is fixed at an even figure will not make the tax apply if the affair is truly a cooperative party of the character above described. But if any guests are required or allowed to pay, or if any profit is sought or divided, then any amounts paid by the organizers or guests are paid for admission within the meaning of the Act, and are subject to tax.

6639 Examples.—(1) A men's bowling club decides to give a dance on a certain night and circulates a list to be signed by all members who care to attend. On securing the names and estimating the expenses, the share of each member is fixed at $2. (No charge, of course, is to be made to the partners brought by the members.) The dance is held without the use of tickets. The expenses proved to be less than expected, and there is a balance left on hand. This balance is refunded pro rata to those who paid $2. In this case it is plain that the amounts paid by the members are not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6640 (2) A young men's club conducts a series of monthly dances and through friends and acquaintances establishes a mailing list of persons to whom invitations are sent each month. A charge of $2 is imposed on each couple who attend, though no tickets are used. That amount is clearly an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6641 (3) A certain social club sends out to its members and certain non-members invitations and tickets to a musicale, the price of the tickets being $1.50 each. Such a ticket is necessary to secure admission to the musicale. In this case the $1.50 is clearly an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6642 (4) A group of 10 young men desire to give a dance and propose to defray the expenses by selling 100 $2 tickets. Each member agrees to sell 10 tickets or to pay the full price thereof. A payment of $2 for such a ticket is clearly an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

B. Rental of Entire Place

6643 Where a person or organization acquires the sole right to use any place or the right to dispose of all the admissions to any place for one or more occasions, the amount paid for such right is not subject to the tax on admissions. Such a transaction constitutes a rental of the entire place and of the attraction, if any, whether or not it is so designated. However, if the person or organization in turn sells admissions to the place the tax will apply to amounts paid for such admissions (see Art. 42).

6644 Examples.—(1) A local lodge, desiring to entertain the delegates to a national convention of its order, contracts with a theater to pay $1,200 for its entire seating capacity for a particular performance in the course of a long run of an attraction. This transaction is in effect a rental of the theater and the attraction for that performance and the $1,200 is not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act. As to the position occupied by the lodge with respect to admissions to the performance in question, see Art. 42.

6645 (2) A certain public dance hall, where public dances are held every night by its proprietors, is rented by them to a certain social club for a certain night for $150. The club charges its members the same fee as that charged by the proprietor of the hall on other nights. The $150 is not an "amount paid for admission," but the amount paid by each member is an "amount paid for admission," within the meaning of the Act.

C. Purchase of Property

6646 In some cases entrance to a place is granted only to such persons as have made a purchase of property of some sort, which must be exhibited to secure admission, but which is not taken from the holder on his admission. In such a case, unless the sale appears, by reason of the undesirability or lack of value of the article, to be a mere subterfuge, the amount paid for such article is not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the act.

6647 Examples.—(1) Where a person, in order to be admitted to an entertainment, is required to purchase a 25-cent "thrift stamp," which is to remain his property, the amount paid for the stamp is not an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6648 (2) A certain amusement park company makes the purchase of two 15-cent tickets a requirement of admission to its park. These tickets are kept by the purchaser and can be used by him in payment of any charges for admission to attractions within the park. Within the meaning of the Act, the amount paid for these two tickets is not "paid for admission" to the amusement park but is "paid for admission" to the particular attractions for which they are used. (Unless the amusement park company is exempt from tax there will be a tax of 2 cents on each of these tickets—see Art. 1—to be paid at the time they are paid for. This tax applies even if such a ticket is good in payment of a nontaxable rental—for example, of a row-boat—as well as for a taxable admission to an attraction, because it can not be told for which it will be used. But if the park company sells two distinct kinds of 15-cent tickets, one kind good for a taxable admission to an attraction and the other not, then the 2 cents tax will apply only on the former kind, and if the person entering the park takes two tickets of the latter kind, then he will have no tax to pay on them.)

D. Memberships

6649 An amount paid to become regularly entitled to the privileges of a club or other organization, as member or otherwise, is not an "amount paid for admission," even though one of the privileges be the right to enter a clubhouse, club grounds, gymnasium, swimming pool, or the like. But where the chief or sole privilege of a so-called membership is a right of admission to certain particular performances or to some place on a definite number of occasions (as contrasted with a more or less unlimited right to enter a clubhouse or other place as many times as desired during a year or some other period), then the amount paid for such so-called membership is an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act. A tax is levied under certain circumstances on amounts paid as initiation fees or as dues or membership fees to certain classes of clubs or organizations, and also upon life members of such clubs, by section 801 of the Act. For this tax, called the "Tax on Dues," see Part 2 of these Regulations, under separate cover.

6650 Examples.—(1) Where one of the privileges of membership in a tennis club is the right of free admission to its grounds at all times, including the days on which the annual tennis tournament is in progress, neither the dues paid by such a member nor any part thereof can possibly be considered an "amount paid for admission" to such tennis tournament within the meaning of the Act.

6651 (2) Where a so-called membership in a musical club costs $10 a year and the chief or sole privilege of membership is the right to a ticket to each of five musical entertainments, the amount paid for this so-called membership is an "amount paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6652 (3) A certain athletic club has "swimming memberships," with annual dues of $15, giving certain privileges, chief among which is the right to use the club swimming pool on any Tuesday, Thursday, or Saturday during the year. In this case neither the $15 nor any part thereof can be considered as "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

E. Contributions

6653 Since the tax applies only to amounts necessarily paid for admission, it follows that contributions or donations voluntarily made, before or after admission to a place, are not taxable.

6654 Examples.—(1) Where everyone attending an exhibition given in a public park, freely open to the public, is requested during the course of the performance to make a contribution to the expenses of the exhibition and a tag is given to each contributor, an amount so contributed is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6655 (2) Where oil paintings are exhibited without any entrance fee being charged, but at the close of the explanatory lecture a statement is made that contributions to pay the expenses of the exhibition will be cheerfully received, an amount so contributed is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act.

6656 (3) A certain baseball game is played on Sunday, in a State where amusements charging admissions are not allowed on that day, and, therefore, admission is made free to all, but, in order to make up as far as possible for the lack of admission fees, score cards are sold at an excessive price to such as will buy. An amount paid for such a score card is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act. However, if the purchase of a score card at a fixed price is obligatory on all persons admitted, then amounts paid therefor are taxable, provided the price is in excess of 10 cents.

CHAPTER TWO*Leases of Boxes or Seats

6657 Art. 6. Basis, rate, and computation of tax.—In the case of a person having the permanent use or a lease for the use of a box or a seat in any opera house or other place of amusement (see Art. 7),

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

the tax imposed by section 800 (a) (1) of the Act on "the amount paid for admission to any place" does not apply. Instead, the above provisions of the Act impose a tax on the right to the use of the box or seat equivalent to 10 per cent of the total amount that would be realized by the sale, at the established price, of the right to occupy a similar box or seat for each performance or exhibition during the period for which such box or seat is reserved for the lessee or holder. In other words, the tax is based not on the amount, if any, actually paid for the box or seat, but on the amount that would be paid, at the established price, for admission and the use of similar accommodations—not on the actual use of the box or seat, but on the most extensive possible use. Note that the rate of the tax here is 10 per cent and not "1 cent for each 10 cents or fraction thereof," as it is under section 800 (a) (1). In the case of a box, if there is no box of similar size, the tax for each performance or exhibition is to be computed by calculating on the above basis the tax payable on a single box seat in the same part of the house and multiplying that amount by the number of seats in the box. If there is no box occupying a similar position, the tax for each performance or exhibition is to be computed by calculating, on the above basis the tax payable on a single seat in the same part of the house and multiplying that amount by the number of seats in the box.

6658 Examples.—(1) The season of a certain professional baseball club runs from April 15 to October 15. The club sells six-seat boxes under contracts which entitle the holders to occupy the same on all occasions when attractions are presented on the field between those dates. There are 70 games scheduled for the season, and the price of a six-seat box for a single game (including general admission of six persons to the grandstand) is $10. In the case of the sale of a box under the above-mentioned contract, the tax to be collected from the holder at the time the contract is made is $70 (70 times 10 per cent of $10), and if extra attractions are presented on the field at any time during the period for which the box is held, additional tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the established price of a similar box must be collected on each such occasion, whether or not the box is occupied.

6659 (2) The same club sells box seats under contracts which entitle the holders to occupy the same on all occasions when attractions are presented on the field between April 15 and October 15. The price of one of these seats for a single game (not including general admission to the grandstand) is 50 cents. In the case of the sale of a seat under the above-mentioned contract the tax to be collected at the time the contract is made is $3.50 (5 cents for each of the 70 games scheduled), and if extra attractions are presented on the field at any time during the period for which the seat is held, additional tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the established price of a similar seat must be collected on each such occasion, whether or not the seat is occupied. The person who occupies the seat will, of course, be required to pay tax on the amounts paid from time to time for general admission to the grandstand, but this tax should be collected only when payments are made for general admission.

6660 (3) The same club sells grand-stand seats under contracts which entitle the holders to occupy same on all occasions when attractions are presented on the field between April 15 and October 15. The price for one of these seats for a single game is 75 cents. In the case of the sale of a seat under the above-mentioned contract the tax to be collected at the time the contract is made is $5.25 (7½ cents for each of the 70 games scheduled), and if extra attractions are presented on the field at any time during the period for which the seat is held, additional tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the established price of a similar seat must be collected, whether or not the seat is occupied.

6661 (4) The owners of a certain opera house, in leasing it to an opera company, reserve for their own use the whole parterre tier of thirty-five 6-seat boxes, paying therefore annually the sum of $70,000. These boxes are distributed among the various owners, $2,000 a year being paid for an annual lease of each. There are no similar boxes in the house, but the established price of each seat in the box in the next tier, which is less desirable, is $10 per seat. The number of performances during the season is fixed in advance at 100. Each lessee of such a box on paying the $2,000 for the season must pay a tax of at least $600 (100 times 10 per cent of 6 times $10), to be paid over in turn to the opera company and the collector of internal revenue. This minimum figure for the tax is based on the established price of the box seats which are the most nearly similar, but which are less desirable. If extra attractions are presented at any time during the period for which the box is leased additional tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the established price of a similar box must be collected on each such occasion, whether or not the box is occupied.

6662 Art. 7. Meaning of "lease."—This tax, as stated in Article 6, applies to cases where a person has the permanent use, or a lease for the use, of a box or seat in any opera house or other place of amusement. The only term here used that seems to need definition is the term "lease." The term "lease," as used in the foregoing provision of the law, means a continuous and exclusive right to use a particular box or seat for the term of the lease. The term "lease" does not include the right to use a box or seat merely on the occasion of regular performances given by a particular company, but the contract must give the holder of the box or seat the right to use the same whenever an attraction of any kind is presented in that place during the continuance of the lease. To constitute a lease of a box or seat within the meaning of these provisions of the Act a formal document of lease is not necessary.

6663 Examples.—The following are examples of leases:

(1) A person owning a theater leases it to a producing company, reserving the right to the perpetual use, without charge, of a certain box.

6664 (2) The owners of a certain opera house, in leasing it to an opera company, reserve for their own use the parterre tier of 35 boxes, paying annually $70,000. These boxes are distributed among the various owners at $2,000 for an annual lease.

6665 (3) A corporation owning a theater gives the exclusive right to the use of a particular box for a year to all stockholders owning 1,000 shares, or to a particular seat to all stockholders owning 500 shares.

6666 The following are examples of agreements which are not leases:

(4) A person arranges with a certain theater to reserve for his use a certain seat in the orchestra for every Monday night during the year. The theater is a vaudeville house which has two performances every day, the attractions running for a period of a week. Such a reservation, being for only a small proportion of the total number of performances, is not a lease within the meaning of the Act.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6667 (5) A certain grand-opera company which owns the building used by it has a regular season of 10 weeks of opera every winter, performances being given every night, including Sunday, and also on Saturday afternoons. On Sunday afternoons during the opera season concerts are given under the auspices of the company by various singers of the company. Outside of the opera season the auditorium in which the opera is held is rented by the opera company for various public meetings and theatrical attractions, etc., in order to secure additional income for the support of the opera company. A certain person reserves a box for every performance of the opera during the season, this reservation not including the Sunday concerts, nor, of course, the meetings and theatrical attractions outside of the opera season. This reservation does not constitute a "lease" within the meaning of the Act, because it does not give the holder of the box the right to use the same whenever an attraction of any kind is presented in the place. Any amounts paid for admission to this box under this reservation would, however, be taxable under section 800 (a) (1) unless exempted by the exemption provisions of the Act.

6668 (6) A certain choral society gives a series of 10 concerts every winter. The concerts are given Sunday nights in a theatre, the use of which is rented for these occasions. The society sells subscription tickets which entitle the holder to the use of a particular seat for all 10 of the concerts. Such a subscription is not a "lease" within the meaning of the Act.

CHAPTER THREE

Roof Gardens, Cabarets, or Similar Entertainments

6669 Art. 8. Basis, rate, and computation of tax.—The tax imposed under 6505 the above provisions of the act applies to amounts paid for admission to any public performance for profit at any roof garden, cabaret, or similar entertainment, to which the charge for admission is wholly, or in part, included in the price paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise. If the admission charge, either in whole or in part, is so included, 20 per centum of the total amount paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise is deemed to be paid for admission.

6670 If a fixed admission charge is imposed and it is fair and reasonable in comparison with charges made for similar performances or entertainments under different circumstances, such charge is taxable under paragraph (1) of section 800 of the Act and the tax imposed under paragraph (5) above would not apply to amounts paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise. If such admission charge is inadequate to cover the cost of the entertainment provided, 20 per cent of the charge for refreshment, service, or merchandise is taxable under paragraph (5). Where a specific, and apparently adequate, admission charge is made but the prices charged for refreshment, service, or merchandise during the entertainment are higher than at other times, the tax under paragraph (5) will apply to the amount paid for refreshment, etc., unless it is shown that the increase is due to other causes.

6671 The fact that tax is paid on the admission charge proper under paragraph (1) will not operate to reduce or abate the tax due on the price paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise. Twenty per cent of the amount paid for the latter will be deemed to represent a charge for admission notwithstanding the payment of the specific but inadequate admission charge.

6672 Charges commonly termed cover charges are not considered to be charges for admission within the provisions of paragraph (1). They represent charges for service and should be included in the total charge for refreshment, service, or merchandise.

6673 The rate of this tax is different from that imposed on admissions proper under paragraph (1). However, it is not a flat 3 per cent tax, but is at the rate of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents for each 10 cents or fraction thereof of the proportion (20 per cent) of the price paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise, which represents the charge for admission. In practice it is found more convenient to compute the tax on the basis of  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents for each 50 cents or fraction thereof of the total amount paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise in connection with public performances or entertainments at roof gardens, cabarets, etc. The process is simpler and the result is always the same.

6674 Examples.—(1) A certain person invites four of his friends to attend a cabaret. No fixed charge is made for admission. His check for refreshments for the party amounts to \$15.87. As 50 cents is contained in \$15.87 thirty-one and a fraction times, the tax in this case is 48 cents (32 times  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents).

6675 (2) A certain person reserves a table for himself and three friends at a roof-garden entertainment and pays $12 for the reservation, this being the regular price. This being a charge for admission, and apparently being adequate, there is no tax in this case under these provision of the Act, but a tax of $1.20 is imposed by section 800 (a) (1) of the Act. The reservation of each seat at such a table must be evidenced by a ticket (see Article 30) and this ticket must comply with the provisions of Article 31.

6676 (3) A certain restaurant conducts a cabaret in its main dining room every evening from 8 to 12 o'clock. In this case a person who takes dinner in that dining room and leaves the room before 8 o'clock and who therefore does not witness the cabaret at all, is not subject to any tax under these provisions of the Act.

6678 (5) A hotel, running a cabaret, requires every person entering to purchase a 50-cent food check. This check is later accepted as 50 cents in payment of the food and other refreshments consumed. A certain person purchases such a check for 50 cents and spends an evening at the cabaret. His bill at the end of the evening comes to \$8.33, and he pays it by handing in the check and paying \$7.83 in cash. The 50 cents so paid for this check is not "paid for admission" within the meaning of the Act. The tax in this case is based on the \$8.33 spent, and is 26 cents (17 times  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents).

6679 (6) A certain man goes to a cabaret where there is a general admission charge of 25 cents. The entertainment provided is very elaborate, and this is reflected in the price of the food. His bill for food comes to $12.37. In this case there is an admission tax of 3 cents, due under Article

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

1, on the 25 cents paid on admission. But as this amount is clearly inadequate there is also a tax of 38 cents (25 times  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents), based on the amount paid for food.

6680 Art. 9. Entertainments included.—"Any public performance for profit at any roof garden, cabaret, or other similar entertainment" includes every public vaudeville or other performance or diversion in the way of acting, singing, declamation, or dancing, either with or without instrumental or other music, conducted for the profit of the management by professionals, amateurs, or patrons under the auspices of the management, in connection with the service of selling of food or other refreshment or merchandise at any room in any hotel, restaurant, hall, or other public place. Every form of entertainment so conducted is included, except instrumental music unaccompanied by any other form of entertainment.

6681 Examples.—(1) A proprietor of a dancing establishment provides for the serving of refreshments to his patrons. No charge is made for "admission" or for dancing. In this case the management is conducting an entertainment the admission charge to which is wholly included in the price paid for refreshments, and there will be a tax under these provisions of the Act.

6683 (3) A certain other hotel maintains in its lobby a dancing floor surrounded by tables and serves refreshments to its patrons during the dancing hours. No charge is made for dancing. This is a case of a public performance for profit where the amount paid for admission is wholly included in the amount paid for refreshment and there will be a tax, therefore, under these provisions of the Act.

6684 (4) A certain other hotel conducts in a room adjoining its dining room, during tea time and in the evening, an entertainment in the form of dancing for its patrons. No charge is made to those desiring to dance. This case, as the one mentioned in the preceding example, is a case where the amount paid for admission to a public performance for profit is wholly included in the amount paid for refreshment, and there will, therefore, be a tax under these provisions of the Act.

6685 (5) A certain college alumni association gives a dinner to its members and invited guests, at a fixed charge per plate, at a certain hotel. Entertainers supplied by the hotel perform, and the diners themselves dance in an open space provided in the room. In this case, as the dinner is private, there is no tax, whether the cost of the cabaret performance is included in the charges per plate or is paid for in a lump sum by the alumni association.

6686 (6) A certain chamber of commerce gives a dinner, in honor of a distinguished man, at \$5 a plate. Tickets are sold to anybody desiring to attend. Entertainment is furnished by performers supplied by the hotel where the dinner is served. In this case, as the entertainment is supplied by the hotel, it is clearly for profit, and as the affair is also public there is a tax under these provisions of the Act. This tax applies to each individual payment made for a dinner ticket and is 15 cents (10 times  $1\frac{1}{2}$  cents) in each case.

6637 (7) A certain social club gives a dance at a hotel, charging $2 a ticket to both men and women. During an intermission in the dancing a light buffet supper is served. In this case the $2 is clearly paid for admission, and there is a tax of 20 cents under section 800 (a) (1) of the Act (see Art. 1).

CHAPTER FOUR

Taxes on Charges in Excess of Established Price

6638 Art. 10. Scope and basis of taxes.—While two distinct taxes are imposed under the provisions of the Act quoted above—one on excess charges for tickets or cards of admission sold at places other than the ticket offices of the theaters, operas, or other places of amusement for which they are valid for admission, and the other on excess charges imposed by the proprietors, managers, or employees of such places—they are on a common basis and the scope of each is the same. Hence there are certain rules generally applicable to both. These will be found in this and in the succeeding article.

6639 The tax on excess charges, whether imposed at the box office or by brokers, is of more limited application than the tax on admissions proper. The former attaches only to excess charges on tickets or cards of admission valid for admission to theaters, operas, or other places of amusement, whereas the tax on admissions attaches to amounts paid for admission to any place (see Art. 1). Thus, there are many cases where an admission tax is due which do not come within the scope of the excess-charge taxes. On the other hand, all cases to which the excess-charge taxes apply do not necessarily fall within the scope of Section (a) (1). As shown in Article 1, the full amount, including excess charges, paid for admission to the theater or person controlling the same is subject to the latter tax, which must be paid by the person paying for admission. However, excess charges paid to brokers or persons who do not control such admission are not regarded as payments for admission to any place and are not therefore subject to such tax. The taxes on charges in excess of the regular or established price (see Art. 11), whether the ticket or card of admission is sold at the box office or elsewhere, are to be paid by the person selling such ticket or card of admission. These taxes are therefore distinct from and in addition to the admissions' tax.

6690 Art. 11. Regular or established price defined.—By the "regular or established price" of admission is meant the full-rate price fixed by the person controlling such price at the beginning of the first sale or distribution of tickets or cards valid on that occasion as the price to be charged for that particular class of admissions. The person in control has, of course, the power to fix the price to be actually charged for admission. He has, therefore, the power to determine the established or regular price. But as an established price is a matter of substance, not of name, the mere fact that he calls a price an "established price" does not make it such. Nor are the prices he charges for particular admissions necessarily the established or regular prices of such admissions. If he arbitrarily sets different prices on admissions, under similar circumstances, to accommodations in all substantial respects similar, these different prices will not be the established or regular prices of the respective admissions for which they are charged, but the lowest price among them will be the established or regular price of all such admissions. The established or regular price of admission can, of course, be uniform or can vary in accordance with the accommodations to which admission is granted, increasing from the price of a mere general admission through the various grades of accommodations to the best accommodations. Any scale of prices, adopted in good faith, in which the prices increase regularly with the increase of accommodation, will be considered to show the true established or regular prices of admission to such respective accommodations; but the variation of prices must be regular and based on a real difference of accommodation and not merely arbitrary. The established price of an admission need not be the same for different attractions or even for different performances of the same attraction; but when tickets have once been put on sale for a particular performance or attraction the price of admission for every accommodation at that performance or attraction has been established. Established prices of admission once so adopted are not affected by the mere sale of admissions at prices different from the ones so established. Nor can established prices once so adopted for any occasion be increased for that occasion. If sold at a higher price the excess charge will be taxable. Prices once established or adopted may be reduced, but in such case liability to excess-charge taxes with respect to all admissions sold at the original established prices can be avoided only by complying with the following conditions:

6691 (1) Any reduction of established price must include all admissions of that particular established price and must grant an equal reduction in the case of each; (2) such reduction must not result in setting a lower price on admission to certain accommodations than is charged on that occasion under similar circumstances for admission to accommodations which are in all substantial respects similar; (3) public notice must be promptly given of the reduction and of the fact that every person having paid for admission at the former established price can secure a refund at any reasonable time of the amount he paid in excess of the new established price; and (4) such refunds must be actually made promptly on request.

6692 The foregoing provisions of this article relate to single admissions, but they also control in the case of season tickets and subscriptions. A season ticket may be defined as a contract which entitles the holder to admission at all times during a season, or at regular specified times during the entire season. It may include admission to all performances for the season or at specified nights or performances during the entire season. A subscription ticket is one which is issued to a person who subscribes a sum of money to the expense of an entertainment or who agrees to bear a portion of the expense thereof when the amount is ascertained. The established price for such ticket or subscription is the amount fixed (at the beginning of the sale of such ticket or subscription by the person controlling the price) as the price to be charged therefor.

6693 The price (exclusive of the tax imposed under paragraph (1) of section 800 (a)) at which every ticket or card of admission is sold must be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped, or written on the portion thereof which is to be taken up by the management of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement for which it is valid (see Art. 31). And if sold at a place other than the ticket office of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement the name of the vendor must also be shown (see Art. 31).

A—BOX-OFFICE SALES

6694 Art. 12. Rate and computation of tax.—Where a proprietor, manager, 6503 or employee of any opera house, theater, or other place of amusement sells or disposes of any ticket or card of admission for an amount in excess of the regular or established price or charge therefor, as outlined in Article 11, the excess portion of the price for which it is so sold or disposed is subject to the tax of 50 per cent imposed under paragraph (3) of section 800 of the Act. The rate of the tax is always 50 per cent regardless of the amount by which the selling price exceeds the regular or established price. This tax is to be paid by the person selling or disposing of the ticket, and, as shown in Article 10, is distinct from, and in addition to, the admissions tax (Art. 1), which is to be paid by the person to whom the ticket is sold.

6695 The fact that this tax is on a percentage basis makes possible a tax involving a fraction of a cent. As the tax is based on each excess charge imposed, several items of tax each involving a fractional part of a cent may be due with each monthly return. These several fractions should be preserved or included in computing the total tax due with any given return. If the total thus obtained involves a fraction of a cent equal to one-half cent or more, it shall be increased to 1 cent; otherwise it shall be disregarded.

6696 Examples.—(1) The established price of the seats in the orchestra of a certain theater is \$2. These seats are put on sale three weeks in advance. The running attraction being very popular, the management decides one Friday night to increase, by 25 cents, the price of all orchestra seats for the next week still unsold. In this case, as an increase so made can not affect the established price, that price remains \$2. Therefore, a tax of  $12\frac{1}{2}$  cents is due from the theater in the case of each ticket for one of these seats sold for \$2.25, in addition to the 23 cents tax payable by the purchaser of each ticket. In making its return at the end of the month the theater should add together all of these  $12\frac{1}{2}$ -cent taxes, and if the total sum ends in a half cent (as, for example, \$227.37 $\frac{1}{2}$ ), then the tax to be paid, complying with section 1306 of the Act, will be one-half cent greater than this amount (in other words, \$227.38).

6697 (2) If, in the case outlined in the preceding example, the attraction had proven unpopular, resulting in a reduction of the established price to $1.50, the management would be liable to a tax of 25 cents on each ticket or card of admission sold at the original established price of $2, unless the conditions enumerated in Article 11 were complied with.

B—BROKER'S SALES

6698 Art. 13. Rate and computation of tax.—The rate of the excess-charge 6502 tax in the case of cards or tickets of admission sold at news stands, hotels, and places other than the ticket offices of the theaters, operas, or other places of amusement, unlike that imposed on the proprietors, managers, or employees of opera houses, theaters, or other places of amusement (see Art. 12), depends on the amount by which the selling price exceeds the regular or established price. If the excess charge is 50 cents or less, the rate of tax is 5 per cent of such excess charge; if more than 50 cents, the rate is 50 per cent of the excess charge.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6699 In determining the amount of the excess charge, the amount of any tax imposed under paragraph (1) of section 800 (a) is taken into consideration. That is to say, such tax is always added to the regular or established price and the sum so obtained is subtracted from the selling price. The remainder represents the excess charge, and the 5 per cent or 50 per cent tax applies according as the charge amounts to 50 cents or less or exceeds that amount. Where the excess charge is more than 50 cents, the whole amount of such excess charge is taxable at the 50 per cent rate. Thus, by way of illustration, if a ticket broker sells for $2.50 a ticket or card of admission the regular or established price of which is $2, the excess charge is not 50 cents, but 30 cents. This is determined in the following manner:

Established price.....	$2.00
Admission tax thereon.....	.20
Total.....	2.20
Sale price.....	$2.50
Difference representing taxable excess charge.....	.30
Tax due (5 per cent rate).....	.015

6700 Had the broker sold this ticket for $3, his tax liability would have been as shown below:

Established price.....	$2.00
Admission tax thereon.....	.20
Total.....	2.20
Sale price.....	$3.00
Difference, representing taxable excess charge.....	.80
Tax due (50 per cent rate).....	.40

However, should the broker in each of the preceding examples reimburse himself by collecting from his customer the amount of the admission tax imposed under section 800 (a) (1), the total sale price of each ticket would then be $2.70 and $3.20, respectively, and the tax on the excess charges of $0.50 and $1 would be $0.025 and $0.50, respectively.

6701 No admission tax is due or collectible by the broker in this connection, since such tax has already been paid to and collected by the theater or person controlling the admission.

6702 The tax on excess charges applies to tickets or cards of admission to theaters, operas, or other places of amusement "sold at news stands, hotels, and places other than the ticket offices of such theaters, operas, or other places of amusement" at prices in excess of the regular or established prices at such ticket offices. Therefore, any person who in his individual capacity and not as an employee or representative of a theater, opera, or other place of amusement, sells or disposes of tickets or cards of admission at prices in excess of the regular or established prices at the ticket offices of such theater, opera, or other place of amusement is liable to the payment of this tax. This liability attaches whether or not the selling or disposing of such tickets or cards of admission is the principal business or occupation of such person.

6703 As this is a percentage tax, like that imposed on excess charges imposed by theaters, operas, or other places of amusement (see Art. 12), individual transactions will frequently result in a tax involving a fraction of a cent. These fractional parts of cents should be preserved in computing the monthly total of tax due. If the grand monthly total involves a fraction of a cent equal to one-half cent or more, it shall be increased to 1 cent; otherwise it shall be disregarded.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6704 It should be particularly noted that this tax is based on the amount charged in excess of the established price, not in excess of the price the broker pays. The fact that the broker himself may have paid the theater, opera, or other place of amusement more than the established price for a ticket or card of admission sold or disposed of by him does not affect the tax to be paid by the broker on an excess charge made by him. In other words, if a theater makes an excess charge to a broker, and the broker in turn makes an equal or greater excess charge to his customer, then both the theater and the broker must pay an excess-charge tax on the amount of the excess charge over the established price.

6705 Where a ticket is sold by a theater to a broker at the established price and it thereafter passes through the hands of one or more brokers before being sold to a user, each broker who sells the ticket for an amount in excess of the established price must pay the tax on the whole amount by which his selling price exceeds the amount of the established price of the ticket at the ticket office of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement plus the tax imposed on such established price under paragraph (1) of section 800 (a). For information as to the manner in which returns shall be made and the tax paid over by brokers, and as to how they may reimburse themselves or take credit for taxes—both admission and excess-charge—paid by them, see Article 36.

6706 Examples.—(1) A certain ticket broker purchases from a theater a block of tickets for seats in the orchestra, the established price of admission to which is $2, and resells them at an excess charge of 50 cents per ticket. The taxes to be collected and paid by the theater and broker in this case are as follows:

Theater

Receives from broker		Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00	which it retains.
Admission tax.....	.20	which it must pay to collector.....	$0.20
Total.....	2.20	Total.....	0.20

Broker

Receives from customer		Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00	which he retains.
Additional charge.....	.20	which he retains as refund of admission tax paid to theater.
Excess charge.....	.50	of which he must pay as tax to collector.....	$0.025
Total.....	2.70	Total.....	.025

6707 (2) In the preceding example had the theater charged the broker $2.25 for the tickets, the established price of which was $2, and the broker in turn had increased the excess charge by 25 cents, the taxes to be collected by the theater and broker would have been as follows:

Theater

Receives from broker		Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00	which it retains.
Excess charge.....	.25	of which it must pay as tax to collector.....	$0.125
Admission tax.....	.23	which it must pay to collector.....	.23
Total.....	2.48	Total.....	.355

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

Broker

Receives from customer	Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00 which he retains.
Additional charge.....	.23 which he retains as refund of admission tax paid to theater.
Excess charge.....	.50 of which he must pay as tax to collector.....
	$0.025
Total.....	2.73
	Total.....

6708 (3) Again, had the theater charged the broker $2.50 for the $2 seats and the broker in reselling them had increased the excess charge by $1.25, the tax to be collected and paid by each would have been as follows:

Theater

Receives from broker	Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00 which it retains.
Excess charge.....	.50 of which it must pay as tax to collector.....
Admission tax.....	.25 which it must pay to collector.....
	.25
Total.....	2.75
	Total.....

Broker

Receives from customer	Must pay to collector
Established price.....	$2.00 which he retains.
Additional charge.....	.25 which he retains as refund of admission tax paid to theater.
Excess charge.....	1.75 of which he must pay as tax to collector.....
	$0.875
Total.....	4.00
	Total.....

6709 (4) A ticket broker purchases from a theater a block of tickets for seats, the established price of admission to which is $2, and resells them at an excess charge of 50 cents per ticket. He has an arrangement with the theater, however, by which half this excess charge so received by him is to be paid to the theater as a rebate. In this case this rebate of 25 cents received by the theater is in fact an excess charge made by it. The theater, therefore, will be subject to a tax of 50 per cent of that amount (12½ cents) as a tax on an excess charge. The final result as to taxes, etc., will be the same, therefore, as that shown under example 2 above.

6710 (5) A theater-ticket agency procures tickets from various theaters with the privilege of returning an hour before the performance starts all tickets for that performance then unsold. Such agency charges for each ticket sold 10 cents more than the sum of the established price and the amount paid to the theater as an admission tax, and terms this 10-cent charge a "service charge." In this case it is clear that the 10-cent advance is in fact an excess charge and that the agency is liable for an excess-charge tax of ½ cent.

CHAPTER FIVE

Exemptions

6711 Art. 14. Taxes to which exemption applies.—Two classes of taxes are imposed by section 800 (a): (1) A tax on admissions proper, which is to be paid by the person paying for admission (see Chapter

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

One), and (2) a tax on charges in excess of the regular or established price, which is to be paid by the person selling or disposing of tickets or cards of admission at prices in excess of the regular or established price thereof (see Chapter Four).

6712 One of the conditions on which the exemption herein provided, in the case of organizations, societies, and persons coming under classification (1), (A), (B), and (C), is predicated is that all the proceeds of the admissions must inure exclusively to the benefit of such organizations, societies, or persons.

6713 This exemption was clearly intended to apply to both classes of taxes.

In cases where both taxes are applicable it frequently happens that the proceeds of the admissions and the proceeds of the excess charges will inure to the benefit of different persons; that is, an organization entitled to exemption may receive all the proceeds of the admission proper, while the proceeds of the excess charges may accrue to the benefit of an organization or persons not entitled to exemption.

6714 In such cases it is necessary, in order to put into effect the manifest intent of the law, to construe this exemption provision as applying separately to each of the taxes. So, where all the proceeds of admissions proper inure exclusively to the benefit of organizations or persons coming within this provision of the Act the exemption will apply with respect to such admissions, even though the proceeds of the excess charges go to the benefit of non-exempt organizations or individuals. Conversely, if all the proceeds of the excess charges inure exclusively to the benefit of exempt organizations or persons, such excess charges will be exempt from tax, although amounts paid for the admissions proper are taxable under paragraph (1) of section 800(a).

6715 The term "all the proceeds" is held to mean all the proceeds of the admissions and excess charges, as the case may be, after the payment of reasonable expenses. These expenses need not necessarily be on a fixed or guaranty basis, but may also be based upon a certain percentage of the receipts or the number of admissions sold, provided the contingent feature of the contract is reasonable and operates solely for the benefit of an exempt organization or person. Thus, where services, property, rentals, and other items of expense are engaged on a percentage basis, or the amounts to be paid therefor are dependent in whole or in part upon the amounts received from the sale of admissions or from excess charges, the right to exemption is not necessarily defeated, unless the net proceeds after the deduction of all reasonable expenses do not inure exclusively to the benefit of an organization or person entitled to exemption under section 800(b) of the Act. Where, however, by reason of a contingent agreement as above described, the partial guaranty plus the percentage of the receipts equal an amount greater than the regular fixed price charged for the talent, then the exemption from admissions tax is defeated for the net proceeds of admissions do not inure exclusively to an exempt organization or person unless, of course, both the organization furnishing the talent and the organization giving the entertainment qualify as such.

6716 The essential qualifications of exempt organizations and persons are discussed in Arts. 15-28, infra. As to the procedure to be followed in securing exemption, see Art. 29.

6717 Examples.—(1) A woman's auxiliary of a charitable hospital in a large city gives an entertainment for the benefit of the hospital. The established price of admission to all seats is $3. This organization, which qualifies as exempt under section 800(b), is largely made up of society women, and seats are very much in demand. A certain ticket broker secures a large number of them and sells them at $4 apiece. In this case the admissions proper are exempt from the Taxes on Admissions, in spite of the fact that the proceeds of the excess charges made by the broker go into his pocket. Therefore no admission tax need be charged to the broker or anyone else on the original sale of the tickets. However, he must pay an excess-charge tax of 50 cents on each ticket sold.

6719 (3) A certain charitable organization, which qualifies as exempt under section 800(b), purchases from the box office of a theater, in the regular way and at the established price, fifty $2 tickets. It sells them all for $5 apiece (exclusive of any admission tax) for the benefit of the charity. In this case an admission tax of 20 cents, based on the $2 paid to the theater, must be paid on each ticket at the time of its purchase. (Of course, it can if it desires collect 20 cents more to cover the admission tax it paid to the theater.) On the other hand, no excess-charge tax is due from the charitable organization on account of the sale of these tickets at an excess charge.

6720 Art. 15. Basis of exemption.—It is to be noted that the basis on which exemption rests in the case of organizations and persons coming within classification or subdivision (1) of this provision of the Act differs from that applicable in the case of agricultural fairs, which are covered by classification or subdivision (2). As shown in the preceding Art. (14), in the case of the first class of organizations or persons the right to exemption depends on whether all the proceeds of the admissions, or excess charges, as the case may be, inure exclusively to the benefit of such organizations or persons. Aside from this condition, it is only necessary, in order to secure exemption, to establish the character of the beneficiary organizations or persons. It is not necessary that the organization or persons selling the admissions, or controlling the affair to which the admissions are sold, be entitled to exemption so long as all the proceeds of such admissions inure to the benefit of an organization or person that qualifies as exempt. In other words, the character of the organization or person receiving all the proceeds of the admissions or excess charges, and not the character of the organization or persons selling the admissions, determines whether or not exemption applies. Admissions to any place, regardless of the nature of the attraction or affair, are exempt if all the proceeds, as defined in Art. 14, inure exclusively to the benefit of an organization or a person or persons included in this provision of the Act.

6721 On the other hand, in the case of agricultural fairs, exemption applies only in respect to admissions to agricultural fairs as such, or to exhibits, entertainments, or other pay features conducted as part of such fairs. Admissions to any other place would not be exempt even though all the proceeds thereof inured exclusively to the benefit of an agricultural fair association.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6722 On account of the different bases on which exemption is funded, as herein outlined, the two classes of cases will be dealt with separately in the following articles. First, with respect to—

ORGANIZATIONS OTHER THAN AGRICULTURAL FAIRS

6723 Art. 16. Necessary character of organization.—For an organization to be considered a religious, education, or charitable institution, society, or organization within the meaning of the Act: (1) It must have a definite organization, with officers, directors, or trustees, and the usual essential features (incorporation not being essential) of an association of its class; (2) it must have a purpose which as put into practice is religious, educational, or charitable; and (3) its funds must be used solely in furtherance of such purpose, none of them being paid or otherwise distributed to any of its members except as charity or as reasonable compensation for services actually rendered.

6724 For an organization to be considered a “society for the prevention of cruelty to children or animals” it must comply with conditions (1) and (3) of the preceding sentence, and also with condition (2), except that in its case the purpose to be expressed and put into practice must be the specific purpose of the prevention of cruelty to children or animals, or both, and not one of the three general purposes mentioned in condition (2).

6725 Societies or organizations conducting symphony orchestras must comply with conditions (1) and (3). Moreover, before exemption can be extended to such a society or organization it must affirmatively show (a) that the conducting of a symphony orchestra is its sole purpose, and (b) that it receives substantial support from voluntary contributions.

6726 Societies or organizations conducted for the purpose of improving any city, town, village, or other municipality must likewise comply with conditions (1) and (3), and must furthermore show that this is their sole purpose. The same rule applies to societies or organizations conducted for the purpose of maintaining cooperative or community center moving-picture theaters.

6727 It should be carefully noted that, while exemption is granted only to organizations operating on a nonprofit basis, the mere fact that an organization is not organized or operated for gain or profit does not afford a basis for exemption. To be entitled to such exemption the organization must comply with the other conditions herein outlined. There is no requirement, expressed or implied, that an institution, society, or organization to be included within these exemption provisions must be organized or operating in the United States.

6728 As to the procedure to be followed in securing exemption, see Art. 29.

6729 Art. 17. Religious organizations.—Admissions, or excess charges, all the proceeds of which (after payment of reasonable expenses) inure exclusively to the benefit of religious institutions, societies, or organizations are exempt from tax. Churches and theological seminaries are the commonest cases of religious institutions. Missions and missionary societies also clearly fall within the exemption. Church societies are religious societies only if they share in the religious purpose of the church. Nation-wide organizations which are not church organizations but which have as their purpose the furtherance of religion are religious societies.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6730 Examples.—(1) The members of a certain church form a club for social and athletic purposes and hold their meetings in one of the church buildings. In order to raise money for club purposes they give dances and other entertainments. In this case, as the club is not formed or operated for religious purposes, but purely for social and athletic purposes, admission to these dances and entertainments are not exempt on the ground that the club is a religious organization.

6731 (2) A certain church organizes a men's club to increase community feeling, and while the meetings are opened with prayer the club itself has no religious purpose and members of all religions and denominations are entitled to membership. This club, though holding its meetings in the church building itself, is not a religious organization within the meaning of the Act.

6732 (3) A certain church organizes a men's Bible class, which meets every Sunday to study the Bible. This class holds an entertainment in order to raise money to buy Bibles and maps to be used in its work. Admissions to the entertainment are exempt from tax, for the class is a religious organization within the meaning of the Act.

6733 (4) A club organized for the sole purpose of raising money to support a missionary is a religious organization within the meaning of the Act.

6734 (5) A Young Men's Christian Association or Young Men's Hebrew Association is a religious organization within the meaning of the Act.

6735 Art. 18. Education organizations.—Admissions, or excess charges, all the proceeds of which (after payment of reasonable expenses) inure exclusively to the benefit of institutions, societies, or organizations that are educational within the meaning of the Act as stated in this article and Art. 16, are exempt from tax. Schools, colleges, and universities, qualifying under Art. 16, fall within this exemption. The same is true of any organization whose dominant purpose is the education of its members or of other persons. Education here includes musical education. It also includes physical education, so any organization, devoted to physical education pure and simple, and complying with Art. 16, is educational within the meaning of the Act; but if the element of sport enters into its purposes, then it can not be considered exempt as an educational society or organization. Admissions, or excess charges, are not exempt merely because the proceeds are to be used for an educational purpose—the character of the organization to which they will inure is the test, not the purpose merely. Admissions, or excess charges, to contests or entertainments are exempt from tax where the proceeds are to be expended for athletic or other school, college, or university purposes by or under the direct supervision of the authorities of a school, college, or university which qualifies under Art. 16.

6736 Examples.—(1) Admissions charged to a football game where the net proceeds are expended for athletic purposes under the direct supervision of the faculty of a college (neither organized nor operated for profit) are exempt from tax.

6737 (2) Admissions to a college baseball game the proceeds of which inure to a students' athletic association to be spent in their discretion, without any college supervision, for the support of athletic teams or other interests of the members of the association, are taxable.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

- 6738 (3) A private school run for the profit of its proprietors (in other words, not qualifying under condition (3) of Art. 16) is not an educational institution, society, or organization within the meaning of the Act.
- 6739 (4) A music-festival association is organized and operates in a city with the purpose of educating the community up to good music and cultivating its musical taste. It also complies with conditions (1) and (3) of Art. 16. This association is an educational organization within the meaning of the Act. Admissions, therefore, to a music festival given by it are exempt from tax.
- 6740 (5) Where an association maintaining a zoological park is a corporation not for profit, whose purpose is to exhibit animals and give instruction in connection therewith, admissions to the park are exempt from tax because they inure to an educational institution.
- 6741 (6) Where the pupils in a certain room in a certain school form an organization for pleasure and social purposes and give an entertainment, the proceeds of which are to be used to give a picnic, the admissions thereto are taxable, for such organization is not educational.
- 6742 (7) Admissions to an entertainment given by a college fraternity for its benefit are taxable, for such a fraternity is not educational within the meaning of the Act.
- 6743 (8) Admissions charged to an illustrated lecture, educational in character, where the net proceeds go to the lecturer, are taxable.
- 6744 (9) A Young Men's Christian Association or Young Men's Hebrew Association is an educational organization within the meaning of the Act.
- 6745 (10) The activities of a social settlement, incorporated "not for profit," consist chiefly of classes in English, mathematics, modern languages, manual training, sewing, cooking, etc. Entertainments are held from time to time to raise money to help carry on these activities. Admissions to such entertainments are exempt from tax, for the settlement is clearly educational within the meaning of the Act.
- 6746 (11) A certain class in a county high school gives an entertainment of which the net proceeds are to be used to buy a victrola to be given to the school. In this case, if the principal of the school has joined, on behalf of the school, in an affidavit for exemption (see Art. 29), a certificate of exemption can be secured which makes the admissions exempt from tax. If, however, the victrola was to become the property of the class, to be removed from the school on its graduation, the exemption would not apply.
- 6747 (12) The Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts of America are educational organizations within the meaning of the Act.
- 6748 (13) A football game played between a college team and a team operating for profit, under an agreement whereby the receipts are to be divided on a percentage basis. The college team turns its share into the college treasury, while the opposing team's share is only sufficient to pay its actual expenses. Admissions to the game are taxable, since all the proceeds (see Art. 14) do not inure to the benefit of the college.

6749 Art. 19. Charitable organizations.—Admissions, or excess charges, all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of charitable institutions, societies, or organizations, complying with the conditions outlined in Art. 16, are exempt from tax. Any organization the primary purpose of which is benevolent or charitable comes within the meaning of the term "charitable" as used in the Act. An organization is not precluded from exemption merely because its gratuities are limited to its members and/or their dependents.

6750 Examples.—(1) Admissions to an entertainment given by a fraternal organization, the net proceeds of which inure to the exclusive use of a home for indigent and aged members and their dependents or a similar institution, not operated for profit, are exempt from tax.

6752 (3) An association organized and operated for the relief of war-stricken people abroad, and also complying with conditions (1) and (3) of Art. 16 gives an entertainment and uses the proceeds in furtherance of its work. Admissions to this entertainment are exempt from tax, for it is a charitable organization within the meaning of the Act.

6753 (4) A relief association, organized by the police of a certain city for the sole purpose of providing a fund for the relief of dependents of deceased policemen, gives a baseball game and turns the proceeds into its treasury. Admissions to the game are exempt from tax.

6754 Art. 20. The American Legion.—Admissions or excess charges, all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of any post of the American Legion, or any women's auxiliary unit of the American Legion, are not taxable.

6756 The name by which an organized group of musicians is called is not the test of whether or not such group is a symphony orchestra. To be a symphony orchestra it must have a personnel of sufficient size, quality, and ability to capably render symphonies, and must make them a regular part of its program. Bands and ordinary orchestras are clearly not included in the exemption.

6757 Art. 22. Persons in the military or naval service.—Admissions, or excess charges, all the proceeds of which (after payment of reasonable expenses) inure exclusively to the benefit of a person or persons in the military or naval forces of the United States, are exempt from tax. Soldiers and sailors, of course, constitute the chief classes of persons covered by this exemption, but it also includes nurses, male or female, and other members of such military or naval forces not ordinarily included within the term "soldiers and sailors." It does not include persons formerly but no longer members of such forces, whether in uniform or not, except as provided in Art. 23, nor does it include members of the National Guard of a State, even though the National Guard Organization is recognized by the Federal Government under the Act approved June 4, 1920, entitled "An Act to amend an Act entitled 'An Act for making further and more effectual provision for the national defense, and for other purposes,' approved June 3, 1916, and to establish military justice," though it does include persons in the United States Military or Naval Reserve. It applies equally whether the proceeds inure exclusively to the benefit of a single person or of many persons if they are in the active service. An individual in the military or naval reserve engaged in the business of selling admissions for gain or profit would not be entitled to exemption.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6758 Art. 23. Persons formerly in the military or naval service.—Admissions, or excess charges, all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of persons, individually or collectively, who have served in the military or naval forces of the United States, and are in need, are exempt from tax. This exemption applies to persons who have at any time served in any of the arms or branches of service specified in the preceding Article, and who are in need. The phrase "are in need" is held to mean in need of necessities of life which such persons themselves are unable to provide by reason of physical or mental disability or other legitimate cause beyond their control. It includes necessities for the personal use of ex-service men or women and also necessities for members of their families who are legally dependent on them for support.

6759 It is not necessary that the needy condition should have been occasioned by or arisen out of their military or naval service, or to be in any way connected with or related to such service. Whether a person, or group of persons, is in need is a question of fact, and when exemption is claimed by or on behalf of persons coming within this class it is incumbent on the claimant to show the existence of the need.

6761 It is to be noted that the exemption applies only to societies or organizations the sole purpose of which is the improvement of cities, towns, villages, or other municipalities. It would not, therefore, include a municipal government itself (see Art. 26), for, while in a broad sense it may be said that such governments are designed for the improving of the communities they serve, the scope of their activities is wider than that of the organizations contemplated by this provision of the Act.

6762 By "improving" is obviously meant any work or undertaking looking to the introduction, inauguration, or betterment of any facility, agency, or other service or thing designed or maintained for the common use and benefit of all the people of the community. Organizations the purpose of which is to improve and beautify public roads, streets, parks, and other public utilities or services, to improve educational and health conditions, to raise funds for the acquisition and care of apparatus for a volunteer fire company, and the like, would come within the exemption.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6763 Art. 25. Cooperative or community-center moving-picture theater organizations.—No tax applies to admissions or excess charges all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of societies or organizations conducted for the sole purpose of maintaining cooperative or community-center moving-picture theaters—if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any private stockholder or individual.

6764 The exemption covers not only admissions to cooperative or community-center moving-picture theaters maintained by such societies or organizations, but also to any admissions all the proceeds of which inure exclusively to the benefit of such organizations. This exemption does not include community-center organizations, even though they maintain cooperative or community-center moving-picture theaters, if their purposes and activities extend beyond this one object.

6765 Art. 26. Admissions by or for the benefit of Federal, State, or Municipal governments.—The fact that the authority charging admissions or receiving the proceeds thereof is the United States or an agency thereof, or a State or Territory or political subdivision thereof, such as a county, city, town, or other municipality, does not make such admissions exempt. The Act specifically provides that the taxes on admission (Chapter One) shall be paid by the person paying for admission. It is not, therefore, a tax on the person or authority selling the admissions or receiving the proceeds thereof.

AGRICULTURAL FAIRS

6766 Art. 27. Basis of exemption.—The tax on charges in excess of the regular or established price of admission has no application in the case of admissions to agricultural fairs (see Art. 15). Therefore, it is only necessary to consider under this head the tax on admissions imposed by paragraph (1) of section 800 (a).

6767 The exemption from this tax in this instance depends (1) on the nature of the place or exhibit to which admissions are sold, (2) on whether the fair or exhibit is conducted for financial profit, and (3), in the case of any exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature, the disposition made of the proceeds therefrom.

6768 Art. 28. Fairs and exhibits included.—The exemption includes not only agricultural fairs as such, but also “any exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature” conducted by an association conducting an agricultural fair, and as part of such fair.

6769 The term “agricultural fairs” includes, in general, all exhibitions of farm produce, live stock, poultry, flowers, or the like, held for the promotion or advancement of agriculture (which includes horticulture). It includes within its meaning any exhibition of animals, of a species whose chief utility is in connection with agriculture, held by an association organized to improve that species of animal and to disseminate knowledge concerning its breeding.

6770 No limitation or restriction is imposed with respect to the character or nature of the exhibits, entertainments, or other pay features, admissions to which are exempted. It is only necessary that such exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature (a) be conducted by the association conducting the agricultural fair, (b) as a part of such an agricultural fair, and (c) that the proceeds therefrom be used exclusively for the maintenance and operation of such agricultural fairs. If these conditions are satisfied, it is immaterial whether or not the exhibit, entertainment, or other pay feature is designed to promote or advance agriculture or its allied industries. The exemption does not extend to admissions to exhibits, or features operated by concessionaires in connection with agricultural fairs, nor to admission to any place other than an agricultural fair or an exhibit or feature held in conjunction with such a fair, even though all the proceeds inure exclusively to the benefit of an agricultural fair association.

6771 Examples.—(1) A retail grocers' association gives a food show lasting a week in a large hall in a city. The raw food products, the processes of manufacture, the finished food products, and the foods prepared for the table are all exhibited. Such an exhibition is not an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act.

6772 (2) A horse show held in a large city, where most of the horses exhibited are fancy riding and driving horses and the show is largely a social event, is not an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act.

6773 (3) A horse fair held by a society organized to improve the quality of farm animals, the animals exhibited being chiefly of that class, is an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act.

6774 (4) A certain dog fanciers' association gives a dog show in a city. A large majority of the dogs exhibited belong to fancy and house varieties. Such a show is not an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act.

6775 (5) A poultry fanciers' association gives a poultry show, which is held with a particular view to teaching poultry farmers how to secure the largest possible number of eggs. Such a show is an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act.

6776 (6) An exhibition of articles of garden produce to stimulate a "garden movement" in the community is an agricultural fair within the meaning of the Act, and admissions to same are not taxable if no part of the net earnings thereof inures to the benefit of any stockholders or members of the organization conducting the exhibition.

6777 Art. 29. Claim for exemption.—The benefit of exemption from Taxes on Admissions or Taxes on Excess Charges can only be secured by executing and filing an affidavit, on Form 755 (Revised), which may be obtained from any Collector of Internal Revenue. On this form must be shown the place and the occasion with respect to which exemption is desired. It must in every case be executed by an officer or duly authorized agent of the organization, or individual, in control of the admissions or excess charges involved. And, where the proceeds of the admissions or excess charges are for the benefit of an organization or of a person or persons not in control thereof, the beneficiary, whether an organization or individual, must join in executing the claim for exemption, space therefor being provided on Form 755 (Revised).

6778 The claim should be filed with the Collector of Internal Revenue for the district in which is located the place to which the admissions or excess charges covered by the claim are to be sold. It should be filed a considerable length of time prior to any occasion for which exemption is desired, and should be accompanied by evidence to establish the beneficiary's right to exemption under subdivision (b) of section 800. In the case of organizations claiming exemption thereunder, copies of their charters or constitutions and by-laws should be submitted in support of such claims. If these documents can not be furnished in any case a comprehensive statement, under oath, outlining the objects and purposes and the scope of the activities of the claimant organization will be required. Unless a claim is filed long enough before any given occasion to permit a full consideration and investigation if necessary and the rendering of a decision, and unless the decision is favorable to the claim, the person or authority in control of the admissions will be liable to the penalty prescribed by section 1302 [§8014] of the Act if tax due on the admissions is not collected. (See Chapter Nine.)

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6779 Collectors of Internal Revenue will notify claimants as to the allowance or disallowance of their claims, as soon as circumstances will permit, on Form 755-A.

6780 Examples.—(1) A certain social club gives an entertainment at which moving pictures are exhibited and charges $1 for admission. It contends that admissions to this entertainment are exempt from tax on the ground that the net proceeds are to be given to the local chapter of the Red Cross. In such case no claim for exemption can be considered unless the affidavit claiming such exemption is joined in, on behalf of the Red Cross chapter, by one of its officers.

6781 (2) A football game is to take place at a certain college between its team and that of a rival college. In this case, if an exemption certificate is sought, the president of the college where the game is to be held must execute the affidavit for exemption. If the proceeds are to be divided then the president of the rival college must join in the affidavit.

6782 (3) The pupils in a certain room in a certain school give an entertainment the proceeds of which are to be used in buying a victrola to be given to the school. In this case, if it is desired to claim that the proceeds are exempt, the principal of the school must, on its behalf, join in the affidavit for exemption.

6783 (4) A certain lodge gives a benefit for a company of United States soldiers. In this case the claim for exemption on Form 755 (Revised) must be executed by an officer of the lodge and joined in by an officer or other duly authorized member of the company of soldiers.

CHAPTER SIX

Tickets and Signs

6784 Art. 30. Tickets or other means to check admissions required.—
6508 The above [§6508] is the only provision contained in the Act relating to tickets or cards of admission. It is not held to mean that the use of tickets or cards in all cases is mandatory; but where tickets or cards are not used some other method or system must be provided by which the number of admissions sold and the tax due thereon may be ascertained and checked. Therefore, every place admission to which is taxable must provide either—

6785 (a) Tickets or cards of admission to evidence every admission which is subject to tax; or 6786 (b) A mechanical device which will register the number of persons entering the place.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6787 Exception: In the case of a person or organization who or which only makes charges for admission irregularly and occasionally and not more than six times a year, compliance with the foregoing requirements will not be necessary; but in such cases a correct record must be kept in accordance with Art. 39 giving all information necessary to enable revenue officers to determine the amount of tax due.

6788 Art. 31. Requirements applicable to tickets.—Where tickets or cards of admission are used they must comply with the following requirements:

6789 (1) The price (exclusive of the tax to be paid by the person paying for admission) at which every ticket or card is sold must be conspicuously and indelibly printed, stamped, or written on that part of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management of the place for which it is valid for admission. This is a specific requirement of the Act itself. For administrative purposes it is necessary to show not only the selling price but also (a) the regular or established price (see Art. 11), (b) the tax, and (c) the total of the price and tax. The regular or established price, the tax based thereon, and total shall appear on the face<sup>1</sup> of the portion of the ticket which is to be taken up by the management in the following or an equivalent form:

Sale price.....of board, ad., etc.
Tax paid.....
Total.....

If the ticket is sold at a price other than the regular or established price, the actual selling price, the tax based thereon, and the total shall be shown on the back of the portion of the ticket to be taken up by the management in the following or an equivalent form:

Sale price.....
Tax paid.....

6790 And if the ticket is sold other than at the ticket office of the theater, opera, or other place of amusement, the name and address of the vendor must also be shown on the back of the same portion of the ticket. For penalties imposed in this connection see Article 46.

6791 The foregoing applies primarily to taxable admissions. As no tax is imposed on admissions of ten cents or less, it is only necessary that the price of such tickets be shown. This must be shown, since the requirements of the Act in this matter apply to "every admission ticket or card" without regard to the price for which it is sold. Where admissions are exempt on other grounds, the tickets should show that fact. This may be done in the following or equivalent form:

Established price.....
Tax free.

6792 (2) The name of the place to which a ticket or card is valid for admission must in all cases be shown thereon. Moreover, tickets must either show the date for which they are valid or must be serially numbered. If serially numbered tickets are used there must be a separate and distinct series for each established price. The numbers of each series must start with 1 and run continuously in regular order until 500,000 is reached, after which they may again start at 1 if so desired. In such case, however, a letter of the alphabet must precede or follow the serial number to distinguish the new series from the preceding series, and such letters must be used in turn until the alphabet is exhausted before starting again with the letter A. No place to which taxable admissions are sold shall have, or permit to be, at such place at the same time two or more rolls or series of tickets of the same established price bearing identical serial numbers which are not distinguished by different letters of the alphabet. Serially numbered tickets must be issued consecutively in the order of the serial numbers, and the letters of the alphabet, if any, of that particular series.

6793 Exceptions.—(a) Since tickets or cards of admission which are sold for 10 cents or less are not taxable, they need not be serially numbered or dated.

6794 (b) In a limited class of cases, the use of so-called "hard tickets" used for repeated performances is permitted without requiring that they be serially numbered or dated.

6796 (3) In the case of bona fide season or subscription tickets a single ticket or card may be used to evidence more than one admission. In every other case, where several single admissions are sold or disposed of at one time, there must be separate or separable coupons to evidence each right to admission. Thus, in the case of combination tickets, issued by outdoor amusement parks, which entitle the holder to admission to a number of different attractions, there must be a separate ticket or coupon for each such attraction. Furthermore, each separate ticket or coupon must either be dated or be serially numbered in accordance with requirements (1) and (2). If serial numbers are used on such combination tickets, each coupon thereof should bear the same serial number as the stub or cover of the ticket itself.

6797 (4) No person shall be admitted, unless admitted free, to any place admission to which is taxable, and which uses tickets or cards, except upon the presentation of a card or ticket complying with the preceding requirements. The ticket or card so presented or a portion thereof must be taken up, at the time of admission, by the management of the place, except in the case of a bona fide subscription or season ticket covering two or more admissions. Under ordinary circumstances the tickets or cards or portions thereof so taken up need not be preserved by the management of the place, but from time to time, on short notice from a collector of internal revenue or a revenue agent, the management must carefully preserve, until inspection by such officer, all tickets or cards or portions thereof taken upon the occasions designated in such notice.

6798 (5) In the case of roof gardens, cabarets, and places affording similar entertainment (see Chapter Three), the proprietors must furnish each guest upon payment of his bill for refreshment, service, or merchandise with a coupon receipt to be detached from such bill. All such bills shall be serially numbered and the coupon receipt in each case shall be numbered the same as its bill. The bill and coupon receipt shall each bear in indelible figures the total amount of the charge for refreshment, etc., the tax thereon, which on the receipt shall be stated as "paid," and the sum total of such charge and tax. No such receipt shall be delivered except on collecting the amount of the tax so shown on such receipt as "paid."

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6799 Examples.—(1) A certain theater has a regular charge of $2 for orchestra seats. It prints the following on the face of that part of the ticket which is taken up by the theater upon the admission of the ticket holder:

Established price.....	$2.00
Tax paid.....	.20
Total.....	2.20

Two hundred of these tickets are sold by the theater to a certain broker. On selling these tickets he stamps with a rubber stamp on the back of the same part of the ticket the following:

This ticket sold by	Sale price.....	$2.50
Jones & Co.	Tax paid.....	.20
27 West St., New York City.	Total sale price..	2.70

6800 (2) George Nelson purchases from Jones & Co. one of the tickets mentioned in the preceding example and finding that he is unable to attend the performance he resells this ticket to a friend for the same amount which he paid for it. When selling the ticket George Nelson draws two lines in the form of a cross through the left-hand portion of what the broker had stamped on the back of the ticket and adds his name and address, leaving the inscription on the back of the ticket as follows:

This ticket sold by	Sale price.....	$2.50	Sold by Geo. Nelson;
Jones &amp; Co.	Tax paid.....	.20	505 West 122d St.,
27 West St., New York City.	Total sale price.	2.70	New York City.

6801 (3) A certain theater whose established prices are not the same for all attractions desires to print its tickets for the whole year in advance. To comply with the provisions of this Article and yet make it possible to change the established price for various attractions it has tickets printed in the following form:

AMERICAN THEATRE						ORCHESTRA	RIGHT
The established price tax paid and total are as indicated by punch below
JULY	SATURDAY EVENING					GOOD ONLY SATURDAY EVE. JULY 22 1922
22	ORCHESTRA
1922	Established price	.75	$1.00	$1.50	$2.00		$2.50
	Tax paid	.08	.10	.15	.20		.25
	Total	.83	$1.10	$1.65	$2.20		$2.75
	★	★	★	★	★
Not valid unless one star is punched out

Tickets so printed, if properly punched in advance of the opening of any sale or distribution of tickets for the performance for which they are issued, will fully comply with the requirements of Article 30, as well as with those of this Article.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6802 (4) Certain society women form an organization for the sole purpose of giving a single ball the net proceeds from which are to be given to a charity hospital. In this case, if it is decided to use tickets, the tickets must be marked with the "established price" in accordance with the provisions of this Article. No "tax paid" or "total" need be printed on the tickets, however, because the admissions are clearly exempt from tax, but "tax free" or its equivalent must appear in its stead.

6803 (5) A broker on reselling a ticket finds that by reason of the fact that it has previously passed through the hands of several other brokers and has been stamped by them, there is not sufficient space on it for him to stamp the information required by the law and regulations. He may enlarge the ticket by pasting on to that part which will be taken up by the theater a slip of paper and stamp the required information on the same, but this must be done in such a way that the information placed on the ticket by former vendors will not be obscured.

6804 (6) A college procures tickets to be sold for admission to a football game, on admissions to which it has secured exemption from tax. The tickets must show the established price of admission and bear the words "Tax free."

6805 Art. 32. Printing of tickets—Notice to be Given.—Where tickets or cards of admission to any place for admission to which a charge is made are printed, manufactured, or sold by any person, it shall be the duty of that person to give prompt notice to the collector of internal revenue of the district in which is located the place to which admission is to be charged. Such notice shall state (1) the name and address of the person to whom the tickets are furnished and (2) the number of tickets furnished, and shall be accompanied by proofs or sample copies of the tickets themselves. If the tickets are serially numbered, the notice must also contain a statement as to such serial numbers.

6806 Art. 33. Mechanical devices.—If a mechanical device is used instead of tickets or cards of admission, such device may be placed at the entrance or exit, or at any point en route through the place, but must be so arranged that every person admitted must himself cause it to register an admission and be so constructed that no change can be made in the record of admissions until at least 99,999 admissions are recorded, and then the only change possible must be the returning of the record to "0".

6807 Art. 34. Signs to be posted.—In the case of every place, admission to which is subject to tax, the proprietor or manager must keep conspicuously posted at the outer entrance and near the box office one or more signs accurately stating each of the established prices of admission, and in the case of each such price the tax due and the sum total of the established price and the tax.

6808 Examples: The following are examples of such signs:

(1) In the case of a "legitimate" theater:

	Admission	Tax	Total
Box seats.....	$2.00	$0.20	$2.20
1st 10 rows of orchestra.....	1.50	.15	1.65
Balance of orchestra.....	1.00	.10	1.10
1st 4 rows of balcony.....	.75	.08	.83
Balance of balcony.....	.50	.05	.55

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.*6809 (2) In the case of a moving-picture theater:

CHAPTER SEVEN*Collection, Return, and Payment of Tax.

Law ¶5506, ¶5508-9, ¶6512, ¶8009-10

6810 Art. 35. Duty to collect, return, and pay tax—Taxes on Admissions.

6512 —Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association (1) receiving any taxable payment for admission must collect the tax from the person making such payment at the time such payment is made; (2) being the proprietor or manager of an opera house or any other place of amusement in a case where any person has the permanent use or a lease for the use of a box or seat therein which is subject to tax must collect the tax from the owner or lessee of such box or seat; or (3) receiving payment for refreshment, service, or merchandise, which is taxable because including therein a charge for admission to a public performance for profit, at any roof garden, cabaret, or other similar entertainment, must collect the tax from the person making such payment at the time of such payment.

6811 A ticket broker or other person reselling a ticket at an advance over the former sale price may collect, and retain as a refund to him, the amount of admission tax already paid on that admission by him. A theater issuing a ticket in exchange for a less expensive ticket and a cash balance must collect the admission tax due on the cash balance.

6812 If the permanent use or lease for the use of a box or seat is paid for, then the time for the collection of the tax is the same as that in the case of any other paid admission. If the right to use is granted free or is otherwise enjoyed without being directly paid for, then the tax must be collected at the time the right is granted. If these rules prove insufficient, by reason of attempts at evasion or otherwise, to provide for the collection of the full tax due in any such case, then the proprietor or manager of the opera house or other place of amusement in which such box or seat is located shall collect each month, from the person entitled to the use of such box or seat, any balance of tax due from such person for the right to the use of such box or seat during the preceding month.

6813 In the rare cases where payment for refreshment, service, or merchandise is not made before or at the time of leaving the roof garden, cabaret, or other place of entertainment, payment must be treated as having been made and the tax must be then collected. Credit can be given for the amount paid for refreshment, service, or merchandise, if desired, but not for the tax. The tax must be collected not later than the departure of the person from the place of the performance at the conclusion of such performance.

6814 In each case there rests on the respective person from whom the tax is to be collected the corresponding duty of then paying such tax. A monthly return and payment of all such collections must be made in accordance with the provisions of Art. 41.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6815 Art. 36. Duty to return and pay tax—Taxes on Charges in Excess of Established Price.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association selling or disposing of a ticket or card of admission at a price in excess of the established price of the admission for which such ticket or card is valid in a case where such excess is taxable shall make a monthly return and pay the tax due in accordance with the provisions of Art. 41. For penalties see Art. 46.

6816 A broker may reimburse himself in an amount equal to a tax imposed under the provisions of section 800 (a), paragraph (1) of the Act, which he has paid to the vendor from whom he purchased the ticket, providing the selling price and tax imposed thereon under section 800 (a), paragraph (1), are properly stamped, printed, or written on the ticket in accordance with the provisions of section 800 (d) of the Act and Art. 31 of these Regulations. No credit can be taken, however, for any tax imposed under section 800 (a), paragraph (2) or (3), on excess charges and paid by the vendor from whom the broker purchased the ticket unless the broker claiming such credit obtains from the vendor a written statement that such vendor has paid or will pay the amount of tax on excess charges for which the purchasing broker claims credit. The statement must be preserved by the broker claiming credit in such a way as to be readily accessible for inspection by internal revenue officers. (See Arts. 12 and 13.)

6817 Art. 37. Application for and certificate of registry.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association (1) required by the provisions of the Act to collect any tax on admissions (see Art. 35) or (2) being the owner or lessee of any place which is ordinarily or at times leased to other persons who impose charges for admissions to it (see Art. 42) or (3) required to pay any tax on charges in excess of established price (see Art. 36) shall annually, on or before the first day of July, (and if not on that date engaged in business, then within ten days after engaging in business and annually thereafter on or before the first day of July) make an application for registry, by filling out Form 752 (Revised), with all information there called for, and duly executing it under oath. In cases falling within the first of the above classes (except such as are considered in Art. 38) such an application must be filed in the office of the collector of internal revenue of each district in which is located a place to which admissions are charged on account of which a duty to collect admissions taxes is imposed on the person making such application. In cases falling within class (2) the application must be filed in the office of the collector of internal revenue of each district in which such a place is owned or leased. In cases falling within class (3) the application must be filed in the office of the collector of internal revenue of the district in which is located the principal place of business of the person making the application, or in which is located his residence, if he have no fixed place of business. The collector, if satisfied that all the statements made in the application for registry are correct, will issue a certificate of registry on Form 753 (Revised) to the person who made such application. This certificate must be kept conspicuously posted in the principal place of business of such person, or be carried about with him, if he has no fixed place of business.

6818 Example.—A certain hotel has a number of rooms which it rents from time to time for dances and other parties. This hotel falls within class (2) of Art. 37 and must annually make application for registry. (This Article is as amended by T. D. 3394, Sept. 21, 1922.)

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6819 Art. 38. Traveling shows.—The proprietor or manager of every show, circus, exhibition, Chautauqua, or other amusement enterprise, which is traveling or itinerant, shall file the application for registry required by Art. 37 with the collector of internal revenue of the district in which the headquarters of such show is located, if it have an established headquarters. If it have no established headquarters, then the application shall be filed with the collector of the district in which such proprietor or manager resides. The certificate of registry, the daily record required by Art. 39, and a copy of each monthly return (see Art. 41) must be carried along with the show and exhibited on request to collectors of other districts or to internal revenue agents.

6820 This article applies only to shows, etc., which control the sale of tickets to their performances and the collection of tax on the same. It does not include, therefore, traveling theatrical attractions, lyceum entertainers, or the like, who perform in theaters or other places where the local management controls the sale of tickets and the collection of the tax.

6821 Examples.—(1) A certain Chautauqua has its main office in a certain city. The lectures, entertainments, and other attractions which it furnishes constantly tour the country, moving from State to State. In this case the application for registry must be made with the collector of internal revenue of the district in which its main office is located.

6822 (2) A certain theatrical company, acting in a farce comedy, tours the country, playing in various theaters. All of these theaters have certificates of registry, and they take care of all matters connected with the sale of tickets, collection of tax, etc. Such a company does not fall within the provisions of Art. 37 or 38 and is not required to apply for a certificate of registry at all.

6823 Art. 39. Records—Taxes on Admissions.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association required by the provisions of the Act to collect any tax on admissions must keep or cause to be kept an accurate daily record showing (1) in the case of each class of Taxes on Admissions (a) all figures and other information necessary to determine the amount of tax due for that day, and (b) the amount of tax due for that day, and (2) the total amount due as Taxes on Admissions for that day. The proprietor or manager of the business must certify, over his signature, to the correctness of the daily record, and if any other person is directly interested in the proceeds of the amounts received for admission, he or his agent must also so certify it. Whenever in the course of the business a report is prepared daily or at some other regular interval or at any time by a treasurer or manager for the benefit of the proprietor, or by the proprietor, treasurer, or manager for the benefit of some other interested party, a sworn copy of such report must be attached to and made a part of such daily record. Indeed, if such a report contains all the information required above, no daily record other than the sworn copy of the report need be kept. But whatever information such a report may contain, a sworn copy of it must be made and kept. Such daily records, including such sworn copies of reports, must be kept on file at the box office of the place or at some other convenient location for a period of two years, in such a manner as to be readily accessible on request to internal revenue officers.

6825 Art. 40. Records—Taxes on charges in excess of established price.—

Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association required by the provisions of the Act to pay any tax on charges in excess of established price, must keep or cause to be kept a daily record which classifies all sales of tickets into classes in each of which all the tickets are identical in respect to (1) the place to which admission is granted by the ticket, (2) the established price (exclusive of admission tax) of the admission granted by the ticket, and (3) the actual price (exclusive of any amount representing an admission tax) at which that sale of the ticket is made. This daily record must show (1) in the case of each such class (a) all figures and other information necessary to determine the amount of tax due for that day, and (b) the amount of tax due for that day, and (2) the total amount due as Taxes on Charges in Excess of Established Price for that day. Whenever in the course of the business a report is prepared daily or at some other regular interval or at any time by a treasurer or manager for the benefit of the proprietor, or by the proprietor, treasurer, or manager for the benefit of some other interested party, a sworn copy of such report must be attached to and made a part of such daily record. Indeed, if such a report contains all the information required above, no daily record other than the sworn copy of the report need be kept. But whatever information such a report may contain, a sworn copy of it must be made and kept. Such daily records, including such sworn copies of reports, must be kept on file at the place of business, or at some other convenient location, for a period of two years, in such a manner as to be readily accessible on request to internal-revenue officers.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6826 Art. 41. Returns and payments.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association required under the provisions of Article 13 of these regulations to pay any tax on excess charges shall make up each month from the daily record, required by Art. 40, a return in duplicate on Form 729A, in accordance with the instructions printed on the back of that form. Every other individual, corporation, partnership, or association required by the provisions of the Act to collect any tax on admissions (see Art. 35) or to pay any tax on charges in excess of established price (see Art. 36) shall make up each month from the daily record, required by Art. 39 or 40, as the case may be, a return in duplicate on Form 729 (revised), in accordance with the instructions printed on the back of that form. In addition thereto, proprietors of places who sell admission tickets to or through brokers must make up for each month from the daily record a return in duplicate on Form 729B in accordance with the instructions printed on that form. These returns must be made under oath, and must be verified before an officer duly authorized to administer oaths, either by the laws of the United States or by the laws of the State or Territory where such officer resides. Persons in the military or naval service of the United States may verify their returns before any official authorized to administer oaths for the purpose of those services. Such return or returns, together with the amount of the tax, must be in the hands of the collector of internal revenue who issued the certificate of registry for the place or business for which such return and payment is being made, on or before the last day of the month following that for which it is made.<sup>1</sup> (For penalties see Art. 46.) A copy of the proper form (or forms) will, as far as possible, be mailed each month to every person that filed a return during the preceding month, but should any person who is liable to tax fail to receive a blank return he should take the necessary steps to secure a form and make return within the time prescribed by law, as a failure to receive such copy from the collector will not, of course, excuse a failure to return and pay the tax, or relieve the taxpayer from the penalties for delinquency.

6827 Art. 42. Leases of places.—Whenever a theater, hall, park, ball-room, or other place is leased<sup>2</sup> for any occasion, there is imposed on the lessee, by the provisions of the Act, the duty of collecting any taxes due on admissions to such place on that occasion. However, for the convenience of the parties and the safeguarding of the revenue, the lessor will be permitted, if properly registered in accordance with Art. 37, to assume the responsibility for the collection of the tax in such cases. If the lessor assumes such responsibility his tickets shall be used<sup>3</sup> and the daily record required by Art. 39 shall be kept as a part of the daily records of the lessor in the same manner and form as if there had been no lease of the place on that occasion; with the exception, however, that the name of the lessee must also appear on the daily record and that he must also certify to the correctness of such record. If the lessor, however, does not assume responsibility for the collection of the tax, the lessee, precisely like any other person collecting taxable admissions, must comply in all respects with these regulations, more particularly with Art. 35, 36, 39, 40 and 41. Every lessee or person who rents any theater, hall, park, ballroom, or other place for a term or period not exceeding 10 days, and who assumes responsibility for collecting and making return on Form 729 of taxable admission charges, shall furnish immediately after each performance or occasion for which admission charges are collected, to the collector of the district in which such theater, hall, ballroom, or other place is located, a sworn statement on Form 827 showing the number of persons admitted, the amount paid for admission by each, the amount of tax collected, and the permanent address of the person responsible for making return on Form 729. It shall be the duty of every lessor or person who rents out any theater, hall, park, ballroom, or other place to furnish to the person leasing or renting the same a sufficient number of copies of Form 827 at the time of such lease or rental. Moreover, in such case the lessor, before or at the time of making the lease, must notify the collector of internal revenue of the district in which the place is located on Form 754 (Revised) that such lease is being made. The lessor of any such place, whenever he makes a lease, shall furnish the lessee with a copy of Form 755 (Revised), in order that the lessee may promptly claim any exemption to which he may be entitled. (See Art. 29.)

<sup>1</sup> "To the collector of the district in which the principal office or place of business is located," in Section 502 of the Act, means (1) if there is a definitely located place to which admission is charged, to the collector of the district in which such place of business is located; or (2) if the business is not definitely located but traveling or itinerant, to the collector of the district in which is located the principal office of such business or, if it has no office, the residence of its proprietor.

<sup>2</sup> Where a person, society, or organization acquires the right to dispose of all the admissions to any place for one or more occasions the transaction amounts to a lease of such place within the meaning of this article.

<sup>3</sup> If the lessee issues general admission tickets these tickets must not entitle to admission but be merely exchangeable for tickets of the lessor entitling to admission.

CHAPTER EIGHT

Credits and Refunds

Law ¶8018, ¶8023, ¶8057

6828 Art. 43. Credit for overpayment.—Any individual, corporation, partnership, or association that has paid to the collector of internal revenue, as a tax under section 800 of the Act, any amount in excess of the amount of the tax actually imposed by that section for the month covered by that payment, is authorized under section 1304 of the Act to claim credit for such overpayment against the amount of the tax imposed by section 800 which is due upon any other monthly return thereafter made in the same behalf on Form 729 (Revised) or on Form 729A (Revised).

6829 In case a credit is claimed a statement shall be attached to the return setting forth fully the facts regarding the alleged overpayment or overcollection. In the case of the overcollection of a tax no credit for the amount overcollected shall be allowed until the individual, corporation, partnership, or association making the overcollection submits a sworn statement that the tax in each case so overcollected has been returned to the person making the overpayment.

6830 It should be noted that the right to claim a credit exists only in the case of "overpayment or overcollection." These words are confined in general to cases where as the result of some clerical or mechanical error, an excess amount has been collected or paid.

6831 Art. 44. Refund of erroneous or illegal collections.—In all cases where tax has been collected and such collections are alleged to be illegal or erroneous it will be necessary for the person so paying the tax to file claim for refund on Treasury Department Form 46. Section 1304 of the Act does not authorize the individuals, corporations, partnerships, or associations receiving such tax to make refund nor to adjust the claim; the only adjustment authorized under this section of the Act being limited to cases of overpayment or overcollection of tax.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6832 Art. 45. Refund of overcollection.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association that has collected from any person, as a tax under section 800 of the Act, any amount in excess of the amount of the tax imposed by that section actually due from such person, shall upon proper application promptly refund such amount to the person entitled thereto, even though such amount has already been paid over to the collector of internal revenue and no corresponding credit (see Art. 43) has yet been secured. As the tax on admissions is based on the payment not the admission, no refund of any part of such a tax is authorized merely because the person paying for admission does not actually make use of his right to admission. Where, however, an amount paid for admission is refunded it will be treated, as far as the liability to the tax is concerned, as not having been paid, and the amount of any tax collected at the time of the payment should itself be refunded to the taxpayer by the person refunding the payment, at the same time the payment is refunded. As the tax on the permanent use or a lease for the use of a box or seat is based on the right to use (see Art. 6), it is entirely immaterial whether the box or seat is ever used or not, and, therefore, no refund can ever be granted on the ground that there was no actual use of the box or seat.

Willful refusal by any "person" <sup>1</sup> to "pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax, make such return or supply such information at the time or times required by law or regulation," or willful attempt "in any manner to evade such tax."	Fine of not more than $10,000.. or Imprisonment for not more than one year, or both.	1302 (b).
Willful refusal by any "person" <sup>1</sup> to "pay, collect, or truly account for and pay over any such tax."	100 per cent addition to tax....	1302 (c).
Embezzlement of money of United States.	Fine of not more than $5,000... or Imprisonment for not more than 5 years.	Section 47 U.S. Criminal Code.

<sup>1</sup> "Person" includes "an officer or employee of a corporation or a member or employee of a partnership, who as such officer, employee, or member is under a duty to perform the act in respect of which the violation occurs." (Section 1302 (d).)

6834 Art. 46. Penalties.—The scope of the penalties applicable to the Tax on Admissions is so broad that reference will be made only to their most common applications. Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association, on which there rests a duty to file a monthly return on Form 729 (Revised), that fails to file such return, and to pay over the tax due thereon, during the month which follows that for which such return should be made, is subject to certain penalties. A mere failure to file the return within that following month causes to accrue the 25 per cent penalty imposed by section 3176 of the Revised Statutes, as amended. If the failure be willful the penalty is 50 per cent instead of 25 per cent. A mere failure to pay to the collector during the month which follows that for which such return should be made, all taxes due under that return, causes to accrue, under section 502 of the Revenue Act of 1921, a penalty of 5 per cent, and of interest at 1 per cent per month for each full month of delay. Every person who fails to pay at the proper time the amount of the taxes due is also subject, under section 1302 of the Revenue Act of 1921, to a penalty of not more than $1,000. If this failure amounts to a willful refusal to pay, or an attempt to evade the tax, he is guilty of a misdemeanor and subject to a fine of not more than $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, and he is, moreover, liable to a penalty of 100 per cent of the amount of the tax. These penalties apply as well to an officer or employee of a place, or attraction, or ticket-selling business, who fails to perform a duty with regard to the Tax on Admissions, as to a person who fails or refuses to pay his tax. A willful conversion to one's own use of any tax collected under this act constitutes embezzlement, which is punishable by fine of not more than $5,000 or imprisonment for not more than five years, or both.

6835 Example.—A certain theater which sells about $1,000 worth of taxable admission tickets each month, regularly collects the taxes due on such admissions, but the treasurer carelessly fails to file a return and pay over the taxes for April, May, and June, 1922, until September 2, 1922. The taxes collected in April are $110, in May $100, and in June $120. In this case the penalties are as follows:

April:

In addition the theater treasurer is liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

(T. D. 3431.)

6837 Skating rinks: Charge for skate tickets: Court Decision.—The decision of the District Court of the United States, Western District of Washington, Southern Division, in the case of United States v. G. H. Koller and F. M. Farmer, the syllabus of which appears below [¶6838] is published not as a ruling of the Treasury Department, but for the information of internal revenue officers and others concerned. (T. D. 3431, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated January 22, 1923.)

[The syllabus referred to in ¶6837, above, follows.]

6838 1. Nature of tax.—The admissions tax imposed by Section 800 of the Revenue Act of 1918 is an excise tax.

6839 2. Skating Rinks: Charge for Skate Tickets: Taxability.—Where the owner of a skating rink which has operated for the general public makes an admission charge at the door of nine cents plus war tax of one cent, total ten cents, and a further charge for skate tickets which entitle the purchasers thereof to use the floor of said skating rink without extra charge, whether they use their own skates or those furnished by the said rink, the charge for skate tickets is not a rental for skates but is in fact a charge for admission to the skating floor, and is subject to the excise tax imposed by Section 800 (a) (1) and (c) of the Revenue Act of 1918.

6840 3. Regulations Approved.—Article 15 [now Art. 3, ¶6601; see beginning at ¶6617], Regulations No. 43 (Revised), Part I, is approved. (Syllabus referred to and made a part of T. D. 3431, ¶6837.)

(T. D. 3439.)

6841 Formal regulations relating to the tax on dues, amended.—Articles 9, 10, 11, and 12, Regulations 43, Part 2, Revised April, 1922, are hereby amended to read as follows [See ¶6881]:

6842 Art. 9. Dues or membership fees.—The Revenue Act of 1921 imposes a tax of 10 per cent on any amount paid as dues or membership fees (including all assessments except that portion thereof imposed for capital expenditures, and penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) to any club which is within the terms of the Act: Provided, That the regular dues or membership fees (including all assessments except that portion thereof imposed for capital expenditures levied upon all active resident annual members but not including penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) of an "active resident annual member" of such club are in excess of $10 per year. "An active resident annual member" is a member who is neither a life nor a nonresident member, but who in other respects enjoys full club privileges, as distinguished from the restricted privileges enjoyed by a person holding an associate or other partial membership. The phrase "imposed for capital expenditures" includes only those assessments or portions thereof which are levied or imposed in good faith to meet specified capital expenditures.

6843 Thus in the case of a club or organization the regular dues or membership fees of which are less than $10 per year, but which levies an assessment on its active resident annual members each year, if the regular dues or membership fees, plus that portion of the assessment not imposed for capital expenditures, exceed $10 per year, the tax is applicable. The tax would likewise apply in the case of a club or organization which collects no regular dues or membership fees but meets its expenses by levying assessments on its members as funds are required, provided, of course, such portions of the assessments not imposed for capital expenditures aggregate more than $10 per year for members who enjoy the full privileges of the club or organization.

6844 Where the dues or membership fees, determined in the manner herein outlined, of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year, dues or membership fees paid by other classes of members, whether or not they are in excess of $10 per year, are subject to the tax. So, also are extra charges which are imposed upon members for the privilege of using certain additional facilities for a period of time, as, for example, an additional charge of $60 per annum imposed upon members of a country club for the privilege of using the golf links. A "greens fee" charged to a guest is not taxable, unless the right or privilege granted in return is for a period of time, such as a season. A fine imposed for the violation of rules promulgated by a club or organization would be neither dues nor membership fees within the meaning of the Act, and therefore not taxable.

6845 As to the time for payment of the tax, see article 12 [¶6878].

6846 Examples.—(1) A certain social club has "members," nonresident members, associate members, and junior members. "Members" pay an initiation fee of $15 and regular dues of $10 per year. Associate members pay an initiation fee of $10 and regular dues of $5 per year. Nonresident members and junior members pay still less. In the case of this club a "member" is clearly the "active resident annual member" specified in the Act. As a "member's" regular dues are not in excess of $10 per year, none of the dues or membership fees paid by any member of the club are taxable. (The initiation fee of $15 paid by a "member" is taxable.)

6847 (2) A certain athletic club had members, dues, and fees precisely the same as those of this social club, except that the initiation fee of "members" is $10 and the regular dues of "members" are $15 per year. As these dues are in excess of $10 per year, in this case all dues paid to the club by members of any class are subject to tax.

6848 (3) The same athletic club levies in a certain year, in addition to its regular dues, an assessment (for other than capital expenditures) of $10 on every associate member and provides a penalty of $1 if it be not paid within a month after due. This assessment is taxable, and so is the penalty if it be imposed.

6849 (4) A member of this same athletic club violates the house rules and is suspended until he pays a fine of $15. As a fine is neither dues nor membership fees, this $15 payment is not taxable.

6850 (5) A certain golf club's dues are $15 per year. Of this amount $10 is expended in the purchase for the member of a season ticket to a municipal golf course. The whole $15 is, nevertheless, taxable as dues.

6851 (6) A certain golf club charges a "green" fee of $1 for each guest that uses the course. Such a fee is not paid "as dues or membership fees," and is, therefore, not taxable as such.

6852 (7) The members of a certain curling club pay annual dues of $20. By the payment of $10 extra per year the privilege of skating on the club's rink can be secured for the member's family. A payment of this extra $10 is taxable as a membership fee.

6853 (8) A certain social club, the regular dues of which are $15 per year, has honorary members who pay no dues, but pay assessments when levied. Such members must pay tax on such portion of the assessments which may be levied for other than capital expenditures.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6854 (9) A tennis club in which the annual dues are $10, levies an assessment of $2.00 per year on each member to cover cost of tennis balls.

The dues, fees, and such assessments paid by members of this club are taxable.

6855 (10) A certain club, the dues and fees of which are taxable, requests a "subscription" of a definite amount from each resident member.

Amounts paid by reason of such requests are taxable if intended to be used for purposes other than capital expenditures.

6856 (11) A social club, the annual dues of which are $10, levies an assessment of $5 on members, which assessment is imposed for other than capital expenditures. The tax applies with respect to amounts paid as dues, fees, and such assessments.

6857 (12) A certain social club, the dues and fees of which are taxable, passes a resolution providing that no membership dues or fees shall be collected from members who are in the military service of the United States. Such members thereafter pay no dues or fees and are therefore not liable for payment of tax with respect to membership in the club, but this does not relieve life members who are in the military service from payment of the tax on their life memberships.

6859 (14) The membership of a certain social club is composed of its stockholders. No dues are collected, but the expenses of the club are met by annual assessments of the necessary amount on each share of stock. If a stockholder enjoying full privileges of the club must pay assessments aggregating more than $10 per year, then the tax applies with respect to all assessments imposed by the club on its stockholders for other than capital expenditures, whether in excess of $10 per year or not.

6860 (15) A golf club levied an assessment on its members for the following purposes, to each of which a specified amount was assigned: to take up and redeem bonds soon to become due; to build a new barn on the club property; to purchase a tractor motor; to purchase and retire special memberships; to pay off a deficit from operations for the preceding year. The tax applies only to that part of the assessment imposed for the purpose of paying off the deficit, which is an assessment for running expenses; the remainder of the assessment was imposed for capital expenditures and is not taxable.

6861 Art. 10. Initiation fees.—Any amount paid as initiation fees to a club or organization coming within the provisions of section 801 of the Act to is subject to the 10 per cent tax imposed thereunder (a) if such fees amount to more than $10, or (b) if the dues or membership fees (not including initiation fees) of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year.

6862 If the prescribed initiation fees amount to more than $10, the tax attaches regardless of the amount of dues or membership fees paid by an active resident annual member. On the other hand, if the initiation fees amount to less than $10, the tax does not apply unless the dues or membership fees, exclusive of initiation fees, of an active resident annual member are in excess of $10 per year. If such dues or membership fees are in excess of $10 per year any amount paid as initiation fees is taxable whether or not such initiation fees amount to more than $10.

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6863 Where the application of the tax to initiation fees depends upon the amount paid as dues or membership fees by an active resident annual member, assessments other than those imposed for capital expenditures (but not penalties incurred by failure to pay promptly) are to be considered in ascertaining whether such dues or membership fees are in excess of $10 per year.

6864 The term "initiation fee" includes any payment to the club required for becoming a member, whether evidenced by a certificate of membership or a share of stock in the club or not. Thus, it includes amounts paid to such clubs or organizations for stock where the purchase of such stock is required as a prerequisite of membership. This applies only to stock purchased from the club or organization and not to amounts paid for stock purchased from retiring members or other sources.

6865 Examples.—(1) In the case of the social club described in the first example of article 9, above [¶6846], an initiation fee paid by a "member" is taxable because it amounts to more than $10, but initiation fees paid by members of the other classes are not taxable.

6866 (2) In the case of the athletic club described in the second example in article 9, above, initiation fees paid by members of any class are taxable, because the regular dues of "an active resident annual member" are in excess of $10 per year.

6867 (3) A certain tennis club is a stock corporation and each new member has to buy a share of stock in the club. The amount paid for this share of stock is taxable as an initiation fee.

6868 (4) The land of this same tennis club is owned by a corporation, organized for that purpose, in which many of the club members own stock. Money being desired to buy additional land, it is decided to admit no new members to the club except such as will buy, in addition to the share of stock in the club itself, one share of stock in the land-owning corporation. Money paid for this stock in the land-owning corporation is not taxable as an initiation fee.

6869 (5) The same tennis club, at a later stage of its career, drops the requirement of the purchase of stock in the land-owning corporation, but requires each applicant for membership, in addition to paying for his share of stock in the club corporation, to purchase a first mortgage bond secured by the club property. The amount paid for this bond is not taxable as an initiation fee.

6870 Art. 11. Life membership.—Amounts paid for life membership are 6561 not taxable under the Revenue Act of 1921. Neither were such 6562 to payments subject to the tax imposed under section 801 of the Revenue 6563 Act of 1918; but they were taxable under the Revenue Act of 1917.

The fact that tax was collected on amounts paid for life membership while the latter Act was in force does not entitle holders of live memberships who paid such tax to exemption from paying annually under the 1918 and 1921 Acts a tax equivalent to that paid by active resident annual members. Some clubs provide that active resident annual members, who have regularly paid dues or membership fees as such shall, after a specified period of time, for example, 10 years, automatically become life members without being required to pay further dues or membership fees. In such cases amounts paid as dues or membership fees during the period of active resident annual membership are not paid for life membership within the meaning of the Act. They are paid as dues or membership fees and are taxable as such. The tax likewise attaches to amounts paid for membership for more than one year but for less than life, such as 10-year or 20-year memberships. However, unless the holders of such memberships are required to pay annual dues or membership fees, or assessments imposed for other than capital expenditures, they are exempt from the annual tax imposed on active resident annual members and life members. If any dues or membership fees or such assessments are levied on such members they are taxable.

6871 The annual tax imposed on life members under the Revenue Act of 1921 is measured or determined by the tax paid by active resident annual members, to be computed in the manner outlined in article 9 [¶6842]. The annual tax must be paid by life members whether or not they actually avail themselves of the privileges of membership to which they are entitled.

6872 As to the time for the payment of the tax, see article 12 [¶6878].

6873 Examples.—(1) A certain tennis club has the following classes of membership: Honorary, life voting, voting, nonresident, women's and junior. Here evidently a voting member is the "active resident annual member" specified in the Revenue Act of 1921. A life voting member pays $500 on admission and is exempt from dues. The dues of a voting member are $30 a year, payable in advance in three installments of $10 each, payable January 1, May 1, and September 1, or February 1, June 1, and October 1, or March 1, July 1, and November 1, or April 1, August 1, and December 1, depending on the date on which the voting member was admitted to membership. If any installment is not paid on or before the 15th day of the month in which it is due a penalty of $2 must also be paid. In this case each life voting member must pay (to the club, for the Government imposes on it the duty of collection) a tax of $1 on May 1 and September 1, 1922, and on January 1, 1923, etc. If any one of these taxes is not paid to the club on or before the 15th day of the month in which it is payable, the tax will be $1.20 instead of $1. If it happens that an assessment of $20, imposed for other than capital expenditures, in addition to the regular dues and payable November 15, 1922, is levied on the voting members, then a tax of $2 from each life voting member must also be paid on that date to the club. If the $500 life voting membership fee was paid before November 1, 1917, or on or after April 1, 1919, it is not itself taxable, but if paid on or after November 1, 1917, and before April 1, 1919, it is subject to a tax of $50 under the Revenue Act of 1917.

6874 (2) A certain golf club has two classes of members, life members and "members." A life member pays $1,000 on admission and is exempt from dues. A "member's" dues are $60 a year, a $30 installment for January-June being payable April 1, and a $30 installment for July-December being payable October 1. In the case of this club it is clear that a "member" is the "active resident annual member" specified in the Revenue Act of 1921. John Smith is elected a life member of this club in February, 1919, and in that month pays his $1,000 fee and a tax of $100 thereon, under the Revenue Act of 1917. Under the Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921 he will have to pay (to the club, for the Government imposes on it the duty of collection) on April 1, 1919, a tax of $1.50, and on October 1, 1919, April 1, 1920, etc., a tax of $3—the same taxes as those Acts impose on a "member."

6875 (3) A certain social club has three classes of members, life members, active members, and associate members. The regular dues of the active members (clearly the "active resident annual members" specified in the Revenue Act of 1921—see art. 9, above) are $10 per year. Edwin Boyle became a life member in 1916, paying a fee of $100. That payment was not taxable. Nor does he have to pay any annual tax under the Revenue Act of 1921. For by that Act he is to pay the same annual tax as "an active resident annual member," and as the regular dues of "an active resident annual member" are not in excess of $10 per year, such a member pays no tax whatsoever. (See art. 9, above [¶6842].)

TAX ON ADMISSIONS AND DUES REGULATIONS.

6876 (4) A certain club the dues and fees of which are taxable has life members who do not avail themselves of the privileges of membership. Each of such life members must pay the tax imposed by section 801 of the Revenue Act of 1921 so long as he holds a life membership in the club.

6877 (5) A certain social club the dues and fees of which are taxable passes a resolution providing that no membership dues or fees shall be collected from members who are in the military service of the United States. Such members thereafter pay no dues or fees and are therefore not liable for payment of tax with respect to membership in the club, but this does not relieve life members who are in the military service from payment of the tax on their life memberships.

6878 Art. 12. Duty to collect, return, and pay tax.—Every club, organization, corporation, partnership, or individual receiving any taxable payment to for dues or fees, must at the time of such receipt, collect the tax from the person making such payment. And there rests on such person the corresponding duty of then paying such tax. Where the dues or membership fees are payable in periodical installments, the tax shall be collected as and when each installment is paid. In the case of assessments imposed for other than capital expenditures, the tax is due and shall be collected and paid when such assessments are paid. The tax on initiation fees is due and payable at the time of payment of such fees.

6879 Every club or organization having life members taxable under the Revenue Act of 1921, must collect from such life members the tax imposed on them by that Act. And such life members must, on their part, promptly pay such tax. It shall be collected and paid "at the time for the payment of dues by active resident annual members." Thus, if the dues or membership fees of an active resident annual member, or if another designation is used, the member whose privileges correspond to those usually enjoyed by active resident annual members (see art. 9 [¶6842]), are payable in periodical installments the tax due from life members becomes due and shall be collected and paid as and when these installments are paid. If assessments imposed for other than capital expenditures are levied on active resident annual members, there shall be collected from live members at the time such assessments are paid a tax equivalent to 10 per cent of the amount so paid.

6881 Changes effected by T. D. 3439, ¶6841 to 6880 above.—The expression (see third line of ¶6534) "including recurrent assessments, assessments for running expenses" is changed (see third line of ¶6842) to "including all assessments except that portion thereof imposed for capital expenditures"; corresponding and related changes are made throughout. Example (15) in Art. 9, ¶6860, is new.—The Corporation Trust Company.

INSTRUCTIONS

Special-tax liability is reckoned from the first of July of each year or the first day of the month during which business is commenced to the thirtieth day of June following. Where business is begun after the month of July the tax to be remitted is computed by multiplying the monthly rate stated above by the number of months remaining in the fiscal year and if the amount resulting involves a fraction the full cent must be included. For example, a pawnbroker begins business during September:  $$8.33\frac{1}{2}$  is multiplied by 10, which equals  $$83.34$  or  $$83.34$  to be remitted.

If application on this Form is not filed with the Collector during the month in which the liability began a 25 per cent penalty is incurred. Applicant must appear in person before an officer qualified to administer oaths and "swear" to the correctness of the information given on the application. If the amount of tax covered by this return is not in excess of $10, the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

On the first line must be entered the name of the actual owner or owners of the business which may be followed by a "trade name" if desired, but no application will be accepted nor special-tax stamp issued in a trade name only. File promptly, follow instructions carefully, and thus avoid delays.

* If business is carried on contrary to the laws of the State, Territory, or District of the United States, or in any place where prohibited by local or municipal law, in addition to all other taxes, special or otherwise; monthly  $$83.33\frac{1}{2}$ ; annual $1,000 shall be paid.

‡ In the case of theaters, museums, or concert halls, in cities, towns, or villages of 5,000 inhabitants or less, the amount of tax shall be one-half of that stated above.

‡ This tax is payable for exhibitors in each State, Territory, or District of Columbia.

‡ The tax in these cases is to be computed on the basis of sales for the preceding year, to be reported on reverse side.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

INSTRUCTIONS

PLEASURE BOATS

1. WHAT IS TAXED.—Subject to exemptions noted hereunder, a special tax is imposed upon the use of yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats with fixed engines, and sailing boats, of over five net tons, length over 32 feet, at the following rates:

- (a) Over five net tons, length over 32 feet and not over 50 feet.....$1.00 each foot
- (b) Over five net tons, length over 50 feet and not over 100 feet.....$2.00 each foot
- (c) Over five net tons, length over 100 feet.....$4.00 each foot

2. EXEMPTIONS.—The law exempts from tax—

- (a) Boats used exclusively for trade. ("Trade" is held to be any serious activity which constitutes the means of livelihood of the owner, lessee, or charterer.)
- (b) Boats used exclusively for fishing. (This refers to commercial fishing and not fishing for pleasure.)
- (c) Boats used exclusively for national defense.
- (d) Boats built according to plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department.
- (e) Boats used without profit by benevolent, charitable, or religious organizations exclusively for furnishing aid, comfort, or relief to seamen.

3. PERSONS LIABLE FOR RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—The owner, lessee, or charterer of every boat described in par. 1 is required to file return and pay the required tax, unless the boat is exempt under par. 2. No return is required on boats specifically exempt or those falling below the tonnage and footage specifications mentioned in par. 1.

4. HOW TO ESTIMATE NET TONNAGE.—To estimate roughly the net tonnage of a vessel the following rules may be used:

- (a) By the word "ton" is meant 100 cubic feet of space.
- (b) Multiply the extreme length of the vessel by the extreme breadth and that product by the depth from the underside of the deck to the frame in the hold taken amidships. The result obtained should be multiplied by six-tenths. To this result should be added the cubical contents of any closed-in structure above the upper deck. The sum should be divided by 100, which will give the approximate gross tonnage of the boat.
- (c) From this gross tonnage may be deducted all spaces used exclusively in connection with the navigation of the boat or for the exclusive use of the crew, such as a reasonable amount for machinery space, space for officers and crew but not for passengers (who include all persons not actual members of the crew), storage of sails, navigation instruments, boatswain's stores, etc. The result will be the approximate net tonnage of the boat.
- (d) If the net tonnage estimated is more than four net tons, and the length over 32 feet, application should be made to the nearest customs officer for official measurement. If an official measurement is not completed before the date on which a return is required, a return should be rendered; and if the estimate of net tonnage, made as above directed, is over five net tons, the tax should be paid. If the official measurement should later show that no tax was due, a claim should be made for the refund of the tax.

5. HOW TO ASCERTAIN THE OVER-ALL LENGTH.—Over-all length is defined as the extreme length of the structure, i. e., from the forward side of the stem outside the planking or plating to the aftermost side of the stern planking or plating, whether above or below the water line. The measurement should be to the outside of any planking or plating extending above the deck, constituting bulwarks, and to the outside of any forecask deck, quarter deck, or poop deck extending beyond the main deck. The length should be taken in a straight line, excluding any sheer there may be to the deck.

6. HOW TO COMPUTE TAX.—In the case of a boat over five net tons, multiply the rate of the class in which the boat is included by the number representing the length over all in full feet. For example, a boat 49.5 feet in length is taxable at the rate of $1 for each foot, or $49; a boat 50.5 feet in length is in the same class and taxable at $1 per foot, or $50.

AUTOMOBILES

7. PERSONS LIABLE FOR RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—Persons carrying on the business of operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire are required to file return and pay special tax on each automobile as follows:

	Annual rate.	Monthly rate.
Seating capacity over 2 but not over 7.....	$10	$0.83
Seating capacity more than 7.....	$20	$1.66

GENERAL

8. WHEN RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX MUST BE MADE.—These taxes become due on the first day of July in each year, or on commencing the business on which a tax is imposed or placing a boat in use. In the former case the tax shall be reckoned for one year and in the latter case it shall be reckoned proportionately from the first day of the month in which the liability to special tax commenced to the first day of July following. Returns with proper amount of tax due must be filed with the collector not later than the last day of the month in which special tax liability commenced. A separate return must be filed for each automobile operated or rented for hire, and for each boat.

9. If tax liability, as shown by the return, is more than $10, applicant must appear in person before an officer qualified to administer oaths and swear to the correctness of the information given on the application. If the tax is $10 or less, return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses, who will affix their signatures.

Follow instructions carefully and file promptly in order to avoid penalties imposed for delinquency in filing return and paying tax, or making false or fraudulent return.

7537 Art. 1. Scope of regulations.—These regulations relate to the 7501 special taxes upon businesses and occupations, imposed by subdivisions (1) to (11), inclusive, of section 1001, and upon the use of boats, imposed by section 1003, of the Revenue Act of 1921.

SPECIAL TAXES UPON BUSINESSES AND OCCUPATIONS.

7538 Art. 2. Effective date.—The effective date of the special tax on occupations enumerated in section 1001 of the act is July 1, 1922.

7539 Art. 3. Use of terms.—In these regulations—for convenience unless obviously inapplicable—

7540 The term "person" shall include partnerships, corporations, and associations as well as individuals;

7541 The term "secondary tax" shall mean the tax imposed on brokers by reason of their ownership of a membership or seat, valued at $2,000 or more, in a stock or produce exchange, board of trade, or similar organization;

7542 The term "fiscal year" shall mean the period from July 1 of each calendar year to June 30, inclusive of the following calendar year.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7543 Art. 4. Basis of tax.—The tax is upon the engaging in or carrying on of a business or occupation. If a person does not engage in or carry on any of the businesses or occupations specified in section 1001 during the taxable period, no special tax liability is incurred. If, however, he does carry on a business upon which a tax is imposed during any portion of the taxable year, he is liable to tax from the first of the month during which he begins business to the end of the taxable period. (See sec. 3237, R. S., as amended by sec. 53, act of Oct. 1, 1890 [26 Stat., 567].)

BROKERS.

[See beginning at ¶3720.]

7544 Art. 5. Brokers: Persons liable.—Only those persons who have a 3720 business of their own as distinguished from that of their employer or 7502 employers are liable to special tax as brokers. Any person who holds himself out as a broker and is engaged in the business of negotiating purchases or sales of any of the articles enumerated is liable to tax. It is not necessary that the brokerage business shall be the sole business of a person in order that liability to tax shall attach. Any person who, in connection with his profession or occupation, makes it a regular part of his business to negotiate purchases or sales for others of articles enumerated is liable to tax. Mere casual or incidental negotiation of purchases or sales for others of articles enumerated does not constitute a business for the purpose of the tax. The following among others are subject to special tax as brokers:

7546 (b) A bank which sells checks drawn by any person or concern in which it has no property interest, if such transactions are engaged in with such frequency or in such a way as to constitute a business;

7547 (c) An agent occupying an independent status and not that of an employee who negotiates the sale of foreign money orders for a steamship company; the fact that he maintains a place where the money orders are issued is evidence of an independent status;

7548 (d) A person who, under an agreement previously made with dealers, engages in the business of issuing orders upon those dealers for certain articles or commodities to parties who desire to purchase such articles or commodities;

7549 (e) One who holds himself out as dealing in exchange and in the regular course of business accepts orders and takes them to a bank for execution by the latter, receiving substantial remuneration for his services;

7550 (f) An express company engaged in the business of buying or selling foreign money orders or bills of exchange for others;

7551 (g) A real estate or business broker who lists and negotiates purchases or sales of produce or merchandise independently of purchases or sales of real estate or businesses, or holds himself out as being engaged in the business of negotiating, for others, purchases or sales of produce or merchandise;

7552 (h) A commission merchant receiving produce or merchandise on consignment to sell for the account of the consignors;

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7553 (i) A dealer in securities of a given kind for the account of an underwriter or other broker;

7554 (j) An auctioneer who maintains auction rooms or other place of business to which produce or merchandise is sent to be sold for the account of the consignor;

7555 (k) A factor who advances money to farmers on crops which are to be placed with him to be sold on commission.

7556 (l) A tobacco warehouseman whose business it is to arrange that tobacco growers shall bring their produce to the warehouse to be sold at auction and that tobacco buyers shall attend such auction sales and bid for the tobacco. [4th C. C. of A., in Cothran & Connally vs. U. S., so held, Oct. 21, 1922.—1922 War Tax Service, ¶7667. (T. D. 3413.)]

7557 Auctioneers as brokers.—Reference is made to an inquiry received in this office in regard to the applicability of tax under section 1001, paragraph (1), of the Revenue Act of 1918, on brokers. You are advised that this office confirms its previous ruling as follows:

“Auctioneers making sales on a farm or premises of the owner of goods are not subject to the broker’s tax for the reason that they are only agents of their employers. An auctioneer, however, who has auction rooms, or other places of business, to which persons send goods or merchandise to be sold, is held to be carrying on a brokerage business and is amenable to the special tax under section 1001 of the Revenue Act of 1918.” [Applies to 1921 Act as well. See ¶7580c.]

7558 A distinction is made between an auctioneer who has a place of business of his own and occupies an independent status, and an agent of another negotiating the sale of goods at another’s place of business. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Deputy Commissioner James M. Baker, and dated July 28, 1920.)

7559 Art. 6. Persons not liable.—The following persons are not subject to special tax as brokers where the business mentioned herein is the only business conducted by such persons. If, however, coupled with a business mentioned in this article any such person engages in any of the occupations mentioned in Article 5, or other brokerage transactions, to such an extent as to constitute a business, such person must pay the tax, although at the same time he engages in other occupations, not in themselves such as to subject such person to liability for special tax as a broker:

7560 (a) Any persons who only occasionally or incidentally engages in brokerage transactions;

7561 (b) A person loaning money for himself or for others, on commission;

7562 (c) A bank which does not engage in the negotiating of purchases or sales of stocks or bonds as a business, but merely negotiates the purchase and sale thereof for depositors and other patrons without remuneration and for their accommodation only;

7563 (d) A bank which sells its own drafts upon the foreign correspondent of another institution, if it has at the time of the drawing of such drafts credit with such correspondent, or if the drafts are drawn on credit which it is the intent to obtain. Such a bank acts as a principal and not as a broker. A bank which sells drafts or orders drawn by others, if the drafts or orders are sold by the bank as its own property, whether or not it paid cash for them or obtained them under a credit arrangement, likewise acts as a principal and not as a broker;

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

- 7564 (e) A bank which effects a financial arrangement to carry out the terms of a sale where the purchaser and seller of merchandise have previously agreed upon the kind and quantity of the merchandise to be sold and upon the terms of the sale;
- 7565 (f) A person selling securities which he has purchased prior to the sale thereof and which he sells for his own account;
- 7566 (g) A person dealing in oil leases only;
- 7567 (h) A person holding a seat in a stock exchange but transacting no business for others;
- 7568 (i) A person negotiating purchases and sales of real estate;
- 7569 (j) A person who receives and negotiates the transmission of money abroad where there are neither purchases nor sales of any money orders, drafts, bills of exchange, or any other instruments constituting exchange;
- 7570 (k) A person negotiating loans and requiring the borrowers to pay a commission to the person securing the loan, drawing papers, or examining titles;
- 7571 (l) A railway agent who exchanges foreign money for American money and vice versa, merely in the transaction of the freight and passenger business of his company;
- 7572 (m) A loan and mortgage company which loans its own funds upon notes or bonds secured by mortgage or trust deed of real estate and which subsequently sells such notes or bonds so taken, on its own account and for its own profit or loss;
- 7573 (n) A person employed by a coal company, as agent to negotiate sales of coal for the company on a commission basis;
- 7574 (o) A traveling or other salesman who has no business of his own but is an employee of the firm or firms which he represents;
- 7575 (p) A person who buys or sells Liberty bonds or other securities for himself, purchasing them with his own money, title to the securities actually passing to or being in such person;
- 7576 (q) A person engaged in the business of placing loans secured by notes and mortgages upon real estate, acting only as agent and receiving a commission for his services;
- 7577 (r) An agent of a mill or factory who is in fact a part of the sales department of such mill or factory, and performs such services as selling the goods, determining what fabrics or products the mill or factory can best make, designing fabrics, indorsing notes of the mill or factory, and otherwise financing the mill or factory, or providing expert advice to it.
- 7578 (s) A person having territorial rights for the sale of articles placed in his possession, when sold in his own name;
- 7579 (t) A corporation selling its own stock through its own employees who are acting under its exclusive supervision and control;
- 7580 (u) A person engaged in the business of buying and selling tickets;
- 7580a (v) Live stock brokers and live stock commission merchants.
- 7580b (w) A person negotiating purchases or sales of businesses;
- 7580c (x) An auctioneer who makes sales of produce or merchandise on the farm or premises of the owner.

7581 Art. 7. Secondary tax.—A broker who owns seats in different exchanges is liable to the secondary tax upon the value of a seat (valued at $2,000 or more) in each exchange. A broker who owns a number of seats in the same exchange is liable to the secondary tax upon only the value of a single seat. A partnership or corporation doing a brokerage business is liable to both the primary and secondary tax to the same extent as an individual. It is immaterial that the seat in the exchange through which the partnership transacts business is held in the name of an individual. Where two or more members of a partnership doing a brokerage business own seats in the same exchange and all the business transacted by such partners is for the partnership, the partnership is liable to the secondary tax upon the value of only a single seat in the exchange. Where all the trading done by the members of a firm or partnership is for the firm or partnership but one payment of special tax is required. If, however, at any time purchases or sales of securities are made for others upon a commission basis by any member of the firm or partnership for his own account and not for the account of the firm or partnership special tax liability is incurred by the individual; secondary tax liability is also incurred provided the individual owns a membership or seat (valued at $2,000 or more) in a stock or produce exchange, board of trade, or similar organization. For example, A, B, and C, members of a partnership, each own a membership in the same exchange; but one special tax and one secondary tax are due so long as all the trading is done for the partnership; but if any one of the members accepts individual commissions then such member is individually liable to special tax and secondary tax in addition to the tax imposed on the partnership. Where the possession of a share of stock is a prerequisite to membership in a stock exchange a lessee of a share of stock in such exchange actually carrying on a brokerage business is liable to the secondary tax and not the lessor of the share. The secondary tax on a membership in a stock or produce exchange should be paid in the district where special tax as a broker is paid; for example, a broker in Boston is a member of the New York Stock Exchange and subject to secondary tax by reason of such membership. Such secondary tax should be paid to the collector of the district in which Boston is located and not to the collector of the district in which the New York Stock Exchange is located, unless such broker maintains a branch office in New York and pays special tax therefor.

7582 Art. 8. Branch offices.—Inasmuch as the payment of one special tax cannot cover the doing of business by a broker in branch offices, a broker who maintains such branch offices is required to pay a special tax in respect of the main office and of each branch office where a brokerage business is conducted. The special tax is not required in the case of a branch office similar to the smaller offices frequently located in hotels, where the duties of the clerks employed are restricted to the taking of orders and their transmission to the main office without transacting any other business. The special tax must be paid, however, with respect to branch offices or brokers that are equipped to do and who actually do a brokerage business. A branch office, organized for the transaction of business, which receives orders, disburses funds and renders statements to its customers, must pay the special tax provided. The distinction to be drawn is whether a brokerage business is transacted at the branch office. It is considered that business is so transacted unless the activities of the branch house are restricted to the receipt of orders and money for transmission to the parent house and to the disbursement of such funds only as are received from the parent house with specific, detailed instructions as to their disposition.

PAWNBROKERS.

7583 Art. 9. Pawnbrokers: Delivery.—Delivery of personal property as 7503 security for the repayment of money loaned thereon is necessary to incur liability to special tax as a pawnbroker. By agreement of the parties the pledge may be deposited in the hands of a third person instead of being delivered to the pawnbroker.

7584 Art. 10. Persons liable.—The following, among others, are liable to tax as pawnbrokers:

7585 (a) A person using no tickets in his business, but making a pretense of buying articles which are brought to him which he holds under a verbal agreement that the articles can be bought back again by the person selling them upon the payment of a specified bonus;

7586 (b) A concern though called a bank which has practically no deposits and almost its entire business is the loaning of money on automobiles secured by warehouse receipts.

7587 Art. 11. Persons not liable.—A person is not required to pay a special tax as a pawnbroker for occasional or incidental acts which can not be regarded as constituting his business or occupation. Banks doing a bona fide banking business are not required to pay tax as pawnbrokers in cases where they accept diamonds or jewelry or other personal property as collateral security for the making or extension of loans if such loans are made on the same conditions and at the same rate of interest as other loans, provided such loans comprise the smaller portion of the loan business of the bank. Bankers who are able to show that they did not invite or cater to persons desiring to borrow money on articles of personal property, but merely made such loans upon request of and to oblige persons doing other business with them or who have taken such property as security only to save themselves from loss in connection with loans previously made are not liable to the special tax. The special tax on pawnbrokers is not required to be paid for making loans on chattel mortgages or in any case where chattels or personal property are not taken or received by way of pledge, pawn, or exchange.

SHIP BROKERS.

7588 Art. 12. Ship brokers: Persons liable.—Persons engaged in the 7504 business of negotiating freights and business of a similar kind and character for the owners of vessels or for the shippers or consignors or consignees of freight carried by vessels are subject to tax as ship brokers. Liability to tax is not incurred unless the work performed is of the same general character as the negotiation of freights. Persons acting as agents for ship owners in finding charterers for their ships or as agents for charterers in finding ships available for charter are ship brokers. A person whose business it is to furnish sailors on a commission basis or for a flat rate for each sailor furnished is not a ship broker. An express company which undertakes for a lump sum to deliver freight at some foreign port and makes arrangement with various railroad and steamship lines on its own account and not as the agent of the shippers for the transportation of such freight is not a ship broker. A person who as an agent of the consignee attends to the proper forwarding of goods consigned to domestic or foreign ports, sees that proper inspection is made and manifests issued is not a ship broker, but a customhouse broker. A person performing both the duties of a ship broker and a customhouse broker is subject to the special tax of both a ship broker and a customhouse broker.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

CUSTOMHOUSE BROKERS

7589 Art. 13. Customhouse brokers: Persons liable.—A person or firm
7505 holding himself or itself out to the public as engaged in the occupation of customhouse broker either by maintaining an office or sending out literature or advertising matter is required to pay special tax as a customhouse broker. If the business of such a person is transacted by employees at offices at different ports, a separate and distinct special tax must be paid for each office. A special tax stamp taken out by a person in his own name as a customhouse broker is sufficient to cover the business done by him in his own name at the place of business stated therein whether such business is done by him on his own account or as an agent for other persons. Persons whose occupation it is as agents of others to enter and clear vessels in the customhouse are not relieved from special tax as customhouse brokers on the ground that they have paid special tax as ship brokers. A railroad or other corporation operated by the United States and acting as the agent of others to arrange entries and other customhouse papers acts in a governmental capacity and is not liable to tax.

THEATERS, MUSEUMS, AND CONCERT HALLS.

7590 Art. 14. Theaters, museums, and concert halls: Persons liable.—
7506 The tax is upon the business of operating a theater, museum, or concert hall where a charge for admission is made. A person owning a theater which is not used at any time during the taxable year is not liable to tax. A "proprietor" of a theater, museum, or concert hall is the owner of such a building, or the lessee or tenant if the building is leased or rented. The owner is liable for the special tax unless the building is under lease at the time the tax is due, in which case the tax shall be paid by the lessee unless otherwise stipulated between the parties to the lease. (See art. 20.) The tax is upon each theater operated by the proprietor. If the same proprietor has theaters in different internal-revenue districts, the tax due upon each theater must be paid in the district in which such theater is located.

7591 Art. 15. "Charge for admission."—By a "charge or admission" is meant a charge for the right or privilege to enter or remain in a theater, museum, or concert hall for a limited time. No liability to tax is incurred by a proprietor on account of the giving of moving picture exhibitions or concerts where no admission fee is charged and only collections are taken up, persons in the audience contributing if they see fit.

7592 Art. 16. Theater defined.—Only an "edifice" (a building or structure of a permanent character) used for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays, or performances for admission to which entrance money is received is to be regarded as a theater. A railroad car or a boat fitted up as a theater and traveling about from place to place is to be regarded as an edifice. An open-air theater with a permanent roof over the audience or the stage is an edifice, but an airdome or tent is not. Where the proprietor of a theater operates a theater at one location and an airdome at another location he is subject to tax under this subdivision with respect to the operation of the theater and under subdivision (7) upon the operation of the airdome. Where an airdome is operated in connection with a theater, the same ticket admitting a patron to either the theater or airdome, a special tax stamp under this subdivision is required for the theatre and one under subdivision (7) for the airdome.

7593 Art. 17. Exemptions.—(a). Halls or armories rented occasionally for the purpose of dramatic or operatic or other representations, plays, or performances for admission to which a charge is made are exempt from tax. Liability to tax is not determined by the average number of times per month that such hall or armory may be rented for dramatic representations, but upon the primary usage of the hall or armory for such representations. The proprietor of an exhibition or show for money renting the hall or armory is liable to tax under subdivision (7).

7593a (b). Edifices owned by religious, educational or charitable institutions, societies or organizations where the proceeds from admissions inure exclusively to the benefit of such institutions, societies, or organizations or exclusively to the benefit of persons in the military or naval forces of the United States, are exempt from tax. To qualify for exemption the institution, society or organization must be the owner of the edifice; and (1) it must have a definite organization, with officers, directors, or trustees, and the usual essential features (incorporation not being essential) of an association of its class; (2) it must have a purpose which, as put into practice, is religious, educational, or charitable; and (3) its funds must be used exclusively in furtherance of such purpose, none of them being paid or otherwise being distributed to any of its members except as charity or as reasonable compensation for services actually rendered.

7594 Art. 18. Theaters open for part of year only.—Where theaters are entirely closed to performances during the months of July and August and open in the month of September the special tax is to be reckoned from the first day of September to the last day of June following at the specified annual rate—that is, for 10 months. Where a theater is closed before the end of a fiscal year, the stamp issued has no redeemable value.

7595 Art. 19. Seating capacity.—Where seats consist of boards or benches, seating capacity should be ascertained by allowing space for each spectator of the same width as the inside measurement of the average or standard theater chair. Where, after payment of special tax at a certain rate, the seating capacity of a theater is increased beyond that which the tax previously paid is sufficient to cover, an additional amount must be paid as special tax equal to the difference between the amount of tax due upon the enlarged theater and the value of the old special tax stamp, computed from the first day of the month in which the seating capacity of the theater was increased to June 30 following. For example:

Special tax due and paid July 1, 1922.....	$50.00
Seating capacity increased Oct. 10, 1922 (new rate).....	100.00

Difference.....	$50.00
-----------------	---------

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7596 Since nine months are remaining in the fiscal year from the date of October 1, the additional tax due is nine-twelfths of $50, or $37.50, which amount must be paid to the collector and evidenced by receipt on Form 1. This receipt must be posted with the special tax stamp in the place of business of the holder until the close of the fiscal year, when a new special tax stamp for the succeeding fiscal year must be procured. A person failing to pay special tax covering increased seating capacity within the month during which liability begins, incurs liability to the penalty imposed by Section 1004 of the Revenue Act of 1921. Where a special tax stamp "at large" is issued to a proprietor of a traveling theater having a seating capacity of more than 250 and not exceeding 500 the stamp is good for any theater having a seating capacity of not exceeding 500. No new liability is created when the proprietor gives a performance in a theater with a seating capacity of less than 250. If, however, he gives a performance in a theater having a seating capacity of more than 500, liability at the increased rate of tax is incurred.

7597 Art. 20. Transfer of stamp.—A special tax stamp taken out by the proprietor of a theater who transfers his interest to another person can not be transferred and made to answer for such other person in conducting the theater. A special tax stamp is personal to the one to whom issued. Upon request to the collector he may have the stamp transferred from one place of business to another. Thus, if a proprietor of a theater closes it during the summer season he may have his stamp transferred to a summer theater, provided the seating capacity of such theater is not greater than that of his other theater; if the seating capacity of the summer theater is greater than that of his other theater, the proprietor will be required to pay an additional tax, measured by the difference in seating capacity. The proprietor of a summer theater who operates another theater during the winter season may likewise have his special tax stamp transferred from his summer theater to his other theater.

7598 Art. 21. Population.—In determining population of cities, towns, or villages latest United States census figures are to be used, unless a State census has been taken more recently, in which case the State census figures shall be used. However, in case of a sudden and considerable increase or decrease in population since the last United States or State census, the collector of the district in which the particular city, town, or village is located shall determine the population from the best evidence available, which may be common knowledge, and the tax shall be paid accordingly.

CIRCUSES.

7599 Art. 22. Circuses: Persons liable.—Exhibitions or feats of horsemanship which occur on race tracks are subject to a special tax of $100; but mere tests of speed of horses in racing or jumping contests are not regarded as feats of horsemanship within the meaning of the statute. The "theatrical performances" contemplated by this subdivision are only those which are given in connection with a circus. A show under canvas exhibiting among other things acrobatic and athletic exercises, but no feats of horsemanship, and having no menagerie, is not subject to special tax as a circus if these exercises are few and simple, but is taxable under subdivision

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

(7). A small wagon show having no "circus feats," but only trapeze performing, wire walking, trained ponies, singing, and dancing, is not to be regarded as a circus, but is taxable under subdivision (7). A "round-up" and like contests in which the contestants are from the locality, sponsored and financed by citizens of the community, are not circuses even though feats of horsemanship are shown and no tax liability as a circus is incurred. A Wild West show is taxable as a circus. Side shows at circuses are liable to tax under subdivision (7).

7600 Art. 23. Payment in different States.—Where a circus is exhibiting in any State in the month of July the special tax of $100 is required to be paid for the year beginning July 1. If in the following month the circus goes into another State the special tax at the rate of $100 for the year is to be reckoned from the first day of August to the last day of June following, and a separate special tax stamp must be taken out for that State, and for every other State, Territory, or District in which performances are given. If a circus, after leaving a State in which special tax has been paid, returns before the close of the fiscal year, no further special tax is due.

OTHER PUBLIC EXHIBITIONS OR SHOWS.

7601 Art. 24. Other public exhibitions or shows for money: Taxable ex-
7508 hibitions.—Proprietors or agents of all public exhibitions or shows for money not enumerated in the two previous subdivisions are liable to tax under this subdivision. The proprietors of the following exhibitions or shows are liable to tax under this subdivision:

7602 (a) An airdrome or summer theater which has no roof over the auditorium or stage;

7603 (b) A theatrical troupe traveling around the country and giving performances in halls or auditoriums for which special taxes have not been paid by the owners or lessees thereof;

7604 (c) An open-air picture exhibition for admission to which a charge is made;

7605 (d) An exhibition or show given on fair grounds but not under the management of the fair association;

7606 (e) A side show at a carnival or circus to which an admission fee is charged;

7607 (f) A dancing pavilion upon a pier where a charge is made for the privilege of going upon the pier as spectators;

7608 (g) A public dance hall, if a charge is made to persons who attend as spectators;

7609 (h) An illustrated lecture to which an admission fee is charged;

7610 (i) Baseball games by professionals or semiprofessionals to which an admission fee is charged;

7611 (j) Concert gardens where no admission fee is charged but where drinks are sold and stage and other entertainments are given.

7612 Art. 25. Exhibitions not taxable.—Subdivision (7) specifically provides "that this paragraph shall not apply to Chautauquas, lecture lyceums, agricultural or industrial fairs, or exhibitions held under the auspices of religious or charitable associations." Illustrated lectures or other exhibitions given by bona fide lecture lyceums or Chautauquas in a tent or other place during the usual Chautauqua or lecture lyceum season are exempt from tax. Exhibitions or shows given by an agricultural or industrial fair association in connection with the conduct of a fair are likewise exempt from tax. It is immaterial whether a separate charge is made for admission to such exhibitions or shows. Where, however, an exhibition or show, for admission to which a charge is made, is conducted on the fair grounds, but is not given by the fair association, the proprietor of such exhibition or show is liable to special tax. Special tax is not required to be paid by proprietors of restaurants or cafes employing orchestras during the meal hours for the entertainment of patrons. Amateur theatrical exhibitions either in private houses or in licensed public halls to which an admission fee is charged to cover expenses incurred in giving the exhibition, and not for the pecuniary profit of the performers or the manager, are not such performances as are subject to special tax. Owners or agents of theatrical troupes giving performances only in halls or auditoriums for which special taxes have been paid by the owner or lessee thereof are not subject to tax. Persons conducting stands and raffling devices at beaches, summer resorts, and similar places, at which no charge is made for admission but only a charge for taking a chance, are not subject to the tax. This is also true of merry-go-rounds, shoot-the-chutes, and similar amusement devices.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7613 Art. 26. Aggregation of entertainments.—An aggregation of entertainments known as a street fair is not subject to a larger tax than $100 in any State, Territory, or the District of Columbia. When seven or more separate entertainments are under the same management and are conducted in connection with a street fair, the total amount of tax payable shall not exceed $100. These aggregations usually include such exhibitions or shows as "pit shows," "rides," "dare-devil entertainments," imitation Wild West shows, or trained animals. A special tax stamp has been provided for such aggregations.

BOWLING ALLEYS.

7614 Art. 27. Bowling alleys: Scope of tax.—In every building or place where bowls are thrown each division or track is a separate alley, for which a special tax must be paid. Proprietors of bowling alleys and billiard and pool tables in clubs, Y. M. C. A. buildings, hotels, fraternity houses, lodge rooms, State armories, fire houses, and similar places are subject to special tax unless the bowling alley or billiard and pool tables are supported out of funds contributed by a State or a subdivision of a State. The Italian game of "Boccie" is taxable under this subdivision. Bagatelle and tivolli tables and Japanese rolling ball games are not subject to tax. No liability is incurred where tables or alleys are not actually used, in which case pins and bowls should be removed from the alleys and cushions from tables. The person for the time being in possession or control of a billiard table or bowling alley is prima facie the proprietor of the alley or table and liable to the special tax even if the property and ultimate control of the table and place where it is located are in some one else. A "private home" is held to be an individual or family residence. The mere fact that no charge is made for use of the tables or alleys, or that they are not operated for profit, does not relieve the proprietor from payment of the special tax.

7615 Art. 28. Transfer of special tax stamp.—When a person who has taken out a special tax stamp for a bowling alley closes the alley and thereafter opens another the stamp may be transferred to the latter.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

SHOOTING GALLERIES.

7616 Art. 29. Shooting galleries: Persons liable.—Every person who is 7510 in possession and control of any building, space, tent, or area where a charge is made for the discharge of firearms at any form of target is liable to tax. A club which charges annual dues and in addition makes a charge to cover operating expenses of a shooting range is liable to tax. The tax attaches in the case of a gun club where the membership dues specifically cover participation in shoots or tournaments.

RIDING ACADEMIES.

7617 Art. 30. Riding academies: Liability to tax.—Only a proprietor of 7511 a riding academy who maintains a building, space, tent, or area where a charge is made for instruction in horsemanship or for facilities for the practice of horsemanship is liable to tax. Persons who are engaged merely in letting saddle horses are not liable to tax. A highway or other place, the use of which is open to the public generally, that is not restricted by concession or otherwise to a person giving instruction in horsemanship, is not a "building, space, tent, or area" within the meaning of this section and subdivision of law. Associations composed exclusively of members of units of the Federalized National Guard or the Organized Reserve and whose receipts are used exclusively for the benefit of such units, are exempt from tax.

PASSENGER AUTOMOBILES.

7618 Art. 31. Passenger automobiles: Basis of tax.—The tax is upon 7512 the business of operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire, and is based upon the number of cars operated or rented and the seating capacity of each car. It is upon the total number of cars operated and not upon the average number operated. Liability is not incurred through the occasional carrying of a passenger in an automobile for hire provided the owner or operator does not hold himself out to the public as engaged in the business of carrying passengers. A person, however, who habitually carries passengers for hire whenever the opportunity presents or the capacity of his car permits is liable to tax. In computing seating capacity the driver's seat is to be included. The tax should be paid for automobiles used for carrying passengers, based upon the seating capacity of the whole car, unless a portion of it is set off and is of such design that it can not readily be used for passengers. ¶The tax attaches to a person operating a hotel bus for the carriage of passengers between railroad stations and hotels, provided a separate charge is made for the service. Motor trucks used for carrying passengers for hire are liable to tax, and unless evidence is furnished which conclusively shows that such trucks can not accommodate more than seven persons the owners are liable to the special tax of $20 for each. Persons operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire during a strike of street-railway employees are liable to the tax. A company operating automobile stages or motor busses on fixed schedule over established routes in cities or between cities and carrying passengers at a fixed charge is subject to tax even though it operates under rules and regulations of a state railroad commission or similar body. ¶Automobile ambulances and automobile hearses are not considered passenger automobiles within the purview of this subdivision.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7619 Art. 32. Special tax stamp.—The special-tax stamp or stamps issued must cover the total tax liability of the taxpayer at the time the stamp or stamps are taken out. He must secure a stamp for each car operated. A taxpayer does not incur an increased liability to tax by reason of replacing a car with a new car unless the new car is of a seating capacity subject to a higher rate of tax than the car replaced. For example: A person engaged in the business of operating passenger automobiles for hire owns 40 machines, each of them carrying more than two but not more than seven passengers. He takes out a special-tax stamp on each of the 40 machines covering his total liability. In February he sells 7 of his machines and purchases new ones of the same seating capacity or of a seating capacity of not more than seven. In such case no additional special-tax liability is incurred. If, however, in February he should replace 7 of his old machines with the same number of new machines each carrying more than seven passengers, an additional amount must be paid as special tax equal to the difference between the amount of tax due upon the operation of the new machines and the value of the old special-tax stamps paid upon the operation of the replaced machines, computed from the first day of the month in which additional liability was incurred and ending with the following June 30. Thus, since five months are remaining in the fiscal year from the date of February 1, the additional tax due is five-twelfth of $70, or $29.17. Payment of such additional special tax will be evidenced by a receipt on Form 1, which must be kept posted with the special tax stamp until the close of the fiscal year. A person failing to pay special tax covering increased seating capacity within the month during which liability begins incurs liability to the penalty imposed by section 1004 of the Revenue Act of 1921. ¶The purchaser of a passenger automobile for the operation of which special tax has been paid by the previous owner does not acquire the right to operate the automobile under the special-tax stamp which was issued to the previous owner. The special-tax stamp or stamps issued must be conspicuously posted in the place of business of the person operating or renting passenger automobiles. ¶Automobiles in respect of which special tax has been paid may be operated at any place in the United States without the payment of additional tax so long as the owner remains the same. When a special-tax stamp is issued, the engine number of the car covered by the stamp shall be registered with the collector issuing the stamp, who, in addition to the stamp, will issue a receipt card for each car which will bear the number corresponding to that on the engine of the car for which issued, and this receipt shall be carried by the operator at all times. The operation of a car without a receipt card or with a receipt card bearing a different engine number than that on the engine of the car operated shall be prima facie evidence of evasion of tax. Any replacement of a car must be likewise registered with the collector and a new receipt card will be issued in lieu of the card originally issued for the car which the new car replaces. ¶It is not considered necessary nor is it desirable to put the license-tag number on the receipt card issued with the stamp, owing to the fact that the stamp shows payment of tax for a fiscal year, while auto license tags usually cover a calendar year. The engine number on the card will be sufficient. This will obviate the necessity of obtaining a new card when the tag is changed. However, it will be necessary to obtain a new card in all cases where, for any reason, a different car is replacing an old one.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

SPECIAL TAXES UPON THE USE OF BOATS.

7620 Art. 33. Effective date.—The effective date of the tax on boats is July 1, 1922. This tax is in lieu of a similar tax imposed by section 1003 of the Revenue Act of 1918.

7621 Art. 34. Taxable period.—The first taxable period is from July 1, 1922, or from the date of the original purchase of a new boat by a user, to June 30, 1923, inclusive. Succeeding taxable periods cover the fiscal year beginning July 1 and ending June 30 of the succeeding year.

7622 Art. 35. Basis of tax.—The tax is based on use and not on mere possession or ownership. Liability to tax begins from the first day of the month in which the boat is used. Thus, if the first use of a boat is on April 27, 1923, the liability to tax begins on April 1, 1923. A boat which is not used at all during a fiscal year is not subject to tax for that period notwithstanding the fact that it might have been liable to tax in the preceding fiscal year. A boat which is not placed in use during the first part of the fiscal year is not liable to the tax for the period during which it was not in use, except to the extent of becoming liable from the first of the month during which it was placed in use. Once liability has been incurred at some time during a fiscal year the tax must be paid from the first of the month during which the boat was first placed in use until the close of the fiscal year, and no refund will be made notwithstanding the fact that during some subsequent period of such fiscal year the boat may not be in use.

7623 Art. 36. Person s liable.—The owner, lessee, or charterer of a boat is liable for the tax.

7624 Art. 37. Boats taxable.—Subject to the exemptions provided for in Article 38, the tax is imposed upon the use of yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats with fixed engines, and sailing boats of over 5 net tons, length over 32 feet. The use of the following boats, among others, is subject to tax:

- (a) Boats of foreign register used in the United States;
- (b) Boats owned by nonresident aliens navigating United States waters;
- (c) Boats built according to plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department but subsequently converted or remodeled according to plans not approved by the Navy Department;
- (d) Boats built without prior approval of the plans and specifications by the Navy Department.

7625 Art. 38. Boats not subject to tax.—(a) Boats used exclusively for trade are specifically exempt from tax. (Any boat which is used exclusively in connection with any serious activity which constitutes a person's business, occupation, profession, or means of livelihood is exempt from tax. Casual employment at irregular intervals for the convenience of the owner or his family, not exceeding such casual employment as is usual for boats maintained or employed in trade, will not cause the tax to attach to a boat which is entirely devoted to trade except for such limited casual use.)

(b) Boats used exclusively for fishing are specifically exempt from tax. (The term "fishing" as used in the statute has reference to commercial fishing and not fishing for pleasure.)

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

(c) Boats built according to plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department are specifically exempt from tax. (In order to be exempt the plans and specifications must receive approval by the Navy Department prior to the building of the boat.)

(d) Vessels or boats used without profit by any benevolent, charitable or religious organizations exclusively for furnishing aid, comfort, or relief to seamen are specifically exempt from tax.

(e) Boats owned by nonresident aliens and operated only occasionally in American waters are not subject to tax.

(f) A houseboat without means of propulsion is not subject to tax.

(g) Boats of over 5 net tons but less than 32 feet in length, and boats of over 32 feet in length but less than 5 net tons, do not fall within the purview of the act and are not subject to tax.

(h) A boat used by a physician in calling upon patients is exempt from tax.

(i) A boat used by a farmer to take produce to market, farming constituting the means of livelihood of the owner of the boat, is exempt from tax.

(j) A boat used by an owner in the course of his employment to tend channel lights on a barge canal is exempt from tax.

(k) A boat regularly in service in the carriage of the public is exempt from tax.

(l) A boat used by a marine-engine manufacturer in transporting salesmen on their business trips or in taking out prospective customers purely for demonstrating purposes is exempt from tax.

(m) A boat used in towing disabled boats and furnishing repair service to customers is exempt from tax.

7626 Art. 39. Purchase or use of secondhand boats.—If a person purchases a secondhand boat on which special tax has already been paid, he is not liable to special tax upon the use of the boat during the balance of the fiscal year. The tax is on the use of the boat and the special tax stamp passes with it. The adjustment of the tax between the vendor and the vendee is a matter of individual contract in which the Government has no concern. If a person leases or charters a boat upon which the tax has been paid, the lessee or charterer is exempt from tax on the use of the boat during the remainder of the fiscal year.

7627 Art. 40. Rate and computation of tax.—The boats enumerated in the act are divided into three classes with respect to length, and a separate rate of tax is provided for each class, as follows:

(a) Over 5 net tons, length over 32 feet and not over 50 feet, $1 for each foot.

(b) Over 5 net tons, length over 50 feet but not over 100 feet, $2 for each foot.

(c) Over 5 net tons, length over 100 feet, $4 for each foot.

7628 To compute the amount of tax in any given instance multiply the rate of the class in which the boat is included by the number representing the length over all in full feet. For example: A boat 49.5 feet in length would be included in class (a) and would be taxed at the rate of $1 for each foot, or $49; a boat 50.5 feet in length would also be included in class (a) and would be taxed at the rate of $1 for each foot, or $50. A boat must be at least 33 feet in length in order to be taxable.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7629 Art. 41. Tonnage.—To estimate the net tonnage of a vessel, the following rules may be used:

(a) By the word "ton" is meant 100 cubic feet of space.

(b) Multiply the extreme length of the vessel by the extreme breadth and that product by the depth from the underside of the deck to the frame in the hold taken amidships. The result should be multiplied by six-tenths. To this result should be added the cubical contents of any closed-in structure above the upper deck. The sum should be divided by 100, which will give the approximate gross tonnage of the boat.

A closed-in superstructure is any space inclosed with wood or glass, whether stationary or removable, but does not include awnings or canvas shelters.

(c) From this gross tonnage may be deducted all spaces used exclusively in connection with the navigation of the boat or for machinery space, space for officers and crew but not for passengers (who include all persons not actual members of the crew), storage of sails, navigation instruments, boatswain's stores, etc. The result will be the approximate net tonnage of the boat.

(d) For the purpose of determining the tonnage of open boats the space within the boat level with the outer rails will be considered, and no deductions for machinery or crew will be made.

7630 If the boat is over 32 feet in length and the net tonnage thus estimated is more than 4 net tons, application should be made to the nearest customs officer for official admeasurement. If an official admeasurement is not completed before the date on which a return is required, a return should be rendered; and if the estimate of net tonnage, made as above directed, is over 5 net tons, the tax should be paid. If an official admeasurement is being made or has been requested but not completed on the date set for filing return, the taxpayer should file his return on the date set by the law and regulations, accompanied by a remittance in an amount which he has determined is due. The collector will, upon receipt of such return and remittance, deposit the remittance as an advance collection in his stamp account, but will not order an improvised stamp for the taxpayer until the official admeasurement has been completed. If the tax due as shown by such official admeasurement is greater than that already paid by the taxpayer such taxpayer should be called upon for an additional amount sufficient to cover his total liability. When this additional amount is received the collector will then order an improvised stamp of the proper denomination. If the amount of tax is found to be the same as or less than the amount remitted by the taxpayer the collector will order an improvised stamp of the proper denomination, take credit in his stamp account for any excess remittance, and transfer the balance to account 9e. The collector will then place the item covering the excess payment on his Schedule of Refunds, Form 7777a. By this method the taxpayer will not be burdened with the necessity of purchasing a new special tax stamp in the proper amount and returning the original stamp for redemption, but will receive a stamp in the proper denomination in the first instance.

7631 Art. 42. Over-all length.—Over-all length is defined as the extreme length of the structure—i. e., from the forward side of the stem outside the planking or plating to the aftermost side of the stern planking or plating, whether above or below the water line. The measurement should be to the outside of any planking or plating extending above the deck, constituting bulwarks, and to the outside of any forecastle deck, quarter deck, or poop deck extending beyond the main deck. The length should be taken in a straight line, excluding any sheer there may be to the deck.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

7632 Art. 43. Return and payment of tax.—Every person liable to special tax must, during the month in which his liability begins, file with the collector or a deputy collector of the district in which he is located sworn return on Form 732 (Revised) which shall show the amount of tax due. This return shall also be filed by persons claiming exemption from tax on boats falling within the purview of the Act. Instructions for filling out Form 732 (Revised) will be found on the back of the form. The return due for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1923, must be filed during the month of July, 1922, provided the boat is used during the month of July, 1922. If the boat is placed in use during a month subsequent to July, return must be filed during such month.

7633 If exemption is claimed the return must be executed in full and "exemption claimed" noted across the face of the return. Failure to file Form 732 in the case of a tax-exempt boat renders a person liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000 (sec. 1302 (a) of the act). Return is not required with respect to boats of not over 5 net tons and not over 32 feet in length.

7634 Art. 44. Stamp or card certificates.—When tax is paid a special tax stamp indicating payment and a card certificate showing the name and other description of the boat will be issued. If exemption is allowed, an exemption card (Form 725) will be issued. The card certificate or exemption card issued must be kept on board whenever the boat is in use, and must be shown on demand to any officer or agent of the internal revenue or navigation service. No exemption certificate is required for a boat falling below the tonnage and footage specifications mentioned in the Act.

PROVISIONS OF LAW AND REGULATIONS PERTAINING TO SPECIAL TAXES.

7635 Art. 45. Special taxes.—The taxes imposed by sections 1001 and 7501 1003 of the Revenue Act of 1921 are "special taxes," and taxpayers are subject, under these sections, to all applicable provisions of the internal-revenue laws now in force and effect.

7636 Art. 46. Business to be registered.—Every person engaged in any trade or business on which a special tax is imposed by law shall register with the collector of the district his name or style, place of residence, trade or business, and the place where such trade or business is to be carried on. In case of a firm or company, the names of the several persons constituting the same, and their places of residence, shall be so registered. (Sec. 3233, R. S.)

7637 Art. 47. Partnerships.—Any number of persons doing business in copartnership at any one place shall be required to pay but one special tax. (Sec. 3234, R. S.)

7638 Art. 48. Payment of one special tax not to cover several places of business.—The payment of the special tax imposed does not exempt a person carrying on a trade or business in any other place than that stated in the collector's register from the payment of an additional special tax on the doing of such business; but a special tax is not required for the storage of goods, wares, or merchandise in other places than the place of business, nor for the sale by manufacturers or producers of their own goods, wares, and merchandise at the place of production or manufacture, and at their principal office or place of business, provided no goods, wares, or merchandise shall be kept except as samples at said office or place of business. (See sec. 3235, R. S.)

7639 Art. 49. More than one pursuit carried on in the same place of business.—Whenever more than one of the pursuits or occupations subject to special taxes are carried on in the same place by the same person at the same time, the tax shall be paid for each according to the rates severally prescribed. (See sec. 3236, R. S.)

7640 Art. 50. When special tax becomes due.—All special taxes shall become due on the 1st day of July in each year, or on commencing any trade or business on which such tax is imposed. In the former case the tax shall be reckoned for one year; and in the latter case it shall be reckoned proportionately from the 1st day of the month in which the liability to a special tax commenced to the 1st day of July following. (See sec. 3237, R. S., as amended by sec. 53, act of Oct. 1, 1890; 26 Stat., 567.) An applicant for a special-tax stamp for a fractional part of a year must calculate from the 1st day of the month in which he commences business and must pay until the end of the fiscal year. A special tax payer, even though he makes a sworn return within the calendar month of his liability, is liable to criminal prosecution if he fails to pay the tax within that month or to post the stamp in his place of business, although he is not liable to the additional tax imposed by section 3176, Revised Statutes, as amended.

7641 Art. 51. Returns.—It shall be the duty of special tax payers to render their returns to the collector or a deputy collector at such times within the calendar month in which the special tax liability commenced as shall enable him to receive such returns, duly signed and verified, not later than the last day of the month, except in cases of sickness or absence, as provided for in section 3176 of the Revised Statutes as amended. (See sec. 3237, R. S., as amended by sec. 53, act of Oct. 1, 1890; 26 Stat., 567.) For failure to make a sworn return within the time prescribed by law, without a reasonable cause for delinquency, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is required to add to the special tax 25 per cent. of its amount. In case a false or fraudulent return or list is willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is required to add to the special tax 50 per cent. of its amount. (See art. 64.)

7642 Return and tax due during July, generally.—[Comment: The following letter may be of interest, to be read in connection with the "calendar" on page 1501.] Reference is made to your letter of the 6th inst. in which you refer to Form 11 and inquire by what authority this form calls for the filing of the return before July 1st of each year. You state you have been unable to find anything in the Revised Statutes or in the Revenue Act of 1918 that warrants the statement printed in bold face type at the bottom of the return form.

7643 In reply you are advised that there is no requirement of law that the return must be filed on or before July 1st. The statement printed on the form, and referred to by you, is to be eliminated. Section 53 of the Act of October 1, 1890 (26 Stat., 567) amends Section 3237, Revised Statutes, and distinctly provides that special taxpayers shall render their returns at such times within the calendar month in which the special tax liability commenced as shall enable the collector to receive such returns duly signed and verified not later than the last day of the month. (Letter to The Corporation Trust Company, signed by Deputy Commissioner James M. Baker, and dated December 27, 1919.)

7644 Art. 52. Stamps for special taxes.—All special taxes imposed by law shall be paid by stamps denoting the tax, and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue is required to procure appropriate stamps for the payment of such taxes; and the provisions of sections 3312 and 3446, Revised Statutes, and all other provisions of law relating to the preparation and issue of stamps for distilled spirits, fermented liquors, tobacco, and cigars shall, so far as applicable, extend to and include stamps for special taxes; and the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall have authority to make all needful regulations relative thereto. (See sec. 3238, R. S.)

7645 A special tax stamp issued is not a license, but merely a receipt for the tax. It puts the United States under no obligation whatever to the holder beyond assuring him against prosecution under the special tax laws. The firm name is the only name that is necessary in a special tax stamp issued to a partnership. Collectors or their deputies are forbidden to issue receipts for moneys received for taxes which are payable by stamps.

7646 Art. 53. Special tax stamps "at large."—Any special tax payer except those liable to tax under subdivisions (6) and (7) of section 1001, whose business is such as to require him to travel from place to place in different States of the United States, such as proprietors of traveling theaters, proprietors of shooting galleries traveling with circuses, etc., may procure a special tax stamp "at large" covering, with the payment of but one special tax, the activities of such special tax payer throughout the United States. Collectors of internal revenue are instructed to issue such special tax stamps "at large" upon receipt of application and remittance covering the amount of tax due.

7647 Art. 54. Special tax stamp to be posted in place of business.—

Every person engaged in any business, vocation, or employment who is thereby made liable to a special tax shall place and keep conspicuously in his establishment or place of business all stamps denoting the payment of said special tax; and any person who shall, through negligence, fail to so place and keep said stamps, shall be liable to a penalty equal to the special tax for which his business renders him liable, and the costs of prosecution; but in no case shall said penalty be less than $10. And where the failure to comply with the foregoing provision of law shall be through willful neglect or refusal, then the penalty shall be double the amount above prescribed: Provided, That nothing in this section shall in any way affect the liability of any person for exercising or carrying on any trade, business, or profession, or doing any act for the exercising, carrying on, or doing of which a special tax is imposed by law, without the payment thereof. (See sec. 3239, R. S.)

7648 Art. 55. List of special taxpayers.—Each collector of internal revenue shall, under regulations of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, place and keep conspicuously in his office, for public inspection, an alphabetical list of the names of all persons who shall have paid special taxes within his district, and shall state thereon the time, place, and business for which each such special tax has been paid; and upon application of any prosecuting officer of any State, county, or municipality he shall furnish a certified copy thereof, as of a public record, for which a fee of one dollar for each one hundred words or fraction thereof in the copy or copies so requested may be charged. (Sec. 3240, R. S., as amended by the act of June 21, 1906; 34 Stat., 387.)

7649 Records in the collectors' offices relating to special tax payers are based on returns made by these persons under compulsion of law for the sole purpose of raising revenue for the United States. Collectors are not permitted to send out these records or copies thereof for use against the special tax payers in cases not arising under the laws of the United States. This restriction does not apply to copies of record 10, which the collector is required by the act of June 21, 1906, to furnish to prosecuting officers upon payment of the prescribed fee.

7650 Art. 56. Death or removal after paying tax.—When any person who has paid the special tax for any trade or business dies, his wife or child, or executors or administrators or other legal representatives, may occupy the house or premises, and in like manner carry on, for the residue of the term for which the tax is paid, the same trade or business as the deceased before carried on, in the same house, and upon the same premises, without the payment of any additional tax. And when any person removes from the house or premises for which any trade or business was taxed to any other place, he may carry on the trade or business specified in the collector's register at the place to which he removes, without the payment of any additional tax: Provided, That all cases of death, change, or removal, as aforesaid, with the name of the successor to any person deceased, or of the person making such change or removal, shall be registered with the collector, under regulations to be prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. (Sec. 3241, R. S.)

7651 Under the law and rulings of this office an executor, receiver, or referee in bankruptcy may continue the business under the stamp issued to the deceased or bankrupt taxpayer at the place and for the period for which the tax was paid. An assignee may continue business under his assignor's special tax stamp without incurring special tax liability.

7652 Art. 57. Transfer of place of business.—Whenever the special tax payer desires to remove his business to a place other than that specified in his original return and stated in his special tax stamp he shall, during the calendar month in which such transfer is made, register such fact by filing under oath an additional return on the prescribed form, properly modified, setting forth the time and place where he intends to engage in the business described; and if such taxpayer is a firm or corporation, the names and residences of all the members or principal officers thereof shall again be recorded. He shall also forward the special tax stamp to the collector in order that proper notation of the transfer may be made thereon, after which it will be returned to the owner. Should the transfer be made to a location in another collection district, the stamp will be forwarded to the collector who issued it, who will make proper notation on his record 10 and make notation on the stamp as to transfer. This collector will then forward the stamp to the collector of the district to which the taxpayer will transfer, who will make out a proper record 10 card and sign the stamp under the signature of the transferring collector, and forward the stamp to the taxpayer. Unless such transfer notice is filed within the time specified a new special tax liability will be incurred and a new special tax stamp will be required for the carrying on of the business.

7653 Art. 58. Change in membership of firm.—When one or more members of a firm or partnership withdraw the business may be continued by the remaining partner or partners under the same special tax stamp, but where new partners are taken into a firm the new firm can not carry on business under the special tax stamp of the old firm. It must make return and pay its own special tax reckoned from the first day of the month in which it began business, even though the name of the new firm be the same as that of the old.

7654 Art. 59. Change from partnership to corporation.—Where a partnership paying special tax incorporates a special tax stamp must be taken out in the name of the corporation.

7655 Art. 60. Who may carry on business without new stamp.—A corporation may, upon application to the collector, change its name without creating new special tax liability, provided its charter permits such a change. A copy of the charter must be filed with the application and the stamp forwarded to the collector for proper notation. Additional special tax stamp is not required by reason of an increase of capital stock of a corporation if State laws creating the corporation provide for such changes without the formation of a new corporation. Additional tax stamp is not required of an unincorporated club by reason of changes of membership where such changes do not result in a dissolution and formation of a new club.

7656 Art. 61. Changes to be registered.—Whenever such a person as is permitted under article 60 to carry on the business of one who has paid the required special tax succeeds to such business he shall register with the collector under oath the name of the original taxpayer and the names of such successors and their residences together with all the data required. Any person succeeding to and carrying on the business for which special tax is required to be paid on removing to and carrying on such business at a place other than that for which the special tax was paid without registering such change on removal will be regarded as carrying on the business in violation of law, and will be liable to a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $500, in addition to his liability for the tax. (See sec. 3242, R. S.)

ternal Revenue, give notice to each person liable to pay any taxes stated therein, to be left at his dwelling or usual place of business, or to be sent by mail, stating the amount of such taxes and demanding payment thereof. If such person does not pay the taxes within ten days after the service or the sending by mail of such notice, it shall be the duty of the collector or his deputy to collect the said taxes with a penalty of five per centum additional upon the amount of taxes, and interest at the rate of one per centum a month.

7658 Art. 63. Penalties.—Any person who fails to file a return of tax due
8071 within the time prescribed by law or regulations made pursuant to law is liable to an additional amount equal to 25 per cent. of the total tax due except when it is shown that the failure to file the return within the prescribed time was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. If a false or fraudulent return is filed the taxpayer is liable to an additional amount equal to 50 per cent. of the total tax. A person who fails to pay or truly to account for any tax or to make any return prescribed by law is in addition to the increased tax as set forth above liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000. If he willfully refuses to pay or account for any tax or make any return required by law, or willfully attempts in any manner to evade the tax he is guilty of a misdemeanor and in addition to the increased taxes provided for he is liable to a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution. Where a false or fraudulent return is filed it is considered prima facie evidence of a willful attempt to evade tax and the penalties provided by law for such offense will be invoked. Under section 3184, Revised Statutes, a taxpayer who does not pay a special tax assessed within 10 days from the date of the mailing by the collector of a notice and demand for payment is liable to a 5 per cent. penalty and interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month.

7661 (c) Where taxes are paid pursuant to an assessment and not by the issuance of stamps, claims for the refund of amounts so paid are governed by sections 3220 to 3228 R. S., as amended, and must be presented within four years next after payment of such taxes, as provided in section 1316 of the Revenue Act of 1921.

7664 Art. 43. Return and payment of tax.—Every person liable to special 7632 tax must, during the month in which his liability beings file with the 7633 collector or a deputy collector of the district in which he is located sworn return on Form 732 (Revised) which shall show the amount the month of July, 1922. If the boat is placed in use during a month susequent to July return must be filed during such month. Failure to file Form 732 in the case of a boat subject to tax renders a person liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000 (sec. 1302 (a) of the act). Return is not required with respect to boats of not over 5 net tons and not over 32 feet in must be kept on board whenever the boat is in use, and must be shown on demand to any officer or agent of the internal-revenue or navigation service.

No card certificate is required for a boat falling below the tonnage and footage specifications mentioned in the Act or a boat specifically exempt.

Overpayments and Overcollections of Taxes.

8018 (Law.) Sec. 1304 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That in the case of any overpayment or overcollection of any tax imposed by section 602 [Cereal beverages, etc.] or by Title V [Facilities], Title VIII [Admissions and Dues], or Title IX [Excise or sales taxes], the person making such overpayment or overcollection may take credit therefor against taxes due upon any monthly return, and shall make refund of any excessive amount collected by him upon proper application by the person entitled thereto.

Fractional Parts of a Cent in Payment of Tax.

8019 (Law.) Sec. 1306 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That in the payment of any tax under this Act not payable by stamp a fractional part of a cent shall be disregarded unless it amounts to one-half cent or more, in which case it shall be increased to 1 cent.

Payment of Taxes by Check or United States Securities.

8020 (Law.) Sec. 1325 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That collectors may receive, at par with an adjustment for accrued interest, notes or certificates of indebtedness issued by the United States and uncertified checks in payment of income, war-profits and excess-profits taxes and any other taxes payable other than by stamp, during such time and under such regulations as the Commissioner, with the approval of the Secretary, shall prescribe; but if a check so received is not paid by the bank on which it is drawn the person by whom such check has been tendered shall remain liable for the payment of the tax and for all legal penalties and additions the same as if such check had not been tendered.

Articles Exported.

8021 (Law.) Sec. 1305 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That under such rules and regulations as the Commissioner with the approval of the Secretary may prescribe, the taxes imposed under the provisions of Titles VI, VII or IX shall not apply in respect to articles sold or leased for export and in due course so exported. Under such rules and regulations the amount of any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally collected in respect to exported articles may be refunded to the exporter of the article, instead of to the manufacturer, if the manufacturer waives any claim for the amount so to be refunded.

Claims for Refund and Abatement of Taxes.

8022 (Law.) Sec. 1315 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3220 of the Revised Statutes, as amended, is reenacted without change, as follows:

Section 3220 of the Revised Statutes.

8023 "Sec. 3220. The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, is authorized to remit, refund, and pay back all taxes erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, all penalties collected without authority, and all taxes that appear to be unjustly assessed or excessive in amount, or in any manner wrongfully collected; also to repay to any collector or deputy collector the full amount of such sums of money as may be recovered against him in any court, for any internal revenue taxes collected by him, with the cost and expenses of suit; also all damages and costs recovered against any assessor, assistant assessor, collector, deputy collector, agent, or inspector, in any suit brought against him by reason of anything done in the due performance of his official duty, and shall make report to Congress at the beginning of each regular session of Congress of all transactions under this section."

8024 Allowance for and redemption of Internal Revenue Stamps.—Form 46.—The Act entitled "An Act authorizing the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to redeem or make allowance for internal revenue stamps," approved May 12, 1900, (as amended by the act of June 30, 1902 [32 stat., 506]) provides:

That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, may, upon receipt of satisfactory evidence of the facts, make allowance for or redeem such of the stamps, issued under authority of law, to denote the payment of any internal-revenue tax, as may have been spoiled, destroyed, or rendered useless or unfit for the purpose intended, or for which the owner may have no use, or which through mistake may have been improperly or unnecessarily used, or where the rates or duties represented thereby have been excessive in amount, paid in error, or in any manner wrongfully collected. Such allowance or redemption may be made, either by giving other stamps in lieu of the stamps so allowed for or redeemed, or by refunding the amount or value to the owner thereof deducting therefrom, in case of repayment, the percentage, if any, allowed to the purchaser thereof; but no allowance or redemption shall be made in any case until the stamps so spoiled or rendered useless shall have been returned to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, or until satisfactory proof has been made showing the reason why the same cannot be returned; or, if so required by the said Commissioner, when the person presenting the same can not satisfactorily trace the history of said stamps from their issuance to the presentation of his claim as aforesaid.

8025 Provided further, That no claim for the redemption of or allowance for stamps shall be allowed unless presented within two years after he purchase of said stamps from the government.

* * *

8026 Sec. 2. That the finding of facts in and the decision of the Commissioner of Internal Revenue upon the merits of any claim presented under or authorized by this Act shall, in the absence of fraud or mistake in mathematical calculation, be final and not subject to revision by any accounting officer.

8027 Sec. 3. That all laws and parts of laws in conflict with any of the provisions of this Act are hereby repealed.

8028 Redemption of stamps not affixed to documents or articles.—Claims for the allowance for or redemption of unused stamps must be made on Form 46, and the facts relied upon in support of the claim should be clearly set forth under oath. The claim should be made by the bona fide owner of the stamps presented for allowance or redemption or an agent or representative of such owner. [See page 1611.]

8029 The claim should be supported by the certificate of the deputy collector who personally investigated the statements made by the claimant, setting forth, after careful inquiry, his belief as to the statements therein made, and by the certificate of the collector from whom the stamps were purchased, setting forth the date of purchase, by whom purchased, kind of stamps, denomination, number and amount, and his certificate that the facts set forth in the affidavit of the claimant have been carefully investigated under his direction, and his opinion as to the truth or falsity of said statements, together with such recommendation as to the allowance or disallowance of said claim as in his opinion seems just and proper.

8030 All claims shall be forwarded to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue for examination, and he may, when he deems it necessary to complete the evidence of the facts set forth in any claim, require additional statements, certificates, or affidavits from the claimant, collector, or any other person, and may cause such investigation to be made and such instructions complied with as in his opinion are necessary to a proper adjustment of the claim.

8031 Redemption of stamps affixed to documents or articles.—In cases where documentary or proprietary stamps have been affixed to instruments or articles not requiring them, and canceled, or where, by error, stamps of greater value than that required by law have been used, claims for the amounts paid in error or in excess should be made on Form 46, accompanied by the stamps, and, where practicable, by the instruments to which the stamps have been erroneously attached, or certified copies thereof. [See page 1611.] These instructions as to the use of Form 46 will also apply to cases where an instrument is duly stamped and is accidentally injured or found to be defective, and a substitute is prepared and duly stamped, or where the instrument is not used. (Extract from Regulations No. 14, Revised, published January 25, 1916.)

8032 Forms 46 and 47 on which to present Claims for refund and abatement of taxes.—[See page 1611.] Claims for the refunding of assessed taxes and penalties must be made out upon Form 46. In this case, as in that of claims for abatement upon Form 47, the burden of proof rests upon the claimant. All the facts relied upon in support of the claim should be clearly set forth under oath. The claim should be still further supported by an affidavit of the deputy collector of the proper division, and by the certificate of the collector. (Extract from Regulations No. 14, Revised, published January 25, 1916.)

8033 Claims for the abatement of taxes or penalties erroneously or illegally assessed or which are abatable under remedial acts, etc., must be made out upon Form 47, and must be sustained by the affidavits of the parties against whom the taxes were assessed, or of other parties cognizant of the facts, and must be accompanied by affidavits of the deputy collectors of the divisions in which the claims arise. (Extract from Regulation No. 14, Revised, published January 25, 1916.)

8034 Claim for abatement stays 5% penalty until claim is rejected.—

"When an assessment is made for a tax or penalty and demand made for payment, if a claim for abatement (Form [843]) is filed within ten days after such demand, and accepted by the collector, the time ceases to run against the claimant as to five per cent. penalty until the claim is rejected. Upon receipt of the notice of rejection of the claim, the collector should immediately notify the party assessed and demand the payment of the tax; if the tax is not then paid within ten days after mailing of the notice to the claimant by the collector of the rejection of the claim, the five per cent. penalty accrues. Interest at one per cent. per month continues to run and should be collected with the tax at the time of payment for the full number of calendar months which intervene between the date of the expiration of the first ten days' notice and the date of the payment of the tax, notwithstanding the fact that a claim for abatement has been filed." (Paragraph from Regulation No. 14, dated January 25, 1916.)

8035 Abatement of assessments as erroneous or illegal when an equivalent amount of tax is properly due.—

The validity of an assessment depends upon the law and actual facts existing. Therefore, an assessment made upon an erroneous theory or by mistake may not be remitted or abated because so made if, at the time its validity is passed upon, the Commissioner is in possession of evidence which shows an equivalent amount of tax is properly due in connection with the income, transaction or matter upon which the assessment is predicated. (T. D. 3251, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated November 25, 1921.)

Interest on Refunds and Judgments.*8036 (Law.) Sec. 1324 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. (a) That upon the allowance of a claim for the refund of or credit for internal revenue taxes paid, interest shall be allowed and paid upon the total amount of such refund or credit at the rate of one-half of 1 per centum per month to the date of such allowance, as follows: (1) if such amount was paid under a specific protest setting forth in detail the basis of and reasons for such protest, from the time when such tax was paid, or (2) if such amount was not paid under protest but pursuant to an additional assessment, from the time such additional assessment was paid, or (3) if no protest was made and the tax was not paid pursuant to an additional assessment, from six months after the date of filing of such claim for refund or credit. The term "additional assessment" as used in this section means a further assessment for a tax of the same character previously paid in part.

8037 (b) Section 177 of the Judicial Code is amended to read as follows:

"Sec. 177. No interest shall be allowed on any claim up to the time of the rendition of judgment by the Court of Claims, unless upon a contract expressly stipulating for the payment of interest, except that interest may be allowed in any judgment of any court rendered after the passage of the Revenue Act of 1921 against the United States for any internal-revenue tax erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or for any penalty collected without authority or any sum which was excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, under the internal-revenue laws."

Suits to Restrain Assessment or Collection of Taxes.

Section 3224 of the Revised Statutes

8038 "No suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court."

Decision.

(February 21, 1916.)

Supreme Court of the United States.

John F. Dodge and Horace E. Dodge, Appellants

vs.

W. H. Osborn, Commissioner of Internal Revenue.

(240 U. S. 118.)

Mr. Chief Justice White delivered the opinion of the Court.

8039 The appellants filed their bill in the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia against the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to enjoin the assessment and collection of the taxes imposed by the Income Tax section of the Tariff Act of October 3, 1913 (38 Stat. 166, 181), and especially the surtaxes therein provided for on the ground that the statute was void for repugnancy to the Constitution of the United States. The case is here on appeal from the judgment of the court below affirming the action of the trial court in sustaining a motion to dismiss the complaint for want of jurisdiction because the complainants had an adequate remedy at law and because of the provision of section 3224 Revised Statute that "No suit for the purpose of restraining the assessment or collection of any tax shall be maintained in any court."

8040 We at once put out of view a contention that section 3224 is not applicable to taxes imposed by the Income Tax Law since we are clearly of the opinion that it is within the contemplation of paragraph L of the act which provides:

8041 "That all administrative, special and general provisions of law, including the laws in relation to the assessment, remission, collection, and refund of internal-revenue taxes not heretofore specifically repealed and not inconsistent with the provisions of this section, are hereby extended and made applicable to all the provisions of this section and to the tax herein imposed."

And for the same reason we do not further notice a contention as to the inapplicability of sections 3220 [¶8021], 3226 [¶8048] and 3227 [¶8049], to which effect was given by the court below requiring an appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue after payment of a tax claimed to have been erroneously and illegally assessed and collected and upon his refusal to return the sum paid giving a right to sue for its recovery.

"The inhibition of Section 3224 applies to all assessments of taxes, made under color of their offices, by internal revenue officers charged with general jurisdiction of the subject of assessing taxes against tobacco manufacturers.

The remedy of a suit to recover back the tax after it is paid is provided by statute, and a suit to restrain its collection is forbidden. The remedy so given is exclusive, and no other remedy can be substituted for it. Cheatham v. United States, 92 U. S. 85, 88, and again in State Railroad Tax Cases, 92 U. S. 575, 613, it was said by this court, that the system prescribed by the United States in regard to both customs duties and internal revenue taxes, of stringent measures, not judicial, to collect them, with appeals to specified tribunals, and suits to recover back moneys illegally exacted was a system of corrective justice intended to be complete, and enacted under the right belonging to the government to prescribe the conditions on which it would subject itself to the judgment of the courts in the collection of its revenues. In the exercise of that right, it declares, by section 3224, that its officers shall not be enjoined from collecting the tax claimed to have been unjustly assessed, when those officers, in the course of general jurisdiction over the subject matter in question, have made the assignment (assessment) and claim that it is valid."

And this doctrine has been repeatedly applied until it is no longer open to question that a suit may not be brought to enjoin the assessment or collection of a tax because of the alleged unconstitutionality of the statute imposing it. Shelton v. Platt, 139 U. S. 591; Pittsburgh, etc., Ry. v. Board of Public Works, 172 U. S. 32; Pacific Whaling Company v. United States, 187 U. S. 447, 451, 452.

8043 But it is contended that this doctrine has no application to a case where wholly independent of any claim of the constitutionality of the tax sought to be enjoined, additional equities sufficient to sustain jurisdiction are alleged, and this, it is asserted, being such a case, falls within the exception to the general rule. But conceding for argument's sake only the legal premise upon which the contention rests, we think the conclusion that this case falls within such exception is wholly without merit, since after an examination of the complaint we are of the opinion that no ground for equitable jurisdiction is alleged. It is true the complaint contains averments that unless the taxes are enjoined many suits by other persons will be brought for the recovery of the taxes paid by them, and also that by reason of section 3187 Rev. Stat. making the tax a lien on plaintiffs' property the assessment of the taxes would constitute a cloud on plaintiffs' title. But these allegations are wholly inadequate under the hypothesis which we have assumed solely for the sake of the argument, to sustain jurisdiction, since it is apparent on their face they allege no ground for equitable relief independent of the mere complaint that the tax is illegal and unconstitutional and should not be enforced—allegations which if recognized as a basis for equitable jurisdiction would take every case where a tax assailed because of its unconstitutionality out of the provisions of the statute and thus render it nugatory, while it is obvious that the statute plainly forbids the enjoining of a tax unless by some extraordinary and entirely exceptional circumstance its provisions are not applicable.

8044 There is a contention that the provisions requiring the appeal to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue after payment of the taxes and giving a right to sue in case of his refusal to refund are wanting in due process and therefore there is jurisdiction. But we think it suffices to state that contention to demonstrate its entire want of merit.

AFFIRMED. [240 U. S. 118]

*Decision.Suit to Enjoin Collection of Penalties.

District Court, N. D. Illinois, E. D.

Kohlhamer vs. Smietanka, Collector. (239 Fed. 408.)

8045 While Section 3224 R. S. [¶8038] which prohibits suits to enjoin the collection of internal revenue taxes, does not specifically include "penalties" as such, yet where penalties are authorized by statute to be added to the tax and collected as a part of the tax, the court will hold that the penalty is a part of the tax, the assessment and collection of which are governed by Section 3224. (239 Fed. 408.)

Fraudulent Returns.

8046 (Law.) Sec. 1323 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3225 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, is re-enacted without change as follows:

Section 3225 of the Revised Statutes.

8047 "Sec. 3225. When a second assessment is made in case of any list, statement, or return, which in the opinion of the collector or deputy collector was false or fraudulent, or contained any understatement or undervaluation, such assessment shall not be remitted, nor shall taxes collected under such assessment be refunded, or paid back, or recovered by any suit, unless it is proved that such list, statement, or return was not willfully false or fraudulent and did not contain any willful understatement or undervaluation."

Limitations Upon Suits and Prosecutions.

8048 (Law.) Sec. 1318 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3226 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows [Sec. 3226 was further amended by the Act of March 4, 1923, by adding the matter in italics, ¶8049]:

Section 3226 of the Revised Statutes.

8049 "Sec. 3226. No suit or proceeding shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, until a claim for refund or credit has been duly filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, according to the provisions of law in that regard, and the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury established in pursuance thereof. No such suit or proceeding shall be begun before the expiration of six months from the date of filing such claim unless the Commissioner renders a decision thereon within that time, nor after the expiration of five years from the date of the payment of such tax, penalty, or sum, unless such suit or proceeding is begun within two years after the disallowance of the part of such claim to which such suit or proceeding relates. The Commissioner shall within ninety days after any such disallowance notify the taxpayer thereof by mail."

8058 This section, except as modified by section 252 [Income and Excess-Profits Taxes], shall apply retroactively to claims for refund under the Revenue Act of 1916, the Revenue Act of 1917, and the Revenue Act of 1918.

Compromises.

Section 3229 of the Revised Statutes.

8059 "The Commissioner of Internal Revenue, with the advice and consent of the Secretary of the Treasury, may compromise any civil or criminal case arising under the internal-revenue laws instead of commencing suit thereon; and, with the advice and consent of the said Secretary and the recommendation of the Attorney General, he may compromise any such case after a suit thereon has been commenced. Whenever a compromise is made in any case there shall be placed on file in the office of the Commissioner the opinion of the Solicitor of Internal Revenue, or of the officer acting as such, with his reasons therefor, with a statement of the amount of tax assessed, the amount of additional tax or penalty imposed by law in consequence of the neglect or delinquency of the person against whom the tax is assessed, and the amount actually paid in accordance with the terms of the compromise."

Amendments to Revised Statutes.

otherwise, a false or fraudulent return or list, the collector or deputy collector shall make the return or list from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise. In any such case the Commissioner may, from his own knowledge and from such information as he can obtain through testimony or otherwise, make a return or amend any return made by a collector or deputy collector. Any return or list so made and subscribed by the Commissioner, or by a collector or deputy collector and approved by the Commissioner, shall be prima facie good and sufficient for all legal purposes.

8072 "If the failure to file a return or list is due to sickness or absence, the collector may allow such further time, not exceeding thirty days, for making and filing the return or list as he deems proper.

8073 "The Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall determine and assess all taxes, other than stamp taxes, as to which returns or lists are so made under the provisions of this section. In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of its amount, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case a false or fraudulent return or list is willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of its amount.

8074 "The amount so added to any tax shall be collected at the same time and in the same manner and as part of the tax unless the tax has been paid before the discovery of the neglect, falsity, or fraud, in which case the amount so added shall be collected in the same manner as the tax."

Deposit of United States Bonds or Notes in Lieu of Surety.

8075 (Law.) Sec. 1329 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That wherever by the laws of the United States or regulations made pursuant thereto, any person is required to furnish any recognizance, stipulation, bond, guaranty, or undertaking, hereinafter called "penal bond," with surety or sureties, such person may, in lieu of such surety or sureties, deposit as security with the official having authority to approve such penal bond, United States Liberty bonds or other bonds or notes of the United States in a sum equal at their par value to the amount of such penal bond required to be furnished, together with an agreement authorizing such official to collect or sell such bonds or notes so deposited in case of any default in the performance of any of the conditions or stipulations of such penal bond. The acceptance of such United States bonds or notes in lieu of surety or sureties required by law shall have the same force and effect as individual or corporate sureties, or certified checks, bank drafts, post-office money orders, or cash, for the penalty or amount of such penal bond. The bonds or notes deposited hereunder and such other United States bonds or notes as may be substituted therefor from time to time as such security, may be deposited with the Treasurer of the United States, a Federal reserve bank, or other depository duly designated for that purpose by the Secretary, which shall issue receipt therefor, describing such bonds or notes so deposited. As soon as security for the performance of such penal bond is no longer necessary, such bonds or notes so deposited, shall be returned to the depositor: Provided, That in case a person or persons supplying a contractor with labor or material as provided by the Act of Congress, approved February 24, 1905 (33 Stat. 811), entitled "An Act to amend an Act approved August thirteenth, eighteen hundred and ninety-four, entitled 'An Act for the protection of persons furnishing materials and labor for the construction of public works,' " shall file with the obligee, at any time after a default in the performance of any contract subject to said Acts, the application and affidavit therein provided, the obligee shall not deliver to the obligor the deposited bonds or notes nor any surplus proceeds thereof until the expiration of the time limited by said Acts for the institution of suit by such person or persons, and, in case suit shall be instituted within such time, shall hold said bonds or notes or proceeds subject to the order of the court having jurisdiction thereof: Provided further, That nothing herein contained shall affect or impair the priority of the claim of the United States against the bonds or notes deposited or any right or remedy granted by said Acts or by this section to the United States for default upon any obligation of said penal bond: Provided further, That all laws inconsistent with this section are hereby so modified as to conform to the provisions hereof: And provided further, That nothing contained herein shall affect the authority of courts over the security, where such bonds are taken as security in judicial proceedings, or the authority of any administrative officer of the United States to receive United States bonds for security in cases authorized by existing laws. The Secretary may prescribe rules and regulations necessary and proper for carrying this section into effect.

WAR TAX 1623 SERVICE

(Decision.)

Revised Statutes Section 3226.

On the running of the statute of limitations on appeals to the Commissioner for abatement or refund as the step precedent to suit for recovery:

A preliminary request of the Commissioner for an informal ruling is in no sense a claim for abatement or refund.

SUPREME COURT OF THE UNITED STATES

Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company,	}	Appeal from the Court of Claims.
Appellant,
vs.
The United States.

[January 2, 1923.]

Mr. Justice SUTHERLAND delivered the opinion of the Court.

8098 The appellant brought an action in the Court of Claims against 8024 the United States to recover the sum of $55,158.00, alleged to have 8049 been illegally exacted as stamp taxes upon thirteen deeds of conveyance made and delivered to appellant by its subsidiary companies. The deeds were without valuable consideration and were executed for the sole purpose of transferring legal title to enable appellant to mortgage the property conveyed. On February 11, 1915, before the delivery of these deeds, appellant exhibited three of them to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and asked for a ruling, thereby making what it alleges was a claim in abatement. The Commissioner held that the Stamp Tax Act applied, and the appellant, without protest, affixed to the thirteen deeds the requisite amount of stamps.

8099 Four years later the Commissioner, in construing a similar act of 1918 held that "where no valuable consideration passed stamps were not required on conveyances."

8100 Appellant thereupon filed with the Commissioner a claim for refund of the taxes paid which was rejected because barred by the statute of limitations.

8101 Appellant now alleges that its claim for a refund constitutes an amendment of its original so-called claim in abatement. The Court of Claims sustained a demurrer to appellant's petition alleging the foregoing upon the ground that the original request to the Commissioner for a ruling was not a claim either for abatement or refund, but that the claim for a refund was in effect first made in 1919, and, therefore, that the Commissioner's ruling was right.

8102 The Act of May 12, 1900 c. 393, 31 Stat. 177, as amended by the Act of June 30, 1902 c. 1327, 32 Stat. 506, provides in part:

"That the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, subject to regulations prescribed by the Secretary of the Treasury, may, upon receipt of satisfactory evidence of the facts, make allowance for or redeem such of the stamps, issued under authority of law, to denote the payment of any internal-revenue tax, as may have been spoiled . . . or in any manner wrongfully collected. . . . Provided further, that no claim for the redemption of or allowance for stamps shall be allowed unless presented within two years after the purchase of said stamps from the Government."

8103 By Section 3226 Revised Statutes [¶8049] no suit can be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally collected until appeal has been made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, as provided by law, and the decision of the Commissioner thereon has been had.

8104 The preliminary request to the Commissioner for an informal ruling was in no sense a claim for abatement or refund. Appellant affixed the stamps to the deeds without protest and after that no effort was made to secure redemption of or allowance for the stamps until long after the two-year period had expired.

8105 On the facts alleged in the petition the Court of Claims could not have done otherwise than sustain the demurrer. Rock Island, Arkansas and Louisiana Railway Company v. United States, 254 U. S. 141.

8106 The judgment of the Court of Claims is

was made, however, in the amended returns for the good-will item aforementioned. Upon the request of the Unit for advice on the subjects involving the good-will item, 20.19x dollars was disallowed as a capital item. The money in bank, 34.33x dollars, was also excluded from invested capital on the ground that it was not the property of the corporation.

It appears that the savings bank of the city of S as a matter of policy refused to receive partnership funds for deposit, and because of such refusal the partners deposited a part of the surplus each year in the names of the partners, A and B. After incorporation these individuals owned over 95 per cent of the stock of the appellant company, and from February 1, 1914, to the date of liquidation of the appellant company in 1920 the amounts in the savings banks credited to the above-named individuals were continuously increased. The accounts of the corporation, however, contain no record of these deposits or interest accrued thereon.

There is of record evidence showing that A and B wrote letters to mercantile houses stating that the amounts in the R Bank credited to their accounts were the property of the appellant company; that such statements were given to mercantile agencies; that on May —, 1918, the appellant company borrowed from the R Bank the sum of 10x dollars, and later, on November —, 1918, the sum of 10x dollars, on the credit established by the savings deposits credited to A and B; that in 1920, when the business was liquidated, the cost of liquidation was paid out of these deposits, and the balance distributed among the stockholders.

The Committee is unable to agree with the appellant's contention that the deposits in savings banks in the names of A and B constituted assets of the corporation. As a matter of law, the corporation had no title to these deposits, and the fact that it may have received credit upon the basis of such deposits is immaterial. There is no basis in the law or regulations for the inclusion of these deposits in the statutory invested capital of the corporation.

The Committee therefore recommends that the action of the Income Tax Unit be sustained and the appeal denied.

II ('23)-34-1209: I. T. 1848

Revenue Acts of 1917, 1918, and 1921.

A corporation organized in 1917 used only borrowed money in acquiring its assets. It was not entitled to any statutory invested capital at the date of its organization.

For the purpose of computing depreciation the property should be valued at its cost price, in spite of the fact that it was purchased with borrowed money. In ascertaining the amount upon which depreciation is to be computed the purchase price should be allocated between depreciable and nondepreciable assets.

In 1917 a corporation, organized that year, acquired a mill from another corporation. The purchaser obtained a portion of the money necessary for the purpose by borrowing on the security of a deed of trust; it obtained another portion by borrowing from a third corporation, and gave its notes to the vendor corporation for the balance of the agreed price. The purchaser then issued capital stock to its own incorporators in an amount greatly in excess of the purchase price of the property. This stock was watered stock, as the corporation received no assets in exchange for the same. The property was appraised during 1918 at an amount in excess of the purchase price but below the amount of the capital stock issued. The corporation thereupon balanced the amount of its liabilities, represented by its capital stock and notes payable, by assets representing the plant at its appraised value and an item designated as intangible property representing the excess of its liabilities over the appraised value of its plant.

Held, as the purchaser used only borrowed money in acquiring its assets it was not entitled to any statutory invested capital at the date of its organization. This fact, however, did not bring it within section 209 of the Revenue Act of 1917, as it employed a substantial amount of borrowed capital in conducting its business. The appraisal of its assets in 1918 at a figure in excess of the amount paid for them did not entitle the taxpayer to any paid-in surplus or to any addition to invested capital.

For the purpose of computing depreciation the property should be valued at its cost price, in spite of the fact that it was purchased with borrowed money. In ascertaining the amount upon which depreciation is to be computed the purchase price should be allocated between depreciable and non-depreciable assets.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. I(22)-29-417: A. R. R. 988

Act of October 3, 1917, Section 208. Act of February 24, 1919, Section 331.

Recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring the appellant to file amended returns for the taxable years affected pursuant to Treasury Decision 3220 (C. B. 5, p. 285), be sustained.

The Committee has carefully considered the oral appeal of the M Company from the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring it to file amended returns for the taxable years affected, pursuant to the provisions of Treasury Decision 3220. [¶865 herein]

The M Company was organized under the laws of the State of Y in 1897 and its charter expired in accordance with its terms in September, 1917. The corporation commissioner of the State of Y having held that under section 6705 of the State of Y Laws the existence of a corporation could not be continued by the filing of supplemental articles of incorporation, the M Company was organized September, 1917, with an authorized capital stock of 30x dollars, which was the same as that of the original company. The stock of the new company was issued to the stockholders of the original company share for share, and all the assets of the old corporation were thereupon transferred to the new corporation at their market value as of September, 1917, and such value was utilized in the preparation of the tax returns of the company. Under date of February —, 1922, demand was made upon the company that it file amended returns for the taxable years affected by the use of such increased invested capital in accordance with the provisions of Treasury Decision 3220 (C. B. 5, p. 285).

Owing to the peculiar circumstances existing in this case the appellant was allowed to file an oral appeal, and argument by its representatives was heard by the Committee on April —, 1922. It is contended by the appellant that the purpose and intent of section 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, and section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, were to prohibit the inflation of the invested capital of a corporation through a voluntary reorganization, and that these sections should not apply to a case like the present, in which the reorganization or change of ownership was wholly involuntary and due solely to the expiration of the charter of the original corporation. It was admitted by the representatives of the appellant at the oral hearing that the assets of the original corporation were never actually distributed to the stockholders but were transferred directly by deed of the original corporation to the new corporation.

Section 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, provides:

That in the case of the reorganization, consolidation, or change of ownership of a trade or business after March 3, 1917, if an interest or control in such trade or business of 50 per centum or more remains in control of the same persons, corporations, associations, partnerships, or any of them, then in ascertaining the invested capital of the trade or business no asset transferred or received from the prior trade or business shall be allowed a greater value than would have been allowed under this title in computing the invested capital of such prior trade or business if such asset had not been so transferred or received, unless such asset was paid for specifically as such, in cash or tangible property, and then not to exceed the actual cash or actual cash value of the tangible property paid therefor at the time of such payment.

The same provision, with certain modifications which are not here material, was enacted as section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919.

Section 6699 of the State of Y Laws provides that:

All corporations that expire by limitation specified in their articles of incorporation, * * * continue to exist as bodies corporate for a period of five years thereafter, if necessary for the purpose of prosecuting or defending actions, suits, or proceedings by or against them, settling their business, disposing of their property, and dividing their capital stock, but not for the purpose of continuing their corporate business.

An examination of section 6705 of the State of Y Laws leads the Committee to concur in the opinion of the corporation commissioner of the State of Y that the existence of the original corporation could not have been continued by the filing of supplemental articles of incorporation, and that, therefore, the M Company constituted a new and separate corporation, but under the provisions of section 6699 the assets of the original corporation did not upon the expiration of its charter automatically revert to the stockholders, but the corporation continued for the purpose of winding up its affairs, and in accordance with the powers thus continued to it, its assets were conveyed to the new corporation.

Without attempting to characterize the proceedings in this case, it is clear that there was a "change of ownership of a trade or business" or "a change of ownership of property," occurring after March 3, 1917, and not only 50 per centum but 100 per centum of the interest or control remained in the same persons. This case, therefore, clearly falls within the language of both sections 208 of the Act of October 3, 1917, and section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, and it does not appear to the Committee that it is outside the purpose and intent of those sections. The sections of the statutes themselves contain no exception in the case of an involuntary change of ownership and it seems clear the intent of Congress was to prevent the increase of the invested capital of a corporation by including therein appreciation in the value of its assets upon a change of ownership which was nominal and not substantial.

The Committee, therefore, finds that the appeal in this case is without merit and accordingly recommends that the action of the Income Tax Unit in requiring the M Company to file amended returns for the taxable years affected, pursuant to Treasury Decision 3220, be sustained.

none of these six corporations is in exactly the same position as the taxpayer. The invested capital of comparatives 1 and 2 is approximately four times as large as the invested capital of the taxpayer; their gross income is nearly twice as large; their expense accounts do not compare favorably with that of the taxpayer. The amount of gross sales of comparative 6 is less than one-half that of the taxpayer. Its cost of goods sold is less than one-third that of the taxpayer, as is its expense account; its net income is considerably less than that of the taxpayer, while the proportion of its net income to gross sales is approximately twice that of the taxpayer. Furthermore, comparatives 3, 4, and 5, as may be seen, are circumstanced in many respects quite differently from the taxpayer. Thus, none of the six comparatives which are most nearly similarly circumstanced with the taxpayer is ideal. Nevertheless, the taxpayer is entitled to relief under section 328, and corporations must be used as comparatives which are similarly circumstanced as nearly as may be with the taxpayer. The six corporations used as comparatives in this case are those, I am advised, most similarly circumstanced with the taxpayer with respect to the items specified in section 328. Furthermore, the items of some which are dissimilar to the taxpayer are balanced by the corresponding items of the other comparatives, and the correctness of the result reached by the use of these comparatives is shown by the fact that the average obtained by grouping the six comparatives compares very closely with the taxpayer.

In the instant case the comparatives used are the ones most comparable to the taxpayer with respect to the items specified in section 328 and the average of these comparatives compares in every respect favorably with the taxpayer. It is my opinion, therefore, that the comparatives used in the data sheet prepared in this case comply with the provisions of section 328.

Law Opinion 1090 [Sec. 327. Art. 901.-31, herein.] is hereby revoked.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

was made, however, in the amended returns for the good-will item aforementioned. Upon the request of the Unit for advice on the subjects involving the good-will item, 20.19x dollars was disallowed as a capital item. The money in bank, 34.33x dollars, was also excluded from invested capital on the ground that it was not the property of the corporation.

It appears that the savings bank of the city of S as a matter of policy refused to receive partnership funds for deposit, and because of such refusal the partners deposited a part of the surplus each year in the names of the partners, A and B. After incorporation these individuals owned over 95 per cent of the stock of the appellant company, and from February 1, 1914, to the date of liquidation of the appellant company in 1920 the amounts in the savings banks credited to the above-named individuals were continuously increased. The accounts of the corporation, however, contain no record of these deposits or interest accrued thereon.

There is of record evidence showing that A and B wrote letters to mercantile houses stating that the amounts in the R Bank credited to their accounts were the property of the appellant company; that such statements were given to mercantile agencies; that, on May —, 1918, the appellant company borrowed from the R Bank the sum of 10x dollars, and later, on November —, 1918, the sum of 10x dollars, on the credit established by the savings deposits credited to A and B; that in 1920, when the business was liquidated, the cost of liquidation was paid out of these deposits, and the balance distributed among the stockholders.

The Committee is unable to agree with the appellant's contention that the deposits in savings banks in the names of A and B constituted assets of the corporation. As a matter of law, the corporation had no title to these deposits, and the fact that it may have received credit upon the basis of such deposits is immaterial. There is no basis in the law or regulations for the inclusion of these deposits in the statutory invested capital of the corporation.

The Committee therefore recommends that the action of the Income Tax Unit be sustained and the appeal denied.

Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

give you these dates of acquisition on any appreciable amount of the individual items. I can, however, say that the predecessor corporation started business in 1904 and that additions to plant were made quite extensively in 1907, and probably 90 per cent of the plant on hand July —, 1914, was acquired in those two years.

Referring to paragraph four of your letter asking us to segregate the items which are identified with entries on the books of the predecessor corporation from the items not so identified, it would be a long and difficult task to do this in the form you wish. While the prices paid by the predecessor corporation were used wherever possible, they do not constitute a large per cent of the value, and as it is my understanding that these costs would be, in any event, only for comparative purposes, I believe that the values we have used as of July —, 1914, can be checked to your satisfaction in some other way.

In paragraph five you asked for costs of installation, freight, and cartage. These items were in most cases determined by inspection and by conference with the master mechanic of the company and by using the freight rates known to exist at July —, 1914. To give the detail which you asked for would require an expenditure of money far in excess of anything gained by having these items included at the conservative value which I have shown for these items.

In view of the admitted inability of the appellant to furnish the evidence necessary to enable the Unit properly to check the appraisal, the case has been returned to the Committee for further recommendation.

The action of the Unit has been discussed with the representative of the appellant and the case is, therefore, further considered as on appeal.

The replies of the appellant indicate a total failure to tie up the inventory as of the date as of which the appraisal was made with the books of the corporation and thus to determine either the date of acquisition or the cost of practically 100 per cent of such inventory. Under these circumstances the Committee concurs in the position taken by the Unit that the appraisal submitted in this case is not susceptible of verification within the requirements of T. D. 3367 [¶1265 herein].

KINGMAN BREWSTER

Chairman Committee on Appeals and Review.

The year 1910-1911 was a year of great disaster for the people of the United States. The year was marked by a series of floods that were unprecedented in their extent and severity. The floods were caused by a combination of factors, including heavy rains, melting snow, and a series of storms that swept across the country. The floods were particularly devastating in the West, where they caused the destruction of many towns and cities. In the East, the floods were also severe, causing the loss of many lives and the destruction of property. The year 1910-1911 was a year of great suffering for the people of the United States, and it was a year that will be remembered for many years to come.

UNINDEXED SUPPLEMENTARY ESTATE TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.

E535 3. For the calculation of accrued interest on the current coupons of bonds and notes tendered in payment of estate or inheritance taxes under this circular, the method outlined in Exhibit B [¶383] to Department Circular No. 225, dated January 31, 1921, should be followed. Interest tables at the various rates borne by the various issues, or for other or future issues, may be obtained from the Treasury Department, Division of Loans and Currency, Washington, upon request. (Second Supplement to Department Circular No. 225 appended to T. D. 3513, ¶E532, signed by S. P. Gilbert, Jr., Acting Secretary of the Treasury, and dated July 31, 1923.)

E536 California Community Property (1916-1917 Acts).—The California Supreme Court holds, no question of Federal taxation being involved, however, in Roberts vs. Wehmeyer (August 17, 1923), that the husband is the owner of the community property. Judge Lawlor in the course of his opinion states that “we are not unmindful of the two decisions rendered in the case of Blum vs. Wardell, one by the United States District Court, 270 Fed. 309, and the other by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 276 Fed. 226,” holding that the wife’s half of the community property should not be included in the decedent husband’s gross estate for the purposes of the Federal estate tax (1916 Act). Judge Lawlor, continuing, says: “We agree with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in so far as it is based on the interpretation of the Inheritance Tax Act of 1917 (California) to the effect that the part of the community property passing to the wife should not be subject to such tax.”—The Corporation Trust Company.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(Decision.)

September 22, 1922.

The issue of four shares of $25 par value for each outstanding share of $100 par value, pursuant to charter amendment reducing par value of shares, is not subject to tax as original issue on reorganization.

DISTRICT COURT FOR THE NORTHERN DISTRICT OF OHIO
EASTERN DIVISION

The Trumbull Steel Company, Plaintiff,

vs.

C. F. Routzahn, Collector of Internal Revenue, Defendant.

4072 WESTENHAVER, District Judge:—The sole question presented is what issues of stock by a corporation are subject to the stamp tax imposed by Secs. 1100 and 1107, Schedule A, Par. 2, War Revenue Act approved Nov. 23, 1921, (42 Stat. 227, 301, 303; Supplement 1923 U. S. Comp. Stat. Sec. 6318i, 6318p, Schedule A, Par. 2).

4073 Prior to August 16, 1920, The Trumbull Steel Company had issued and outstanding, 131,681 shares of stock evidenced by certificates of par value of $100 each. On that date, pursuant to Secs. 8719-8722 G. C. of Ohio, the company amended its articles of incorporation, changing the par value of each share of $100 to $25. The outstanding certificates were thereafter called in and four new certificates for each of the old were issued. No other change in stock ownership or stock privileges or corporate organization was made. A tax of five cents on each $100 par value of the new certificates was levied and assessed, paid under protest, and application for a refund made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and by him refused. Hence this action.

4074 Secs. 1100 and 1107, Revenue Act of 1921 are precisely the same as the corresponding sections of War Revenue Act of 1918 approved Feb. 24, 1919 (40 Stat. 1057, 1133, 1135). In all provisions pertinent to this controversy, these two revenue acts are precisely the same as the War Revenue Act of 1917 approved Oct. 3, 1917, (40 Stat. 300, 319, 321) and, as was pointed out in Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. (2 C. C. A.) 264 Fed. 610, the provisions of the War Revenue Act of 1917 were substantially the same, so far as they pertain to this subject matter, as corresponding provisions in the Spanish War Revenue Act approved June 13, 1908 (30 Stat. 458) and of the Emergency War Revenue Act approved Oct. 22, 1914 (38 Stat. 753). This being true, a construction given to the provisions of the War Revenue Act of 1917 or of the two other revenue acts referred to prior to the re-enactment of the same provisions in the Revenue Act of 1921, is controlling, upon the familiar rule that the re-enactment by Congress without change of a statute which has previously received a certain construction, whether judicial or departmental, is an adoption by Congress of such construction. Sewing Machine Companies Case, 18 Wall. 553, 584; Kepner v. United States, 195 U. S. 100, 121; United States v. G. Falk & Bro., 204 U. S. 143, 152; United States v. Cerecedo Hermanos y Campana, 209 U. S. 337, 339.

4075 The Act in question imposed a stamp tax of five cents on each $100 of face value or fraction thereof of capital stock. The language describing the same is "on each original issue, whether on organization or reorganization, of certificates of stock * * * by any corporation."

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

Transfers, sales, or reissue of certificates are subject to a different tax and are provided for in other paragraphs of Sec. 1107. Hence the question is, what is an original issue of certificates? Or, differently stated, what is an original issue on reorganization?

4076 These questions were fully considered in Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. supra. It arose under War Revenue Act of 1917 and was decided Feb. 8, 1920. The Wabash Ry. Co. had outstanding two classes of preferred stock and also common stock. It called in one class of preferred stock and converted it part into preferred and part into common and issued new certificates to the holders thereof, conferring new and different rights and privileges in the corporate property and management. It was held that this readjustment of the stock of the corporation was not an original issue either on organization or reorganization, and that the new certificates were not subject to the documentary stamp imposed by the War Revenue Act of 1917. This readjustment of corporate rights and privileges among stockholders was more fundamental and more worthy to be called a reorganization of the corporation than the changes effected by the plaintiff herein among its stockholders. In the former case the rights and privileges of the stockholders were, as between themselves, and in the assets of the corporation, substantially changed and readjusted, whereas in the present case no change was effected but each stockholder at the end of the process had merely four certificates evidencing precisely the same rights and privileges as were previously evidenced by a single certificate.

4077 Upon the principle and authorities above stated, this case is controlling. It is pointed out in the opinion that the provisions of the Spanish War Revenue Act imposing a stamp tax on stock certificates was given a departmental construction excluding therefrom re-issues where there was no change of ownership but merely a substitution in the hands of the same stockholder of certificates for one class of stock in lieu of certificates for another class (T. D. 20694, Feb. 7, 1899); and also that a like departmental construction had been given to the corresponding provisions of the Emergency War Revenue Act of 1914 (T. D. 2051, March 9, 1914); and that this departmental construction thus declared and acquiesced in was not changed until 1918 (T. D. 2752, Aug. 14, 1918). It was held that the re-enactment of the same language in the War Revenue Act of 1917 after this departmental construction had been established, was the equivalent of an adoption by Congress of that construction. In addition thereto we now have the re-enactment by Congress of the exact language of the War Revenue Act of 1917 after a judicial construction to the same effect.

4078 In view of these considerations, whatever doubt might originally or otherwise exist as to the provision in question, Edwards v. Wabash Ry. Co. should be followed. Nothing in the way of original discussion can be profitably added to the carefully considered opinion of Circuit Judge Rogers. The conclusion now reached accords with the holding of District Judge Hickenlooper, Southern District of Ohio, July 24, 1923, in American Laundry Mach. Co. v. Dean [¶4063, herein], and of District Judge Knox, August 1, 1923, in West Virginia Pulp & Paper Co. v. Bowers [¶4062, herein]. Such also seems to be the purport of Holmes Federal Taxes, 1923 Edition, pp. 1392-4.

4079 What is a reorganization of a corporation such as makes new certificates as original issue subject to the stamp tax, need not be further considered. Cook on Corporations, 6th Ed., Sec. 883, attempts a definition

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Revenue Act of 1921.

I ('22) 51-643: I. T. 1532.

On January 1, 1921, the M Company's business was the property of an individual. On September 1, 1921, a corporation having the same name as that under which this business had been previously conducted took over the entire assets and liabilities of the business. The individual income tax return of the individual owner included the income from the business for the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, while a corporation income and profits tax returns was filed by the corporation for the period from September 1 to December 31, 1921. In preparing an amended return in which the income from the business for the entire year was to be returned as the income of the corporation, under the provisions of section 229 of the Revenue Act of 1921, it was found that the withdrawal account of the former owner of the business for the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, included an item paid by him to the collector of internal revenue in settlement of his individual income tax for the year 1920.

The question was raised as to whether the entire withdrawal account of the individual owner should be considered as a dividend paid to him by the corporation or whether the Federal income tax item should be eliminated from the withdrawal account and be considered as an item of Federal income tax paid and not as a dividend.

Held, that the item of the individual owner's withdrawal account representing the amount paid in discharge of his individual Federal income tax for 1920 should be prorated so as to represent amounts which will be proportionate to the amount of his net income for 1920 which was derived from the M Company's business and to the remaining amount of his net income which was derived from other sources, respectively.

The portion of the withdrawal made for income tax payment which is proportionate to the individual owner's net income derived from the M Company's business should not be considered as a dividend received by him from the corporation and it is not subject to tax as such. It is to be considered as a payment from the capital of the M Company's business as at December 31, 1920, and must be excluded from the amount of the assets received by the corporation in determining its invested capital at January 1, 1921.

The balance of the withdrawal made for the income tax payment which is proportionate to the individual owner's net income derived from sources other than the M Company's business, if any, is to be considered as a dividend paid by the corporation during 1921 and will be taxable as such.

All other funds withdrawn by the individual owner for personal use during the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, must be considered as dividends paid to him by the corporation.

II ('23) 1-688: I. T. 1559.

Revenue Act of 1921.

A corporation suffered an operating loss during its first fiscal year which ended in 1920, but made a profit for the fiscal year ended in 1921, upon which it paid an income tax. This profit, however, was not sufficient to wipe out the operating loss of the preceding year.

The corporation is not required to reduce its invested capital for the fiscal year beginning in 1921 and ended in 1922 on account of the income-tax payment made during such year, but is entitled to the full capital paid in as invested capital without reduction for the operating loss or for the income-tax payment.

In filing its return for the fiscal year begun in 1921 and ended in 1922, care should be taken to state in Schedule H of the return the reason why there is no adjustment of invested capital on account of the income-tax payment for the preceding year.

the property was to be held in trust by the N Company and at the expiration of the period was to be conveyed to the appellant by a good and sufficient deed, provided all of the conditions set out in the agreement of 1911 had been complied with. The contract was carried out and in the year 1921 the land and buildings were deeded to the taxpayer and a release given by the N Company for any and all contractual rights which it held under the agreement.

The appellant contends that for all practical purposes the cash and land were paid into the corporation for use in its business without any financial consideration or interest charges, and that the 20x dollars should be allowed as paid-in surplus under the provisions of article 63 of Regulations 41.

The Committee has carefully considered the arguments that have been advanced and has reached the conclusion that under no construction of the regulations could this cash and tangible property be regarded as having been paid in to the appellant corporation at any time prior to the full compliance with all of the terms of the agreement entered into in 1911. The appellant corporation could, at any time during this period, have failed or refused to comply with one or more of the conditions, and had this been done all of the property would have reverted to the N Company. The provisions of the law and regulations relating to paid-in surplus do not contemplate any such contingent interest with respect to the property paid in.

It is therefore recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that its claim for paid-in surplus of 20x dollars be denied and that the action of the Income Tax Unit be sustained.

KINGMAN BREWSTER,
Chairman Committee on Appeals and Review.

Paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits not including surplus and undivided profits earned during the year.

The questions involved here rest on whether the proportionate amounts of annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus account of the several stockholders were dividends, or in whole or in part earned surplus.

Article 858, Regulations 45, in so far as pertinent here reads as follows:

A dividend other than a stock dividend affects the computation of invested capital from the date when the dividend is payable and not from the date when it is declared, except that where no date is set for its payment the date when declared will be considered also the date when payable for the purpose of this article. * * * From the date when any dividend is payable the amount which the several stockholders are entitled to receive will be treated as if actually paid to them, whether or not it is so paid in fact, and the surplus and undivided profits, either of the taxable year or of the preceding years, will in accordance with the foregoing provisions be deemed to be reduced as of that date by the full amount of the dividend.

The statute of Connecticut as to dividends follows the general form as that of most States. It prohibits a corporation from paying any dividend or from making any other distribution of its assets except from its net profits or actual surplus, unless in accordance with the law as to the reduction of stock or upon dissolution.

While the resolutions referred to do not specifically refer to the amounts credited to the so-called individual surplus accounts as dividends, the purpose is clear that it was intended to make available to each stockholder at least a large part if not all of the amounts so credited. This is evidenced by the large withdrawals without any further corporate action. While the usual and proper way to appropriate corporation profits to stockholders is by formally declaring a dividend, it has been very generally held that there may be a division of profits among stockholders without the formality of declaring a dividend, and that such a division is the equivalent of a dividend. (Smith v. Moore, 199 Fed., 689; Hartley v. Pioneer Iron Works, 73 N. E., 576 (N. Y.)) And it has been held that if the directors ascertain the profits and set apart the portion thereof that is to be divided, a failure to observe the forms prescribed by law as to the time, place and manner of declaring them is immaterial. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., 58 Atl., 313 (N. J.)) This is the law in Connecticut. (Cogswell v. Second National Bank, 60 Atl., 1059, affirmed in 204 U. S., 1.)

In the instant case the directors having ascertained the profits, and set apart certain sums which were actually credited to the individual stockholders, all matters of form are immaterial. The evidence shows that at stated times the specific things necessary to warrant a declaration of dividends were done and that the profits actually made were set apart for distribution among the stockholders. This is the essence of the declaration of a dividend, so far as it results in segregating a portion of the property of the company for the use of the stockholders. Therefore the corporation, as such, had no property interest in the money thus set apart. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., supra; Barnes v. Spencer & Barnes Co., 127 N. W., 752 (Mich.); Cogswell v. Second National Bank, supra (Conn.)) The effect of the declaration of a dividend is at once the establishment of a debt due from the corporation to each stockholder. (Boardman v. Mansfield, 66 Atl., 169 (Conn.); Bishop v. Bishop, 71 Atl., 583 (Conn.))

The amounts credited to the accounts of the respective stockholders were freely drawn upon and the amounts so credited reported as income by the individual stockholders when credited to their accounts. These are circumstances which are of great persuasive force in reaching a conclusion as to how the individual stockholders themselves considered the amounts so credited.

It is, therefore, the opinion of this office that the proportionate amounts of the annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus accounts of the several stockholders were dividends, and that such surplus accounts were in effect debts owing at all times by the corporation to its stockholders, any withdrawal by individual stockholders merely being a debit against the proper individual surplus account. It follows that for the years 1917 and 1918 the net credit balances of individual surplus accounts can not be included in the invested capital of the M Company.

In accordance with the above opinion of the Solicitor, in which the Committee concurs, it is recommended that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that certain amounts standing as credits to the individual surplus accounts of stockholders on January 1, 1917, and January 1, 1918, represented dividends owing to its stockholders and not, as contended by the appellant, earned surplus which could properly be included in invested capital, be sustained, and, accordingly, that the appeal be denied.

Revenue Act of 1918.

A corporation succeeded a partnership on January 1, 1918, and took over the assets and liabilities of the partnership at their book value. One of the items taken over was a reserve for taxes which represented the amount of the excess-profits tax due by the partnership and the amount of the income taxes due by the individual partners. The corporation, in opening its balance sheet on January 1, 1918, set up this reserve for taxes and claimed it as a part of its invested capital as of January 1, 1918.

Held, that the reserve for taxes when transferred from the partnership to the corporation represented borrowed capital in the possession of the corporation and that, in accordance with the provisions of section 326(b) of the Revenue Act of 1918, it could not be included in the invested capital of the corporation.

Paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits not including surplus and undivided profits earned during the year.

The questions involved here rest on whether the proportionate amounts of annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus account of the several stockholders were dividends, or in whole or in part earned surplus.

Article 858, Regulations 45, in so far as pertinent here reads as follows:

A dividend other than a stock dividend affects the computation of invested capital from the date when the dividend is payable and not from the date when it is declared, except that where no date is set for its payment the date when declared will be considered also the date when payable for the purpose of this article. * * * From the date when any dividend is payable the amount which the several stockholders are entitled to receive will be treated as if actually paid to them, whether or not it is so paid in fact, and the surplus and undivided profits, either of the taxable year or of the preceding years, will in accordance with the foregoing provisions be deemed to be reduced as of that date by the full amount of the dividend.

The statute of Connecticut as to dividends follows the general form as that of most States. It prohibits a corporation from paying any dividend or from making any other distribution of its assets except from its net profits or actual surplus, unless in accordance with the law as to the reduction of stock upon dissolution.

While the resolutions referred to do not specifically refer to the amounts credited to the so-called individual surplus accounts as dividends, the purpose is clear that it was intended to make available to each stockholder at least a large part if not all of the amounts so credited. This is evidenced by the large withdrawals without any further corporate action. While the usual and proper way to appropriate corporation profits to stockholders is by formally declaring a dividend, it has been very generally held that there may be a division of profits among stockholders without the formality of declaring a dividend, and that such a division is the equivalent of a dividend. (Smith v. Moore, 199 Fed., 689; Hartley v. Pioneer Iron Works, 73 N. E., 576 (N. Y.).) And it has been held that if the directors ascertain the profits and set apart the portion thereof that is to be divided, a failure to observe the forms prescribed by law as to the time, place and manner of declaring them is immaterial. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., 58 Atl., 313 (N. J.).) This is the law in Connecticut. (Cogswell v. Second National Bank, 60 Atl., 1059, affirmed in 204 U. S., 1.)

In the instant case the directors having ascertained the profits, and set apart certain sums which were actually credited to the individual stockholders, all matters of form are immaterial. The evidence shows that at stated times the specific things necessary to warrant a declaration of dividends were done and that the profits actually made were set apart for distribution among the stockholders. This is the essence of the declaration of a dividend, so far as it results in segregating a portion of the property of the company for the use of the stockholders. Thenceforward the corporation, as such, had no property interest in the money thus set apart. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., supra; Barnes v. Spencer & Barnes Co., 127 N. W., 752 (Mich.); Cogswell v. Second National Bank, supra (Conn.).) The effect of the declaration of a dividend is at once the establishment of a debt due from the corporation to each stockholder. (Boardman v. Mansfield, 66 Atl., 169 (Conn.); Bishop v. Bishop, 71 Atl., 583 (Conn.).)

The amounts credited to the accounts of the respective stockholders were freely drawn upon and the amounts so credited reported as income by the individual stockholders when credited to their accounts. These are circumstances which are of great persuasive force in reaching a conclusion as to how the individual stockholders themselves considered the amounts so credited.

It is, therefore, the opinion of this office that the proportionate amounts of the annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus accounts of the several stockholders were dividends, and that such surplus accounts were in effect debts owing at all times by the corporation to its stockholders, any withdrawal by individual stockholders merely being a debit against the proper individual surplus account. It follows that for the years 1917 and 1918 the net credit balances of individual surplus accounts can not be included in the invested capital of the M Company.

In accordance with the above opinion of the Solicitor, in which the Committee concurs, it is recommended that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that certain amounts standing as credits to the individual surplus accounts of stockholders on January 1, 1917, and January 1, 1918, represented dividends owing to its stockholders and not, as contended by the appellant, earned surplus which could properly be included in invested capital, be sustained, and, accordingly, that the appeal be denied.

E535 3. For the calculation of accrued interest on the current coupons of bonds and notes tendered in payment of estate or inheritance taxes under this circular, the method outlined in Exhibit B [¶383] to Department Circular No. 225, dated January 31, 1921, should be followed. Interest tables at the various rates borne by the various issues, or for other or future issues, may be obtained from the Treasury Department, Division of Loans and Currency, Washington, upon request. (Second Supplement to Department Circular No. 225 appended to T. D. 3513, ¶E532, signed by S. P. Gilbert, Jr., Acting Secretary of the Treasury, and dated July 31, 1923.)

E536 California Community Property (1916-1917 Acts).—The California
 117 Supreme Court holds, no question of Federal taxation being involved, 127 however, in Roberts vs. Wehmeyer (August 17, 1923), that the 285 husband is the owner of the community property. Judge Lawlor in the course of his opinion states that "we are not unmindful of the two decisions rendered in the case of Blum vs. Wardell, one by the United States District Court, 270 Fed. 309, and the other by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals, 276 Fed. 226," holding that the wife's half of the community property should not be included in the decedent husband's gross estate for the purposes of the Federal estate tax (1916 Act). Judge Lawlor, continuing, says: "We agree with the decision of the Circuit Court of Appeals in so far as it is based on the interpretation of the Inheritance Tax Act of 1917 (California) to the effect that the part of the community property passing to the wife should not be subject to such tax."—The Corporation Trust Company.

WAR-PROFITS AND EXCESS-PROFITS TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.—1922-1923.

as provided by the Section, engaged in a trade or business having a nominal capital. It was not a producer or manufacturer but its entire business was simply to collect and distribute the rental or royalty charged for use of its patents and, as it may, in accordance with said Section, be assessed with "a tax equivalent to eight per centum of the net income of such trade or business" it follows by the terms of the section this shall be "in lieu of the tax imposed by section two hundred and one."

1332 The Court below having found as a fact—a finding in which we concur—that the trade or business of the Plaintiff had no invested capital, and such being the plain wording of the statute, it follows that an attempt by departmental construction to theoretically swell that nominal capital into a large amount, simply because its business on its nominal capital proved highly remunerative, is at variance with the taxing statute and with the principle that the right to impose taxation must have clear statutory warrant and that doubtful constructions must be resolved in favor of the taxpayer.

(Decision.)

1917 Tax on Individuals.

1333 Failure to make and file separate excess profits tax return under the Act of October 3, 1917, subjects taxpayer to fifty per cent penalty.

—[Comment: In Beam vs. Hamilton, Collector, Circuit Court of Appeals, Sixth Circuit (289 Fed. 9), decided May 15, 1923, the plaintiff seeks to have set aside a judgment rendered in favor of the collector in a suit to recover a penalty (50% of the excess profits tax found due) for alleged failure to make separate return for excess profits tax purposes of income from his personal business as a distiller received during 1917 no accounting of which was carried forward in his income tax return of salary and dividends otherwise received. Judge Knappen held that " * * * we are unable to agree with plaintiff's contention that, because Schedule B was so left blank, and plaintiff thereby (implied only) made a return that he was not engaged in a business with invested capital, and that he did not owe any excess profits tax, he thereby made a return within the meaning of the excess profits title, although the return so impliedly made on Form 1040 was untrue; nor with the further contention that, unless the return actually made was willfully false or fraud-incidental to the conduct of the plaintiff's business and was used entirely as a fund from which to advance salaries, wages, etc., and to provide office furniture, accommodations and equipment.

10. In compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide Revenue to Defray War Expenses and other Purposes,' approved October 3, 1917, plaintiff made due returns to the defendant of its annual net income for the twelve (12) months ended December 31, 1917, and paid the income and excess profits taxes due thereunder, in accordance with the provisions of Section 209 of the said Act, whereby the excess profits tax was levied and assessed upon corporations employing no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital. The plaintiff's contention in this respect was disallowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and after various letters had been exchanged and a hearing had in Washington, the plaintiff was notified by the defendant in August, 1919, that additional income and excess profits taxes for the year 1917 had been assessed against it in the sum of $16,969.45, which amount had been arrived at upon the basis of a fictitious capital constructed under Section 210 of the said Act and an application of the rates prescribed by Section 201 of the Act for corporations employing capital."

ulent, as the court below found it was not, plaintiff cannot be subject to the penalty for failure to make another return, as to which the liability is not conditioned upon fraudulent action. Not only was the excess profits tax a separate, distinct, and then novel source of revenue, but the statute and regulations * * * in express and formal terms required separate and distinct returns thereof, and we think it clear that failure to make a separate return of excess profits tax is none the less a failure to make the return contemplated by the statute because of the mere fact that the computations on the excess profits return are to be carried onto Form 1040; the use of that form also is necessary to a complete report. By section 213 the Commissioner was undoubtedly given authority, with the approval of the Secretary of the Treasury, to require both returns. * * * We think the Commissioner justified in holding that, while the accountant was responsible for the correctness of the figures, plaintiff was responsible for the source of the same and sufficient details to insure a complete understanding of the business, and that failure to take such precaution to 'discover the omission of the principal item of income' does not 'constitute reasonable cause for failure to file an excess profits tax return, which was also due to the omission of the income in question from [plaintiff's] income tax return.' The penalty, while drastic, was intended to insure payment of public revenue. No question of its reasonableness is involved."—The Corporation Trust Company.]

Perpetual Check List
Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Law Section 326.—Invested Capital (1918 Act—¶555, ante): (1921 Act—¶1035, post).

Article 844.—Surplus and Undivided Profits. Reserve for Depreciation or depletion (Reg. 45—¶778, ante): (Reg. 62—¶1210, post).

7-19-308: T. B. M. 41.

The claim of the X Company for the inclusion in its invested capital for the year 1917 of the amount of 6x dollars, representing appreciation in the value of its property, which appreciation had been taken up on its books in 1914 and returned as taxable income for that year, should be denied for the reason that such tax was erroneously assessed and collected. The taxpayer is entitled to a claim for refund.

Reference is made to the claim of the X Company for the inclusion in its invested capital for the year 1917 of an amount of x dollars representing appreciation in the value of a certain part of its property which was taken up on the books in 1914 and returned as a part of its taxable net income for that year, in accordance with article 107 of Regulations 33, which reads as follows:

Art. 107. It will be noted from these definitions that the gross income embraces not only the operating revenues but also income, gains, or profits from all other sources, such as rentals, royalties, interest and dividends from stock owned in other corporations, and appreciation in values of assets if taken up on the books of account as gain, also profits made from the sale of assets, investments, etc.

This item was brought to the attention of the Bureau during 1918 and was disallowed in the computation of invested capital for the year 1917. An appeal was made to the Advisory Tax Board, but no evidence has been found that would warrant a change in the original decision of this office.

Regulations 33, from which article 107 is quoted above, were issued in January, 1914, and in March, 1915, the question of the taxability of appreciation of property when taken up on the books of a taxpayer was decided adversely to the Government by the United States Circuit Court of Appeals in the case of the Baldwin Locomotive Works v. McCoach, Collector (221 Fed., 59). This decision was embodied in Treasury Decision 2185, issued April, 1915, which held that an "increase in the valuation of assets on the books of the corporation is not income received during the year, where there is no addition to the plant and all that was done was to revalue the property." It appears, therefore, that the return for 1914 was made in accordance with the regulations of the department, but that shortly after the filing of the return the court decision above mentioned made it necessary for the Treasury Department to rescind the provisions of article 107, of Regulations 33, in so far as they related to the taxation of unrealized appreciation. Between April 1, 1915, and the date upon which the tax for 1914 became due and payable a claim might have been filed for abatement of the proportion of the tax represented by the item of appreciation, and since the date of the payment of the tax the company was entitled to file a claim for refund. This right continues for a period of five years from date upon which the return was due.

The computation of invested capital for the year 1917 is to be determined in accordance with the provisions of the Act of October 3, 1917, and Regulations No. 41, issued thereunder. In article 42 of these Regulations it is provided, inter alia, that—

If value appreciation of a kind not subject to income tax (other than that allowed under article 55) has been taken up on the accounts, a deduction must be made in respect of such appreciation so taken up.

As shown above, the appreciation written up on the books in 1914 was not properly subject to income tax. The exception to this rule as found in article 55 referred to in the quotation above reads as follows:

Tangible property paid in for stock or shares prior to January 1, 1914, must be valued at either (a) the actual cash value of such property on January 1, 1914, or (b) the par value of the stock or shares specifically issued therefor, whichever is lower.

This regulation is based upon the statutory provision defining invested capital, which is found in section 207 (a) (2) of the Act of October 3, 1917:

The actual cash value of tangible property paid in other than cash, for stock or shares in such corporation or partnership, at the time of such payment (but in case such tangible property was paid in prior to January 1, 1914, the actual cash value of such property as of January 1, 1914, but in no case to exceed the par value of the original stock or shares specifically issued therefor).

This provision of the law does not allow for any general appreciation of property as at January 1, 1914, and the inclusion of appreciation in invested capital is limited in effect to cases where capital stock has been issued specifically in payment for tangible assets in an amount which at par exceeded the actual cash value of the property at the date of the transaction, but where between such date and January 1, 1914, the property had appreciated in value. In such a case appreciation in an amount not in excess of the difference between the actual cash value of such property at the date of its acquisition and the par value of the stock issued specifically for the property may be included in invested capital. The case does not come within this exception.

The claim for inclusion in invested capital of a dollars representing appreciation in value of property can not be allowed.

6883 Time for registry under the provisions of Article 37, Regulations 43, 6817 Part 1, and Article 26 of Regulations 52, extended.—The first sentence of Article 37, Regulations 43, Part 1, (Revised January, 1922) previously amended by Treasury Decision 3394, is hereby further amended to read as follows:

“Application for and certificate of registry.—Every individual, corporation, partnership, or association (1) required by the provisions of the Act to collect any tax on admissions (see Art. 35) or (2) being the owner or lessee of any place which is ordinarily or at times leased to other persons who impose charges for admissions to it (see Art. 42) or (3) required to pay any tax on charges in excess of established price (see Art. 36) shall annually, on or before the last* day of July, or if that day fall on a Sunday or legal holiday, then on the next secular or business day, or within ten days after commencing business, make an application for registry, by filling out Form 752 (Revised), with all information there called for, and duly execute it under oath.” (T. D. 3504, in part, signed by Acting Commissioner C. R. Nash, and dated August 4, 1923.)

*Changes indicated by italics; application for registry was due, heretofore, on first day of July.—The Corporation Trust Company.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

4062 The issue of four $25 shares in exchange for each outstanding 3561 $100 share (otherwise of the same kind) and the subsequent issue of a share of no par value stock in exchange for each $25 share, all pursuant to amendments of the issuing corporation's charter increasing the number of shares but not the amount of its capital, held not subject to original issue tax.—[Comment: In West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company vs. Bowers, Collector (U. S. District Court—New York, Southern District, August 1, 1923), the plaintiff sought to recover stamp taxes paid under protest on that which the Collector termed original issues of stock on reorganization, and thereupon taxed as such pursuant to the provisions of Article 4 (h), Regulations 40 [Par. 3561], and which consisted of the exchange of 4 shares of new $25 par value common stock for each share of outstanding $100 par value common stock, otherwise of the same kind, in accordance with an amendment of the plaintiff's charter increasing the number of shares from 200,000 to 800,000 without change in the amount of its capital which remained $20,000,000, and the subsequent exchange of one share of no par value stock for each share of $25 par value stock pursuant to further amendment of the corporation's charter.—The Corporation Trust Company.]

Memorandum Opinion.—Knox, J.: In a case such as this there is little use for a court of first instance to enter upon a discussion of its views as to the interpretation to be placed upon a particular taxing statute. Any decision of mine will be but a conduit through which a more authoritative ruling will be had, and for such reason I forbear to elaborate upon my conclusions.
 It is enough to say that in my judgment the acts of plaintiff giving rise to the assessment of the tax in question are not within the purview of the statute upon which defendant relies. What plaintiff did, in my opinion, is not to be regarded as an original issuance of stock, either upon organization or reorganization. No essential change in the capital with which plaintiff does business has taken place, and the rights of its stockholders have been neither increased nor lessened. They continue to hold their respective portions of the original issue of stock save that such portions are now evidenced by an increased number of pieces of paper, and these they may have without their corporation being subjected to the tax assessed against it. Defendant's motion for judgment of dismissal is denied and unless defendant desires to litigate the allegations of fact set up in the complaint there is no reason why plaintiff should not have judgment for the sum sued for.

assumes that such value has been determined in accordance with the law and regulations and to the satisfaction of the Unit.

Article 163 of Regulations 45, issued under the Revenue Act of 1918, is equally applicable under the Revenue Act of 1917. This article provides in part:

If, however, an intangible asset acquired through capital outlay is known from experience to be of value in the business for only a limited period, the length of which can be estimated from experience with reasonable certainty, such intangible asset may be the subject of a depreciation allowance, * * *.

In the determination of the depreciation allowance which may be claimed in the 1917 return of the taxpayer, two factors must be known and are apparent in the record, to wit: the cost of the asset, and its life, as determined by the period for which the right under which the company operated in 1917, was to run.

These factors as shown by the record are: cost of asset,  $x$  dollars; and life of asset, 23.5 months.

It is the opinion of the Committee, therefore, that the depreciation allowance to which the taxpayer is entitled for the calendar year 1917 is an amount which bears the same ratio to  $x$  dollars as twelve months (the taxable year) bears to 23.5 months (the total period or life of the asset).

In line with this opinion there appears to be no question as to the measure of value which may be assigned to the asset (patent right) for purposes of invested capital as of January 1, 1917, which necessarily must be  $x$  dollars minus depreciation for one and one-half months (November —, to December 31, 1916), or an amount not in excess of 20 per cent of the total shares of stock outstanding on March 3, 1917, measured by their value as at date or dates of issue, whichever is lower.

It is recommended, therefore, in the appeal of the M Company that there be allowed as a deduction from gross income in the company's 1917 return a depreciation of patent rights in an amount which bears the same ratio to the established cost of the patent rights,  $x$  dollars, as 12 months (the taxable year) bears to 23.5 months (the total period for which the patent rights are to run); and that the valuation assigned to such asset as of January 1, 1917, for invested capital purposes be the cost of the asset,  $x$  dollars minus depreciation for one and one-half months, or an amount not in excess of 20 per cent of the total shares of stock outstanding on March 3, 1917, measured by their value as at date or dates of issue, whichever is lower. (See art. 58, Reg. 41.)

UNINDEXED SUPPLEMENTARY ESTATE TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.

day of April, 1922, for the plaintiffs, and against the defendant, for the sum of $3,710.25, and $26.05 costs.

E521 There is but one question in this case, and that is, does the Maryland collateral inheritance tax attach to an estate before distribution? If so, the plaintiffs are entitled to recover the amount above named.

"Lederer vs. Northern Trust Co., 262 Fed. 52; 253 U. S. 487."

E522 If, on the other hand, the Maryland tax is a legacy tax, and not an estate tax, the sum in controversy was properly collected.

"New York Trust Co. vs. Eisner, 256 U. S. 345 [¶397 herein]".

E523 The decision by the highest court of Maryland, directly deciding this question, and construing the statute imposing such collateral inheritance tax, would be binding upon this court. Is there any such decision?

E524 In discussing this question, the learned district judge, in his opinion overruling the demurrer to the declaration herein says:

"In the case at bar, each side has argued that the Court of Appeals of this State has interpreted the act in the sense for which it contends, and each quotes language which, if standing alone, might sustain its position. That each is able to do so is perhaps the best proof that the attention of that high court never had been drawn to the precise point now at issue, in such sense, at least, as to call for its definite determination."

E525 We have examined the cases decided by the Court of Appeals of Maryland, and referred to in the briefs of counsel, and have reached the conclusion that no decision upon this point has been really made.

E526 The Pennsylvania statute upon the subject of collateral inheritance tax, is believed to be the first that was passed by any state in America. This statute was enacted in 1826.

E527 In 1884, the legislature of the State of Maryland, in substance and effect adopted the Pennsylvania statute.

E528 In the case of Jackson vs. Myers, 257 Pa. 104, the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania decided that the collateral inheritance tax of Pennsylvania is not levied upon the inheritance or legacy, but upon the estate of the decedent, holding that what passes to the legatee is simply the portion of the estate remaining, after the State has been satisfied by receiving the tax.

E529 An examination of other cases in that State shows, that this case only follows the previous holdings on this subject.

E530 The question presented herein, for decision, was directly presented to the Circuit Court of Appeals of the third circuit, in the case of Lederer vs. Northern Trust Company, supra, and that case held, that under the Pennsylvania statute, and the decisions of the court of last resort in the State of Pennsylvania, such tax was an estate tax, and not a legacy tax, and that the plaintiff therein should recover from the collector, the amount so paid under protest.

E531 Upon the authority of that case, and under all the circumstances and conditions surrounding this case, we hold that the proper construction of the collateral inheritance statute of Maryland, makes such tax an estate tax, and not a legacy tax, and, therefore, the judgment below, is that his son had control of the business until 1913; further, that the company operated consistently at a loss up to 1913, when it was placed in the hands of a receiver, at which time it was rehabilitated without corporate reorganization through the transfer of capital stock to creditors. It is shown that creditors' claims amounting to  $3\frac{1}{4}\times$  dollars were, as before stated, canceled, and at the same time there was a transfer to said creditors of  $3\times$  dollars par value of the company's capital stock from the members of A's family; also further shares were transferred and sold to obtain financial aid necessary to place the company and its business on a working basis. As a result of such transfers, the control of the corporation since 1913 has been in the hands of B and C, of the O Company. These two individuals, it appears, were the principal creditors of the appellant company at the time receiver was appointed.

It is the claim of the corporation that the amount of debts so canceled constitutes a contribution of new capital invested by the creditors to the extent of their canceled claims.

The view expressed by the Unit in its memorandum of February 16, 1921, is substantially as follows:

Inasmuch as the creditors received stock for the cancellation of their claims, it was the opinion of the representatives of the Bureau that the amount involved did not constitute paid-in surplus within the meaning of the law.

Upon consideration of the foregoing, it appears to the Committee that at a time just prior to the receivership the appellant company's invested capital was  $5\times$  dollars, provided that the par value of the total capitalization of the company was fully paid in at the time of organization, and this is true despite the fact that at a time just prior to the receivership the company showed a large operating deficit. In this connection attention is called to the fact that the Bureau has consistently held that the original amount of capital paid in for stock subscriptions shall never be reduced for purposes of computing invested capital by reason of an operating deficit. Conceded, then, that the invested capital at a time just prior to the receivership in 1913 was  $5\times$  dollars, what effect, if any, had the stock transactions between stockholders upon invested capital? The Committee can see no change in invested capital resulting thereby. The transfer of stock between the several stockholders of the corporation or between stockholders and persons who have not prior to such action been stockholders, whether for a valuable consideration in excess of or less than the par value or market value of the corporate stock, or for no consideration whatsoever, can, in the opinion of the Committee, have no effect upon the measure to be assigned to the original paid-in capital for the purpose of computing invested capital.

It is pointed out in the instant case that the principal creditors of the corporation at the time of the receivership received by transfer from the majority stockholders  $3\times$  dollars par value of the capital stock. It does not appear whether a consideration of any description entered into this transaction. However, the Committee can see no possible effect which such transaction could have upon the original paid-in capital for the purpose of determining invested capital.

With respect to the cancellation of the claims of creditors who were themselves stockholders and assumed control by reason of the transfer aforesaid, it is the opinion of the Committee that such action clearly resulted in an additional contribution to capital which assumed the character of paid-in surplus. The situation seems to be that these stockholders made numerous advances either in money or money's worth to the corporation which gave rise to an existing liability constituting a charge against the corporate assets.

By the cancellation of such claims a condition arose whereby the corporate liabilities were correspondingly reduced and the assets correspondingly increased.

It is true that this action on the part of said stockholders effected no change in the corporate surplus for the reason that an operating deficit existed. However, the applicable rule in this connection is found in article 860 of Regulations 45, which provides in part that:

Capital or surplus actually paid in is not required to be reduced because of an impairment of capital in the nature of an operating deficit.

A careful study of the above matters leads the Committee to conclude that the cancellation by stockholders of  $3\frac{1}{4}x$  dollars of claims owing to such stockholders resulted in effect in an additional contribution to the corporation's capital account which assumed for the purposes of invested capital the nature of paid-in surplus; further, that this is true regardless of any transfers of stock as between the stockholders which may or may not have been a consideration moving to the cancellation of said claims.

It follows obviously that the corporation's invested capital is at least the  $5x$  dollars fully paid-up capital as it existed just prior to the receivership, plus the  $3\frac{1}{4}x$  dollars paid-in surplus, which was effected by reason of the cancellation of the stockholding creditors' claims, or a total of  $8\frac{1}{4}x$  dollars. Therefore, it is recommended in the appeal of the M Company that the action of the Income Tax Unit in denying the right to include in the computation of invested capital as paid-in surplus  $3\frac{1}{4}x$  dollars representing claims owed to and canceled by creditor stockholders be reversed, and accordingly that the taxpayer's appeal be sustained.

It is pointed out in the instant case that the principal purpose of the corporation at the time of the receivership was to transfer from the majority stockholders the value of the capital stock. It does not appear whether a consideration of such description entered into this transaction. However, the Committee can see no possible effect which such transaction could have upon the original paid-in capital for the purpose of determining invested capital.

With respect to the cancellation of the claims of creditors who themselves stockholders and assumed control by reason of the transfer above said, it is the opinion of the Committee that such action clearly resulted in an additional contribution to capital which assumed the character of paid-in surplus. The situation seems to be that these stockholders were interested in money rather than in the corporation which gave rise to an existing liability constituting a charge against the corporate assets.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

4062 The issue of four $25 shares in exchange for each outstanding 3561 $100 share (otherwise of the same kind) pursuant to an amendment of the issuing corporation's charter increasing the number of shares but not the amount of its capital, held not subject to original issue tax.—
 [Comment: In West Virginia Pulp & Paper Company vs. Bowers, Collector (U. S. District Court—New York, Southern District, August 1, 1923), the plaintiff sought to recover stamp tax paid under protest on that which the Collector termed an original issue of stock on reorganization, and thereupon taxed as such pursuant to the provisions of Article 4 (h), Regulations 40 [Par.
 3561], and which consisted of the exchange of 4 shares of new $25 par value common stock for each share of outstanding $100 par value common stock, otherwise of the same kind, in accordance with an amendment of the plain-tiff's charter increasing the number of shares from 200,000 to 800,000 without change in the amount of its capital which remains $20,000,000.—The Corporation Trust Company.]

Memorandum Opinion.—Knox, J.: In a case such as this there is little use for a court of first instance to enter upon a discussion of its views as to the interpretation to be placed upon a particular taxing statute. Any decision of mine will be but a conduit through which a more authoritative ruling will be had, and for such reason I forbear to elaborate upon my conclusions.
 It is enough to say that in my judgment the acts of plaintiff giving rise to the assessment of the tax in question are not within the purview of the statute upon which defendant relies. What plaintiff did, in my opinion, is not to be regarded as an original issuance of stock, either upon organization or reorganization. No essential change in the capital with which plaintiff does business has taken place, and the rights of its stockholders have been neither increased nor lessened. They continue to hold their respective portions of the original issue of stock save that such portions are now evidenced by an increased number of pieces of paper, and these they may have without their corporation being subjected to the tax assessed against it. Defendant's motion for judgment of dismissal is denied and unless defendant desires to litigate the allegations of fact set up in the complaint there is no reason why plaintiff should not have judgment for the sum sued for.

as provided by the Section, engaged in a trade or business having a nominal capital. It was not a producer or manufacturer but its entire business was simply to collect and distribute the rental or royalty charged for use of its patents and, as it may, in accordance with said Section, be assessed with "a tax equivalent to eight per centum of the net income of such trade or business" it follows by the terms of the section this shall be "in lieu of the tax imposed by section two hundred and one."

1332 The Court below having found as a fact—a finding in which we concur—that the trade or business of the Plaintiff had no invested capital, and such being the plain wording of the statute, it follows that an attempt by departmental construction to theoretically swell that nominal capital into a large amount, simply because its business on its nominal capital proved highly remunerative, is at variance with the taxing statute and with the principle that the right to impose taxation must have clear statutory warrant and that doubtful constructions must be resolved in favor of the taxpayer.

incidental to the conduct of the plaintiff's business and was used entirely as a fund from which to advance salaries, wages, etc., and to provide office furniture, accommodations and equipment.

10. In compliance with the provisions of the Act of Congress entitled 'An Act to Provide Revenue to Defray War Expenses and other Purposes,' approved October 3, 1917, plaintiff made due returns to the defendant of its annual net income for the twelve (12) months ended December 31, 1917, and paid the income and excess profits taxes due thereunder, in accordance with the provisions of Section 209 of the said Act, whereby the excess profits tax was levied and assessed upon corporations employing no invested capital or not more than a nominal capital. The plaintiff's contention in this respect was disallowed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, and after various letters had been exchanged and a hearing had in Washington, the plaintiff was notified by the defendant in August, 1919, that additional income and excess profits taxes for the year 1917 had been assessed against it in the sum of $16,969.45, which amount had been arrived at upon the basis of a fictitious capital constructed under Section 210 of the said Act and an application of the rates prescribed by Section 201 of the Act for corporations employing capital."

computation of the increase in invested capital for the war profits credit. It is not considered that the income of A from royalties on patents can be capitalized to determine the invested capital of A for the prewar period.

Summing up, the Committee recommends:

1. That, in the appeal of the M Company, the value of patents acquired by said company at date of organization be placed at  $144\frac{1}{2}x$  dollars and the value of good will, trade-marks, etc., be placed at  $37\frac{1}{5}x$  dollars (these figures being subject to verification by the Unit under the principles of valuation herein stated).

2. That the corporation be allowed to amortize its patents in the taxable year 1918 on basis of one-seventeenth of the value recommended herein.

3. That the preferred stock purchased by the corporation and held as treasury stock be excluded in determining the statutory limitation on intangibles for purposes of invested capital.

4. That the corporation be denied its inventory adjustment at December 31, 1918, because net inventory loss has not been established.

5. That the corporation be allowed the value of patents of A in the computation of prewar invested capital in accordance with provisions of section 330 of the Revenue Act of 1918 and article 934 of Regulations 45.

6. That the corporation be allowed income from royalties on patents owned by A in computing prewar income in accordance with the provisions of section 330 of the Act.

30-21-1749: C. D. 982.

In accordance with the principle set out in article 857 of Regulations 45, dividends are deemed to be paid from true earned surplus. In carrying the earnings for a proportionate part of the year to surplus account for the purpose of declaring a dividend, the earnings so carried should represent the earnings of the current year less accrued expenses. Where the true earned surplus of the current year proportioned to the date of dividend payment is not sufficient to cover such payment, the true earnings included in the surplus account as of the beginning of the taxable year will be deemed to cover such payment.

This does not conflict with the principle embodied in article 845 of the regulations. It is in accord with the accounting principle that where accounts are kept on the accrual basis, expenses of a year should be charged against the income of that year. In order, therefore, to apply this principle, taxes of the current year should be charged against the income of that year, and only that proportion of the income of the current year is available for dividends which is in excess of taxes and other proper charges against such income.

Revenue Act of 1918.

In computing, under the provisions of article 857, the amount of earnings available for the payment of dividends, all income for the taxable year over and above expenses, taxes, and other accrued liabilities of such year, regardless of whether or not any part of such income is exempt from Federal income tax, should be considered.

In making such computation donations previously paid must be deducted.

II('23)-3-773: I. T. 1602.

Revenue Act of 1921.

In October, 1921, the M Company distributed a cash dividend to its stockholders, such distribution being in excess of the available surplus, undivided profits, and earnings. It was the express purpose of the company when the distribution was made that all or any portion of the amount distributed in excess of the available surplus, undivided profits, and earnings would be chargeable to depletion reserve as a return of capital. The company determines in each year as of September 30 the rates of depletion and depreciation for the current year, and book entries in accordance with such determination are made as of December 31 of each year.

The question is raised whether the charges determined as of September 30, providing for depreciation and depletion for 1921, should be allocated proportionately to each month beginning with January, 1921, and become a charge against the surplus, undivided profits, and earnings available as of the close of each such month, even though the entries for depletion and depreciation were not actually determined and booked until December, 1921, subsequent to the declaration of payment of the distribution above referred to.

It is held, that the net income for the year 1921, determined after providing for depreciation and depletion and also for an accrual of income and excess profits taxes for the year, should be prorated over the year from January 1, 1921, to the date of the payment of the dividend made in October, 1921, in order to determine the amount available for distribution to the stockholders. Any excess of the dividend over the amount of surplus from previous years and of current earnings is a return of capital in a corresponding amount.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

In the audit of the case the Unit regarded the transactions under which the 23.3x dollars of common stock was issued (13.3x dollars for the leases and options and 10x dollars for prepaid services) as the purchase by the company of a contract, and in the computation of invested capital treated such contract as intangible property subject to the limitations prescribed by the Revenue Acts of 1917 and 1918. In the computation of net income the Unit allowed as a deduction in each of the years 1915 to 1918, inclusive, amortization at the rate of x dollars per year for that portion of the contract representing prepaid services, thereby treating the thing acquired by the company in consideration of the 10x dollars common stock as a deferred asset to be written off over the 10-year life of the contract.

In the opinion of the Committee such action was clearly in error. The resolution of the board of directors as recorded in the minutes clearly shows that the 13.3x dollars of common stock was issued for leases and options to lease certain definitely described real estate and such property is not subject to the limitations prescribed for intangibles. The 10x dollars of common stock was issued for services to be rendered in the future; that is, for an executory contract for the performance of services in the future. Courts have held that such a contract is not property within the requirements of the laws which provide that corporations shall not issue stock or bonds except for money, labor done, or property actually received. (See 125 N. Y. S., 572; 134 Fed., 341; 150 N. Y. S., 668.) Section 207 of the Revenue Act of 1917 and section 326 of the Revenue Act of 1918 provide for the inclusion in invested capital of the value of property paid in for stock or shares. The thing paid in must be property, and accordingly a promise to perform services in the future may not be taken into invested capital at any value. It appears reasonable, however, to treat A's agreement to serve the company as manager for a period of 10 years next ensuing, in consideration of the issue of common stock, as of the nature of a purchase of stock on the installment plan, and under this theory only that portion of the stock as represented services actually performed at the end of each year could be admitted as invested capital for the year next ensuing.

Nothing has been submitted to show specifically the fair value of the services rendered by A, although the earnings of the company for the first six years of its existence indicate that under his management it prospered exceedingly. The Committee feels, however, that the value per year fixed by agreement between A and the company is more controlling of the fair value of such services than the subsequent prosperity of the company. It is therefore recommended that x dollars be allowed in the computation of invested capital for each year's services as performed, and that in computing net income, no deduction be allowed in any year for amortization of the contract to render services.

Subsequent to the audit of the case by the Unit the Company requested permission to deduct from income for each year as a business expense of the year a percentage of the face value of redeemed theater passes issued for window display of posters, billboards, write-up in newspapers, personal services and rental of "props" for various acts. It is contended that the issue of passes for the purposes above named and the consequent necessity for the redemption of such passes with seats results in a loss to the company, because it frequently happens that prospective patrons must be advised that no seats are available, when the seats are desired are occupied by pass holders.

The Income Tax Unit takes the position that if gross income is to be charged with the value of the seats given for passes it should be credited with the same value when the passes are presented for redemption. The company admits that when the passes are redeemed income should be credited, but not for the full value of the seats, inasmuch as the passes are restricted and because of such restrictions can not be sold by the persons to whom issued for more than one-half price. In brief, the company requests that it be permitted to charge gross income with the full value of the seats occupied by pass holders and to credit income with only one-half of such value. The Committee finds no merit in such a contention. If the passes are worth the full value of a seat when given in payment for privileges, services, etc., it appears to be entirely unreasonable to assume that they have a less value when presented for redemption.

In view of the foregoing, it is recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that no deduction from gross income be allowed in any year under review for amortization of the contract for services of A nor for redeemed theater passes; that in the computation of invested capital for 1917 and 1918 the options and leases acquired for common stock be treated as tangible property and allowed at a value equal to the par value of the stock issued therefor; and that the 10x dollars common stock issued for services to be rendered be allowed only to the extent that services valued at x dollars per year have been rendered.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Getting the bill of lading stands no differently from putting the goods on board ship. Neither does it matter that the title was in Scholtz & Co. and that theoretically they might change their mind and retain the bats and balls for their own use. There was not the slightest probability of any such change and it did not occur. The purchase by Scholtz & Co. was solely for the purpose of Delgado & Cia. and for their account and risk. Theoretical possibilities may be left out of account. In Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co., 229 U. S. 336, the consignees might have retained the goods at New Orleans instead of shipping them abroad. The fact that they came to New Orleans by rail from another place in the State made no difference. The same principle was applied in Texas & New Orleans R. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 123. The overt act of delivering the goods to the carrier marks the point of distinction between this case and Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418. To put it at any later point would fail to give to exports the liberal protection that hitherto they have received; of which an example may be seen in Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co., Ltd. v. United States, 237 U. S. 19.

Judgment reversed.

1917 Tax on Individuals.

1327 Commissions on certain renewal insurance premiums.—[Comment:

In Woods vs. Lewellyn, Collector, U. S. District Court for the Western District of Pennsylvania (No. 2630, November Term, 1921), decided March 14, 1923, Judge Gibson holds that commissions received by Mr. Woods in 1917 on renewal premiums on insurance, previously written by him were not to be included in income subject to excess-profits tax under the existing circumstances, the facts being: The insurance was written by Mr. Woods during the time he was acting as General Agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Company; he had ceased to be such at the beginning of 1917; during all of 1917 he was president and manager (at a salary of $30,000) of an incorporated life insurance agency known as the Edward A. Woods Agency, which acted as General Agent of the Equitable Life Assurance Company; Mr. Woods had not transferred to the corporation his rights in the renewal commissions; he earned during 1917 $2,787.33 in commissions on insurance written by him personally, and claimed as a business-expense deduction, personally, $4,600. The court holds that the business engaged in by Mr. Woods was that of acting as president and manager of the corporation; that his earnings during the year from insurance written personally, were so small, as compared with his salary, as not to constitute earnings from a regular trade or business, but rather as earnings from more or less isolated transactions; that the expenses might well have been due to the exercise of an incidental or isolated activity; and that thus, not being engaged in the business of writing insurance, the renewal commissions received by Mr. Woods did not constitute income from his trade or business. In conclusion the court says: "As heretofore stated, it is our opinion that the sums sought by the Collector to be subjected to taxation as excess profits were not earned by plaintiff in the exercise of the vocation pursued by him in 1917, and were not rightfully collected. It is needless, therefore, for us to consider the forcible argument of counsel for plaintiff to establish the claim that the renewal premiums in question were 'the income from property arising merely from ownership, including interest, rent, and similar income from investments,' and as such declared not the subject to the excess profits tax by Article 8 of Regulation No. 41, issued by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue. Counsel has pointed out the fact that plaintiff would have received these premiums if he had retired from business altogether prior to 1917, and that they would have been paid to his heirs had he died in the latter part of 1916. This makes it plain, he claims, that the sums received by him as premiums, constituted income derived from property rights acquired prior to 1917, and not the fruits of his vocation or 'trade or business' in that year. His contention in this respect is doubtless worthy of serious consideration, in case the necessity for such consideration were to arise."—The Corporation Trust Company.]

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

---

(Rich v. Doneghy, supra.) It is accordingly subject to the tax imposed by Schedule A-6, Title XI, of the Revenue Act of 1921. The provisions of the instrument designated "Oil and Gas Lease" clearly show that it was intended to and in fact operates as an oil and gas lease and vests no right to the lessee in the real estate, nor any interest therein or any right thereto, save to explore for oil, etc. (Kelly v. Harris, 162 Pac. 129 (Okla.)). It is, therefore, not subject to the tax imposed by Schedule A-6. See Article 87 of Regulations 55 (1922 Edition) [¶3866]. ## UNINDEXED SUPPLEMENTARY ESTATE TAX REGULATIONS, ETC.

E511 It is the intent of the statute that charitable bequests shall not be taxed. By its regulation of the incidence of the tax, New York does in fact diminish in favor of the United States what the charities receive; but it must be wrong for the executive departments of the United States to use the rule of incidence, which is of state creation, to increase its own exactions.

E512 As Holmes, J. remarked in the New York Trust Co. case, supra, "Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic." History, so far as we can discover, shows no other instance of attempting to measure a tax pro tanto by itself. As Hand, J., said in the court below, this theory departs from long established practice and from the usage if not the law of never regarding the incidence of a tax in the levying of a tax.

E513 So far as authority goes, Dugan vs. Miles, 276 Fed., 401, is the only decision suggested on this branch of the statute. The facts in that litigation were legally identical with those at bar; yet it is true that the doctrine here contended for by the Treasury was not alluded to by the experienced and able Judge who wrote opinion, although his result is consistent only with the methods pursued by these defendants-in-error. The inference is that neither the Judge nor counsel on either side thought of such a theory—which does not seem to us surprising.

E514 Being of opinion, therefore, that the scheme of taxation insisted on by plaintiff-in-error is unjust, opposed to long-established practice and the spirit of the statute, that it is not required by the language of the act, and tends to confusion taking the country over—the judgment below [¶306] should be and is affirmed, with costs.

[Petition for writ of certiorari granted by U. S. Supreme Court, May 7, 1923, in the case reported above.]

(T. D. 3487.)

E515 Estate Tax—Reservation of Powers.—Article 21 of Regulations 63, 125 and Article 25 of Regulations 37 [1918 Act], are hereby amended to read as follows:

"Reservation of powers.—Where a transfer by trust or otherwise is subject to revocation by the donor, or the terms thereof may be altered or amended by him, or he reserves to himself the right to take or assume either full or partial control of the transferred property, or to direct or control the management thereof, all facts and circumstances bearing upon the donor's intent are to be considered, and if it appears that he intended the transfer to take effect in possession or enjoyment at or after his death, then the value of the transferred property should be included in the gross estate, unless it further appears that the transfer was a bona fide sale for a fair consideration in money or money's worth." (T. D. 3487, signed by Commissioner D. H. Blair, and dated June 6, 1923.)

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

above. This applied, however, only in so far as it relates to property acquired at the time of the merger and it may be that some part of the intangible property in the form of trade-marks or trade brands so transferred may have been acquired for cash or tangible property since that date. Proper recognition should, of course, be given to the facts in such an event.

(3) The W Company acquired through the merger already mentioned the stock of certain subsidiary companies. In the computation of the consolidated invested capital the Income Tax Unit has treated the acquisition of the stock of these subsidiary companies in the same manner as if the tangible and intangible assets of the respective companies had been acquired. In some cases these subsidiary companies have since been dissolved and upon dissolution the assets have been taken up by the parent company and the liabilities assumed by it. In the opinion of the Advisory Tax Board the method of computation used by the unit as above stated is correct.

(4) The W Company makes claim for prewar deduction of 9 per cent, although its actual earnings during the prewar period amount to less than this percentage of its invested capital. Representative corporations, however, show more than 9 per cent, and the W Company would have shown more than 9 per cent except for a charge that occurred during this period by way of premium paid upon certain bonds of the company which it had called in and canceled pursuant to the dissolution decree.

In view of all these circumstances, the Advisory Tax Board concurs in the decision of the Income Tax Unit that the taxpayer's claim should be allowed.

44-20-1282: A. R. R. 307.

The Committee has had under consideration the appeal of the N Company against the ruling of the Income Tax Unit disallowing an item of 50x dollars claimed as good will in its invested capital for 1918.

The facts appear to be that the N Company, a corporation, succeeded N and Company, a partnership, in 1897. The partnership had been very profitable prior to incorporation, its average earnings for the five years just prior to 1897 being approximately 100x dollars. As its tangible assets presumably were substantially the same as when turned over to the corporation in 1897, 200x dollars, it is clear that its earnings indicated a good will worth at least as much as the tangible assets. The deed transferring assets to the corporation specifically recited that the 200x dollars in stock was paid for the trade name and good will of the business and the physical assets. The amount of the net tangible assets taken up on the books of the corporation was 200x dollars, the good will not being carried on the books as an asset at all.

The denial of the item of 50x dollars claimed as invested capital appears to be based upon the assumption that if allowed at all it must be allowed as paid-in surplus, and the Unit has consistently and correctly, in the opinion of the Committee, taken the attitude that no paid-in surplus is permissible directly or indirectly as to intangible assets conveyed. However, this amount may be allowed without its inclusion as paid-in surplus. The tangible assets taken over were raw materials and stock in trade which were sold long prior to any income tax law. To distribute the purchase price of the tangibles and intangibles purchased as being 150x dollars for tangibles and 50x dollars for intangibles will have the effect of reducing the cost price of assets from 200x dollars to 150x dollars and consequently increasing the earned surplus by 50x dollars.

It is clear that this is a case of acquisition for stock of a mixed aggregate of tangibles and intangibles such as would justify the application of section 327 if satisfactory allocation of values can not be arrived at. In view of the history of the concern and the profits earned in excess of a return upon tangible assets, the Committee is clearly of the opinion that the intangible assets were as readily worth 50x dollars as the tangibles were worth 150x dollars. However, as 50x dollars in 1918 is the maximum value which can be included in invested capital by reason of the purchase of intangible assets for stock, the Committee recommends that the corporation be allowed to allocate the values at the time of purchase and to attribute to the tangibles a cost of 150x dollars and to the intangibles a cost of 50x dollars, and to adjust its books so as to increase its earned surplus by the sum of 50x dollars.

Suit to Enjoin Collection of Penalties.

District Court, N. D. Illinois, E. D.

Kohlhamer vs. Smietanka, Collector.

(239 Fed. 408.)

8045 While Section 3224 R. S. [§8038] which prohibits suits to enjoin the collection of internal revenue taxes, does not specifically include "penalties" as such, yet where penalties are authorized by statute to be added to the tax and collected as a part of the tax, the court will hold that the penalty is a part of the tax, the assessment and collection of which are governed by Section 3224. (239 Fed. 408.)

Fraudulent Returns.

8046 (Law.) Sec. 1323 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3225 of the Revised Statutes of the United States, as amended, is re-enacted without change as follows:

Section 3225 of the Revised Statutes.

8047 "Sec. 3225. When a second assessment is made in case of any list, statement, or return, which in the opinion of the collector or deputy collector was false or fraudulent, or contained any understatement or undervaluation, such assessment shall not be remitted, nor shall taxes collected under such assessment be refunded, or paid back, or recovered by any suit, unless it is proved that such list, statement, or return was not willfully false or fraudulent and did not contain any willful understatement or undervaluation."

Limitations Upon Suits and Prosecutions.

8048 (Law.) Sec. 1318 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3226 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

Section 3226 of the Revised Statutes.

8049 "Sec. 3226. No suit or proceeding shall be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal-revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally assessed or collected, or of any penalty claimed to have been collected without authority, or of any sum alleged to have been excessive or in any manner wrongfully collected, until a claim for refund or credit has been duly filed with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, according to the provisions of law in that regard, and the regulations of the Secretary of the Treasury established in pursuance thereof. No such suit or proceeding shall be begun before the expiration of six months from the date of filing such claim unless the Commissioner renders a decision thereon within that time, nor after the expiration of five years from the date of the payment of such tax, penalty, or sum."

8050 This section shall not affect any suit or proceeding instituted prior to the passage of this Act, but shall apply to all suits and proceedings instituted after the passage of this Act, whether or not barred by prior Acts of Congress.

Section 3227 of the Revised Statutes Repealed.

8051 (Law.) Sec. 1319 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3227 of the Revised Statutes is hereby repealed but such repeal shall not affect any suit or proceeding instituted prior to the passage of this Act.

Five-Year Limitation on Suits.

8052 (Law.) Sec. 1320 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That no suit or proceeding for the collection of any internal revenue tax shall be begun after the expiration of five years from the time such tax was due, except in the case of fraud with intent to evade tax, or willful attempt in any manner to defeat or evade tax. This section shall not apply to suits or proceedings for the collection of taxes under section 250 [Income and Excess-Profits Taxes] of this Act, nor to suits or proceedings begun at the time of the passage of this Act.

Limitation on Criminal Prosecutions.

8053 (Law.) Sec. 1321 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. (a) That the Act entitled "An Act to limit the time within which prosecutions may be instituted against persons charged with violating internal-revenue laws" approved July 5, 1884, is amended to read as follows:

8055 (b) Any prosecution or proceeding under an indictment found or information instituted prior to the passage of this Act shall not be affected in any manner by this amendment, but such prosecution or proceeding shall be subject to the limitations imposed by law prior to the passage of this Act.

Limitation on Claims for Refund or Credit.

8056 (Law.) Sec. 1316 [of the Revenue Act of 1921]. That section 3228 of the Revised Statutes is amended to read as follows:

E511 It is the intent of the statute that charitable bequests shall not be taxed. By its regulation of the incidence of the tax, New York does in fact diminish in favor of the United States what the charities receive; but it must be wrong for the executive departments of the United States to use the rule of incidence, which is of state creation, to increase its own exactions.

E512 As Holmes, J. remarked in the New York Trust Co. case, supra, "Upon this point a page of history is worth a volume of logic." History, so far as we can discover, shows no other instance of attempting to measure a tax pro tanto by itself. As Hand, J., said in the court below, this theory departs from long established practice and from the usage if not the law of never regarding the incidence of a tax in the levying of a tax.

E513 So far as authority goes, Dugan vs. Miles, 276 Fed., 401, is the only decision suggested on this branch of the statute. The facts in that litigation were legally identical with those at bar; yet it is true that the doctrine here contended for by the Treasury was not alluded to by the experienced and able Judge who wrote opinion, although his result is consistent only with the methods pursued by these defendants-in-error. The inference is that neither the Judge nor counsel on either side thought of such a theory—which does not seem to us surprising.

E514 Being of opinion, therefore, that the scheme of taxation insisted on by plaintiff-in-error is unjust, opposed to long-established practice and the spirit of the statute, that it is not required by the language of the act, and tends to confusion taking the country over—the judgment below [¶306] should be and is affirmed, with costs.

EXCISE TAXES REGULATIONS.

Getting the bill of lading stands no differently from putting the goods on board ship. Neither does it matter that the title was in Scholtz & Co. and that theoretically they might change their mind and retain the bats and balls for their own use. There was not the slightest probability of any such change and it did not occur. The purchase by Scholtz & Co. was solely for the purposes of Delgado & Cia. and for their account and risk. Theoretical possibilities may be left out of account. In Railroad Commission of Louisiana v. Texas & Pacific Ry. Co., 229 U. S. 336, the consignees might have retained the goods at New Orleans instead of shipping them abroad. The fact that they came to New Orleans by rail from another place in the State made no difference. The same principle was applied in Texas & New Orleans R. R. Co. v. Sabine Tram Co., 227 U. S. 111, 123. The overt act of delivering the goods to the carrier marks the point of distinction between this case and Cornell v. Coyne, 192 U. S. 418. To put it at any later point would fail to give to exports the liberal protection that hitherto they have received; of which an example may be seen in Thames & Mersey Marine Ins. Co., Ltd. v. United States, 237 U. S. 19.

Judgment reversed.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Upon this evidence the Committee found:

That there was a substantial change of beneficial interest in the property when turned over to the Z Company is clear. The creditors of the Y Company as above indicated, purchased the property at the receiver's sale at a price less than their claims, and when the creditors turned the property over to the Z Company in consideration for the assumption by the latter of the debts owed the creditors of the Y Company, the cost of the property to the Z Company thereby became established. The Committee can not ignore the fact convincingly shown by the record that the parties to this transaction were dealing at arms' length; that the three banks to which was owed 93.70 per cent of the indebtedness assumed by the Z Company did not become stockholders of that company; and that the conduct of the business by the receiver whereby a loss of .08x dollars or .1x dollars was incurred tended materially to decrease the actual value of the property for the purpose of sale between a willing seller and a willing buyer.

* * * In view of the two intermediate transactions between ownership of the property by the Y Company and acquisition by the Z Company, the Committee is of the opinion that the Bureau is precluded by article 63 of Regulations 41, as construed in Solicitor's Memorandum 551 (not published), and by article 836 of Regulations 45, from ascribing to this property for the purpose of computing statutory invested capital a value in excess of its actual cost to the Z Company, and it is recommended that the claim for paid-in surplus for 1917 and 1918 be denied.

It is believed that a careful consideration of the principles involved in these two cases will furnish a satisfactory basis for a determination of the question whether property purchased at a receiver's sale and paid into a corporation is to be deemed to have been acquired at a bargain price and the excess value for that reason excluded from the capital.

Where the assets of a corporation are purchased by its creditors (bondholders or general creditors) at a receiver's sale and are thereafter conveyed by the creditors to a new corporation of which they are the stockholders for a financial consideration, or in consideration for all or substantially all of its capital stock, as in the case cited in T. B. R. 32, the price at which the property is purchased by the creditors is usually nominal, the true cost of the assets to the creditors being the amount of their credits, and in the conveyance to the new corporation there is no substantial change in beneficial ownership but only in the form of ownership. The element of bargaining does not enter into the transaction and if the value of the assets which can be clearly and definitely established is substantially in excess of the consideration paid therefor by the corporation, or of the par value of the stock issued therefor, a paid-in surplus in the amount of such excess may be allowed. If, on the other hand, the property is conveyed by creditors to a corporation in which they do not hold the capital stock or a substantial part of it, as in the case considered in T. B. M. 49, a reasonable regard for human nature compels the conclusion that the property is not conveyed for a consideration substantially less than that for which it could be sold in the market and that the price or the consideration paid therefor fixes the cost of the assets and, therefore, the value to the corporation for the purpose of computing its invested capital.

Whether or not the creditor were stockholders of the old corporation appears to have little or no bearing upon the rules just stated, but if the transaction under consideration took place subsequent to March 3, 1917, the consideration of whether or not the creditor purchasers were also the stockholders of the old corporation becomes material, since, if they were, the transaction would ordinarily constitute a reorganization and the limitation imposed by section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, would apply.

In the light of these principles your questions are answered specifically as follows, the substance of the questions being incorporated in the answers to avoid any misunderstanding as to what factors are considered material to be considered:

(a) When the purchasers at a receiver's sale are creditors of the old corporation but are not stockholders in either the old or the new corporation, the price paid for the assets by the new corporation fixes the value of the assets for the purpose of computing its invested capital and no paid-in surplus can be allowed.

(b) When the purchasers are both creditors and the stockholders of both corporations and a value for the assets clearly and substantially in excess of the cash or par value of the stock paid therefor by the corporation, can be definitely and accurately established, a paid-in surplus may be allowed. If, however, the transaction occurred after March 3, 1917, the transaction will ordinarily be held to constitute a reorganization and the limitation imposed by section 331 of the Act of February 24, 1919, will apply.

(c) When the purchasers are the stockholders of both the old and the new corporations but are not creditors of the old corporation, there is no substantial change in the beneficial interests and the cash or other consideration received for the assets from the new corporation does not necessarily measure the value of the assets, and the same rule applies as in case (b). If the transaction occurred subsequent to March 3, 1917, the transaction would ordinarily constitute a reorganization and be governed by section 331 of the Revenue Act of February 24, 1919.

(d) When the purchasers are composed in part of creditors of the old corporation who are not stockholders and in part of stockholders of the new and old corporations, each case must be determined upon its own particular facts in accordance with the principles above stated. If the number of creditor stockholders common to both corporations is sufficiently large so that there is no substantial change of beneficial ownership, the case will fall within the rule laid down in case (b). If on the other hand, a considerable number of the purchasers are not stockholders of the new corporation, it is not to be supposed that they would consent to a sale of the assets for a price materially less than their fair value and, therefore, the price or consideration paid would determine the value of the assets for the purpose of computing invested capital and no paid-in surplus can be allowed.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

INSTRUCTIONS

PLEASURE BOATS

1. WHAT IS TAXED.—Subject to exemptions noted hereunder, a special tax is imposed upon the use of yachts, pleasure boats, power boats, motor boats with fixed engines, and sailing boats, of over five net tons, length over 32 feet, at the following rates:

- (a) Over five net tons, length over 32 feet and not over 50 feet.....$1.00 each foot
- (b) Over five net tons, length over 50 feet and not over 100 feet.....$2.00 each foot
- (c) Over five net tons, length over 100 feet.....$4.00 each foot

2. EXEMPTIONS.—The law exempts from tax—

- (a) Boats used exclusively for trade. ("Trade" is held to be any serious activity which constitutes the means of livelihood of the owner, lessee, or charterer.)
- (b) Boats used exclusively for fishing. (This refers to commercial fishing and not fishing for pleasure.)
- (c) Boats used exclusively for national defense.
- (d) Boats built according to plans and specifications approved by the Navy Department.
- (e) Boats used without profit by benevolent, charitable, or religious organizations exclusively for furnishing aid, comfort, or relief to seamen.

3. PERSONS LIABLE FOR RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—The owner, lessee, or charterer of every boat described in par. 1 is required to file return, irrespective of whether its use is exempt from the tax under par. 2, and, unless the boat is exempt, is also required to pay the tax (see also par. 4(d) below). No return is required on boats falling below the tonnage and footage specifications mentioned in par. 1.

4. HOW TO ESTIMATE NET TONNAGE.—To estimate roughly the net tonnage of a vessel the following rules may be used:

- (a) By the word "ton" is meant 100 cubic feet of space.
- (b) Multiply the extreme length of the vessel by the extreme breadth and that product by the depth from the underside of the deck to the frame in the hold taken amidships. The result obtained should be multiplied by six-tenths. To this result should be added the cubical contents of any closed-in structure above the upper deck. The sum should be divided by 100, which will give the approximate gross tonnage of the boat.
- (c) From this gross tonnage may be deducted all spaces used exclusively in connection with the navigation of the boat or for the exclusive use of the crew, such as a reasonable amount for machinery space, space for officers and crew but not for passengers (who include all persons not actual members of the crew), storage of sails, navigation instruments, boatswain's stores, etc. The result will be the approximate net tonnage of the boat.
- (d) If the net tonnage estimated is more than four net tons, and the length over 32 feet, application should be made to the nearest customs officer for official measurement. If an official measurement is not completed before the date on which a return is required, a return should be rendered; and if the estimate of net tonnage, made as above directed, is over five net tons, the tax should be paid. If the official measurement should later show that no tax was due, a claim should be made for the refund of the tax.

5. HOW TO ASCERTAIN THE OVER-ALL LENGTH.—Over-all length is defined as the extreme length of the structure, i. e., from the forward side of the stem outside the planking or plating to the aftermost side of the stern planking or plating, whether above or below the water line. The measurement should be to the outside of any planking or plating extending above the deck, constituting bulwarks, and to the outside of any forecastle deck, quarter deck, or poop deck extending beyond the main deck. The length should be taken in a straight line, excluding any sheer there may be to the deck.

6. HOW TO COMPUTE TAX.—In the case of a boat over five net tons, multiply the rate of the class in which the boat is included by the number representing the length over all in full feet. For example, a boat 49.5 feet in length is taxable at the rate of $1 for each foot, or $49; a boat 50.5 feet in length is in the same class and taxable at $1 per foot, or $50.

AUTOMOBILES

7. PERSONS LIABLE FOR RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX.—Persons carrying on the business of operating or renting passenger automobiles for hire are required to file return and pay special tax on each automobile as follows:

	Annual rate.	Monthly rate.
Seating capacity over 2 but not over 7.....	$10	$0.83½
Seating capacity more than 7.....	$20	$1.66½

GENERAL

8. WHEN RETURN AND PAYMENT OF TAX MUST BE MADE.—These taxes become due on the first day of July in each year, or on commencing the business on which a tax is imposed or placing a boat in use. In the former case the tax shall be reckoned for one year and in the latter case it shall be reckoned proportionately from the first day of the month in which the liability to special tax commenced to the first day of July following. Returns with proper amount of tax due must be filed with the collector not later than the last day of the month in which special tax liability commenced. A separate return must be filed for each automobile operated or rented for hire, and for each boat whether or not exempt from tax. Where exemption is claimed in the case of a boat, the return should be filed and the notation "exemption claimed" made across the face of the form. If exemption is allowed, the collector will issue an exemption certificate.

9. If tax liability, as shown by the return, is more than $10, applicant must appear in person before an officer qualified to administer oaths and swear to the correctness of the information given on the application. If the tax is $10 or less, return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses, who will affix their signatures.

Follow instructions carefully and file promptly in order to avoid penalties imposed for delinquency in filing return and paying tax, or making false or fraudulent return.

Perpetual Check List

Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

1923 RETURN
CAPITAL STOCK TAX
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF THE TREASURY

Returns of this character are confidential and are open to inspection only under conditions specified in Section 257, Revenue Act of 1921.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS.

1. Nature of tax.—The capital stock tax due July 1, 1922, is an excise tax, payable in advance, for the privilege of doing business from July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923. The amount of the tax is computed upon the average amount of capital employed by a foreign corporation in the transaction of its business in the United States for the preceding fiscal year.

2. Time for filing returns.—During the month of July, and annually thereafter.

3. Foreign corporations required to make returns.—Every corporation engaged in business in the United States shall make return on this form irrespective of the amount of capital employed in this country in the transaction of its business, unless such corporation was not engaged in business in the United States during the preceding fiscal year, July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922, or is specifically exempt under the provisions of Section 231, Title II, of the Revenue Act of 1921.

In supplying data under item 7, details relating to real estate, mortgage loans, etc., may be omitted, but a supplementary statement should be attached explaining how the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of its business in the United States has been computed.

4. Examination of records and witnesses.—For the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or of making a return where none has been made or of preparing a new return where the one submitted is false or fraudulent the Commissioner has authority to designate a revenue agent or inspector to examine witnesses and books, records, papers, or other memoranda.

5. Extension of time.—If on account of sickness or absence of the officer charged with making the return it is impossible to prepare and file a return on or before July 31, the collector, upon application in writing, may allow an extension of not exceeding 30 days for making and filing the return. If extension is granted, the letter of the collector must be attached to the return. Neither the Commissioner nor the collector has authority to grant an extension greater than 30 days from July 31.

6. Tentative return.—Filing of a tentative return will avoid penalty for delinquent filing, but does not authorize withholding of the tax. Complete return as far as possible and submit an approximate estimate as a basis in order that an initial assessment may be made. (See Art. 21, Reg. 64.)

7. Signatures and verification.—Returns must be signed and verified by the agent or attorney, or other principal officer, in charge of the United States branch of the foreign corporation, and must be sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, and the seal of the attesting officer, if he is required to have a seal, must be impressed on the return in the space provided for that purpose. If, however, the tax covered by this return does not exceed $10, the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

8. Corporations liable to tax.—Every corporation created or organized outside the United States and engaged in business in the United States, shall be liable to the capital stock tax except such companies and associations as are specifically exempt under Section 231 of Title II of the Revenue Act of 1921.

9. New corporations.—This tax shall not be imposed upon any corporation not engaged in business in the United States for any portion of the fiscal year July 1, 1921, to June 30, 1922.

10. Computation of tax.—The method of computation is prescribed on the face of this form.

11. Tax.—The tax is at the rate of $1 for each full $1,000 of the average amount of capital employed in the transaction of business in the United States.

Transportation companies owning or operating vessels plying between the United States and other countries, and any other companies whose business methods involve the employment of capital in the United States which is not physically maintained in this country, may use the special method of computation suggested on the face of the return.

12. Penalties.—In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of its amount, except that when a return is filed after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case a false or fraudulent return or list is willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of its amount. The tax is payable to the collector any time after July 1, 1921, but penalties for nonpayment do not attach until ten days after notice and demand has been served by the collector upon the taxpayer. (See Sections 1004, 1302, and 1311, Revenue Act of 1921, and Section 3164, R. S.)

13. Regulations.—For further information regarding the tax see Reg. No. 64.

Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Law Section 326.—Invested Capital (1918 Act—¶555, ante): (1921 Act—¶1035, post).

Article 859.—Effect of Stock Dividend (Reg. 45—¶814, ante): (Reg. 62—¶1230, post).

1-19-7: T. B. R. 3.

Under the Revenue Act of 1917 stock dividends paid during any taxable year, and under the Revenue Act of 1918 stock dividends paid after the first 60 days of any taxable year, shall be deemed to have been paid from earnings or profits, but the payment of a stock dividend has no effect upon the amount of invested capital.

In determining the amount by which invested capital should be reduced on account of dividend payments made during the taxable year in excess of current earnings, should stock dividends be treated the same as cash dividends?

The following example illustrates the point in question:

Current earnings to Apr. 1, 1917.....	$33,000
Stock dividends, Apr. 1, 1917.....	30,000
Balance current earnings undistributed.....	3,000
Earnings for April, 1917.....	12,000
Current earnings on hand May 1, 1917.....	15,000
Cash dividend May 1, 1917.....	27,000
Dividend payments in excess of current earnings.....	12,000
12,000 averaged for eight months.....	8,000 which is the amount by which invested capital as of the beginning of the year should be reduced.

The provisions of section 31 (a) of the Revenue Act of 1917, and section 201 of the Revenue Act of 1918, place stock dividends upon the same basis as cash dividends in this connection. The latter section provides, "That the term 'dividend' * * * means any distribution made by a corporation * * * whether in cash or in other property or in stock of the corporation out of its earnings or profits accumulated since February 28, 1913," and the definition in the Act of 1917 is substantially the same. Section 31 (b) of the Act of 1917 provides that any distribution made during the year shall be deemed to have been made from the most recently accumulated undivided profits or surplus. Section 201 (e) of the Act of 1918 provides that any distribution made after the first 60 days of any taxable year shall be deemed to have been made from current earnings or profits so far as possible. The language of these provisions is general and is susceptible of only one interpretation. It applies to all distributions of earnings, whether made in cash or in other property or in stock of the corporation. And any such distributions in excess of earnings or profits of the taxable year will reduce the surplus at the beginning of the taxable year by the amount of such excess.

The payment of a stock dividend, however, has no effect upon the amount of invested capital, article 859, Regulations 45 (final edition). The distribution of a stock dividend is in effect a capitalization of current earnings or of earned surplus on hand at the beginning of the year. The capitalization of current earnings does not increase the invested capital and the capitalization of surplus on hand at the beginning of the year does not decrease the invested capital. Nevertheless a stock dividend distributed at any time during the year under the Act of 1917 or after the first 60 days of the taxable year under the Act of 1918 must be deemed to have been paid from current earnings or profits so far as possible, so that the accumulated earnings or profits of the taxable year available thereafter for cash dividends or other payments are correspondingly reduced. In the specific illustration given, therefore, the result is correct, but in a case in which the stock dividend was in whole or in part a capitalization of the surplus on hand at the beginning of the taxable year, no reduction in invested capital should be made because of the capitalization of such surplus.

The Court held that the purchase of elemental parts of a completed product, or the doing of subsidiary work by a subcontractor did not take from the contractor the character of a "person manufacturing," as comprehended in sec. 301 of the Munitions Tax Act of September 8, 1916, Title III, 463, 39 St. 780.

ISSUES OF STOCK.

3547 Art. 1. When tax accrues.—Stock is deemed to be issued when 3521 it is subscribed for and the subscription is accepted by the corporation, regardless of the time of delivery of the certificate.

3548 Art. 2. Rate of taxation.—(a) All certificates or instruments, of whatever designation, having a par or face value, representing shares of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations, issued by any corporation, joint-stock company or association, are subject to tax at the rate of 5 cents on each $100 of the face value or fraction thereof.

3549 (b) All certificates of stock, or of profits, or of interest in property or accumulations issued by any corporation, without par or face value, are subject to the tax of 5 cents per share, unless the actual value is in excess of $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 5 cents on each $100 of actual value or fraction thereof, or unless the actual value is less than $100 per share, in which case the tax shall be 1 cent on each $20 of actual value or fraction thereof. [See ¶4016 and ¶4019].

stock" of a corporation signifies what is owned and held by the Company in its corporate character; into which franchise, etc., do not enter, although those very items form "a very essential part of the shareholders' capital stock." (See the same view in People vs. Sohmer, 179 A. D., 721, aff'd 222 N. Y., 545.) That property rather than excise taxes are considered in any given case is not material, if the search is for definitions; except as any definition is apt to be influenced by environment; and the definition of Finch, J. in the Coleman case was approvingly quoted in Horne etc. Bank vs Des Moines, 205 U. S., 503.

3188 This New York concept has perhaps been applied in this Court, under a statute (30 Stat., 448) laying a privilege tax "computed on the basis of the capital and surplus of the preceding fiscal year." (Leather, etc. Bank vs. Treat, 128 Fed., 262; Central etc. Co. vs. Treat, 171 Fed., 301.) And again under an act (38 Stat. 745 (755) laying an excise to be computed on the basis of the "capital, surplus and undivided profits," etc. (Anderson vs. Farmers' etc. Co., 241 Fed., 322.) But in all these cases the statutory language was far more definite than in the present instance.

3190 Illinois thus attempts definition: "Capital stock means * * * the beneficial ownership of everything that enters into the property of the corporation, (including in the case of a railroad) the opportunities, inherent in the corporation and its franchise, of creating earnings." (Chicago etc. Co. vs State Board, 112 Fed., 607; and of Pacific etc. Co. vs. Lieb, 83 Ill., 602; State Board vs. People, 191 Ill., 528). In other words—within wide limits, capital stock means what the legislature wants it to mean.

3191 In Kentucky, the Supreme Court of the United States, found that the legislature meant by capital stock "the entire property real and personal, tangible and intangible, all assets on hand and (the Company's) franchise as well," and expressed no objection to this concept of the phrase. (Henderson etc. Co. vs. Commonwealth, 166 U. S., 150; affirming 99 Ky., 623.) That is to say, each state can define for itself; and the right of definition is primarily in the legislature.

3192 In Ohio also the Supreme Court found without objection that the state scheme regarded "capital stock" as representing "not only the tangible property, but also the intangible, including therein all corporate franchises and all contracts, privileges and good will of the concern." (Adams etc. Co. vs. Ohio, 166 U. S., 185).

3193 Wisconsin has perhaps stated the possibilities of the phrase most conveniently for the legislator, by declaring that "capital stock" may apply to one or another of three mental concepts, (1) the stockholders' shares, (2) the corporate property, (3) a mere measure of size of corporation as a test for graduating taxes (First National Bank vs. Douglas County, 124 Wis., 15). The lack of fixity of meaning, the absence of any agreement in definition shown by the foregoing examples (which might be much extended) constrain to the belief that "capital stock" is a term plastic to say the least, and compelling its interpreter to look first to the context for a meaning that has not been reduced to any rigid formula.

3194 We do not think that making the basis of computation "The fair value" of capital stock advances the matter; and we are sure that whether one speaks of a tax on property or a tax measured by property, such variation in tax kind works per se no change in the meaning of the words "capital stock." "Fair" value does not import guesswork, and unless incompetence or worse be imputed to the assessor, the phrase is the exact equivalent of the "actual value" of the Coleman case.

3195 But when the statute speaks of "estimating" capital stock, and of arriving at the "fair average value" thereof for a year—the words are so inappropriate to the process of transcribing book values, that an inference is irresistible of some other process being within the legislative intent.

3196 When one considers further that corporate excise taxes are not new with this act of Congress—observes that this form of words is a marked departure from previous acts (e. g. 38 Stat., 745 supra), and remembers that Congress acted in the absence of any rigid legal or judicial definition of "capital stock," the interpreter is compelled to have recourse to the annals of congressional action to find out what the legislature meant and thought it said.

3197 The remarks made by the "Committee Chairman in charge" of the bill (United States vs. St. Paul etc. R'y, 247 U. S., 310 (318)) are available in Cong. Rec., 64th Cong., 1st Sess., Sept. 7, 1916, and they satisfy us that the act was passed with the intent of permitting and indeed compelling the assessor to consider not only paid in capital, surplus and undivided profits but earnings and market value of shares. Such a method of assessment necessarily implies for the words "capital stock" an enlarged meaning, which if it does not connote the somewhat cynical view of the Wisconsin court (supra) certainly goes so far as to regard as "fair," an examination of "the entire potentiality of the corporation to profit by the exercise of its corporate franchise." (First National Bank vs. Moon, 102 Kan., 334, (343-344).)

3198 If, as we find, the result reached by the assessor was and is consonant with such an examination and appraisalment, the judgment below [¶3170] was right.

Affirmed with costs.

SPECIAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. REQUIRED VALUE.—Every domestic corporation is required to pay annually a special estate tax with respect to carrying on or doing business, equivalent to 1 cent for each $1,000 of so much of the fair average value of its capital stock for the preceding year ending June 30 as is in excess of $5,000. It is immaterial whether the corporation is organized for profit or has a capital stock represented by shares.

For the purpose of this tax the fair value of the entire capital stock as a going concern, regardless of stock ownership or the ability of individual stockholders to liquidate their holdings, is required. The sales prices for any number of shares of stock less than a majority interest are not necessarily indicative of the fair value of the entire capital stock. The book value, the kind of assets, the nature of the business, good will, franchises, earning capacity, etc., are important factors that affect the worth of enterprises and must be given due consideration in arriving at the fair value at any given date.

In order that consideration may be given the various factors affecting fair value, three exhibits are provided for furnishing information, and the taxpayer will complete each exhibit or state why the required data are not available.

Exhibit A provides for adjusting any overstated or understated values contained in the taxpayer's books of account, and Exhibit C provides for showing an adjusted income, which should be the actual operating income to be used for capitalizing on a percentage basis fixed by its officers as fairly representing conditions obtaining in the trade and in the locality. If the reconstructed book value shown by Exhibit A, the market value shown by Exhibit B, or the valuation reflected by Exhibit C is greater than the valuation returned by the taxpayer, a comprehensive statement showing any extraordinary conditions which are relied on in support of the valuation claimed must be submitted. In any case in which the fair value is understated the amount will be redetermined by the Commissioner and the correct tax assessed; also any penalty incurred will be asserted.

2. EXHIBIT B.—The three exhibits, A, B, and C, are provided to indicate the information desired and the manner in which it should be furnished. So far as adaptable these forms should be completed by taxpayers, but if they find it more convenient they may attach to the return their own statements (as in the case of banks), provided substantially the same information is furnished. In any event, taxpayers should attach any additional statements that will aid in a comprehensive understanding of the taxpayer's return, so that the Commissioner of Internal Revenue may suitably determine the correctness of the fair value reported in item 1 on page 1 hereto.

3. EXHIBIT A: CONDENSED BALANCE SHEET.—Furnish under Exhibit A a condensed balance sheet as of June 30, 1922, if possible, but in no case earlier than December 31, 1921.

"Books of account."—These columns must show the amounts as carried in the taxpayer's books of account.

"Fair value."—Refer to article 1 above, defining the value required, and in the event that the columns "Books of account" contain any overstated or understated values, show herein the actual values. In the case of mines, oil and gas wells, other natural deposits, and timber, valuations established as the basis of depletion in computing income and profits taxes should be shown in the "Fair value" column. If any different valuation is claimed than reported in the "Fair value" column it may be stated and should be supported by reasonably conclusive evidence.

"Difference."—These columns will show the difference between the columns "Books of account" and "Fair value." Any material differences must be explained in such manner as to enable the Commissioner of Internal Revenue to determine if they are proper and allowable. For this purpose the differences shown herein need not be covered by corresponding adjustments in the taxpayer's books of account.

"Profit and loss."—If the "Profit and loss" balance is a debit, the amount should be shown in red.

Reserves for the payment of future dividends, whether declared or not, will not be considered as liabilities, but a reasonable amount to cover the preceding dividend period may be so considered if the dividend has been declared and not distributed. If deducted, show date declared and date of actual payment.

4. EXHIBIT B: QUOTATIONS OR OUTSIDE SALES PRICES.—Furnish under Exhibit B the prices quoted on a recognized stock exchange or on the New York curb, or the prices at which outside sales were made if the stock is not listed, for the period of 12 months ending June 30, 1922.

If the stock is listed, the name of the exchange from which reported quotations are taken must be shown in the space provided thereof, and the prices reported will be the mean of the highest and of the lowest bid prices during each month, from which the average for the year will be obtained. If the taxpayer prefers, a schedule may be attached to this return showing the highest and lowest bid prices at which stock was quoted for each day of the year and the average obtained therefrom.

If the stock is not listed and outside sales have been made at prices known or determinable by the officers making this report, such prices will be reported herein. A statement of the number of shares involved and the conditions under which sales were made at other than exchange quotations must accompany this return. Sales to employees or directors for qualifying purposes, or sales which are restricted as to resale, or sales at prices otherwise specially influenced, will not be considered representative of the fair value of the entire capital stock and should not be included.

In the column "Number of shares outstanding" should be shown the total number of shares outstanding at the close of each month. The average value per share will be determined as follows:

First. If no change occurred in the number of shares outstanding during the year, the total quotations or sales prices for the months reported and divide by the number of months in which quotations or sales prices are shown.

Second. If any change occurred in the number of shares outstanding during the year, multiply the average market price per share for the period during which the capital stock as of June 30, 1922, has been outstanding by the number of shares outstanding as of that date.

5. EXHIBIT C: ANNUAL INCOME.—Furnish under Exhibit C the annual income and other data for the five fiscal years ended with the close of the taxpayer's fiscal year, or for the period during which the corporation has been engaged in business if for a shorter period.

"Net income."—In this column will be shown the income returned for the purpose of the income tax and excess profits tax.

"Deductions" and "Additions."—Refer to article 1 of these Special Instructions, and show in these columns such amounts as should be deducted from or added to "Net income" to arrive at the adjusted income which may be capitalized to determine the fair value of the capital stock. A comprehensive analysis of any amounts reported therein should be attached to this return. Some of the principal items frequently requiring adjustment are:

Deductions:
Income and profits taxes not deductible in computing income subject to tax.
Interest charges not deductible in computing income subject to tax.
Losses not fully deductible in computing income subject to tax.

Additions:
Dividends from other corporations not included in computing income subject to tax.
Income from securities of a State, municipality, or of the United States, not included in the income-tax return.

The difference between depletion allowed in determining net income subject to Federal income tax and the actual depletion based on cost.

Expenditures made for additions and betterments, or reserves for such purposes, charged against income, whether direct or through expense.

"Adjusted income."—This column will reflect the amounts resulting from the adjustment of the amounts shown in the three preceding columns.

"Number of shares."—Herein should be given the total number of shares of all classes of stock outstanding at the close of each fiscal year.

"Dividends declared."—Herein should be reported the percentage of dividends declared on each class of stock outstanding each year. The amount reported by the percentage shown in this column must not be deducted from the columns "Net income" or "Adjusted income."

"Depreciation."—Hereunder will be reported the amount actually charged against income each year in the taxpayer's books of account for depreciation.

Capitalizing net income.—The officers making the return will capitalize the average annual income on a percentage basis that fairly represents, under the conditions obtaining in the trade in the locality, what representative enterprises must earn in order to maintain their stock at par. In other words, if enterprises engaged in a similar business must on the average earn 12 per cent on their issued capital stock to keep the value of their stock at par, the percentage should be capitalized by dividing it by 12.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS

1. NATURE OF TAX.—The capital stock tax due July 1, 1922, is an excise tax payable in advance for the privilege of doing business from July 1, 1922, to June 30, 1923.

2. DATE OF FILING RETURNS.—During July of each year.

3. TENTATIVE RETURN.—Filing of a tentative return will avoid penalty for delinquent filing, but does not authorize withholding of the tax. Complete return as far as possible and submit an approximate estimate as a basis in order that an initial assessment may be made. See Art. 21, Reg. 54.

4. EXAMINATION OF RECORDS AND WITNESSES.—For the purpose of ascertaining the correctness of any return or of making a return where none has been made or of preparing a new return where the one submitted is false or fraudulent the Commissioner has authority to designate a revenue agent or inspector to examine witnesses and books, records, papers, or other memoranda.

5. EXTENSION OF TIME.—If on account of sickness or absence of the officer charged with making the return, it is impossible to prepare and file a return on or before July 31, the collector, upon application in writing, may grant an extension of not exceeding 30 days for making and filing the return. If extension is granted, the letter of the collector must be attached to the return. Neither the Commissioner nor the collector has authority to grant an extension greater than 30 days from July 31.

6. SIGNATURES AND VERIFICATION.—Returns must be signed and verified by two officers of the corporation, that is, by the president, vice president, or other principal officer, and by the treasurer or other financial officer, and must be sworn to before an officer authorized to administer oaths, and the seal of the attesting officer, if he is required to have a seal, must be impressed on the return. The names of the corporation and the names of the officers signing the return should be plainly written or printed on the return. If, however, the tax is not over $100, the return may be signed and acknowledged by one officer, and the return may be signed or acknowledged before two witnesses instead of under oath.

7. TAX.—From the total fair average value of the capital stock the sum of $5,000 is deductible and the tax is at the rate of 1 cent for each full $1,000 of balance. (See line 14 to 17 on page 1.)

8. PENALTIES.—In case of any failure to make and file a return or list within the time prescribed by law, or prescribed by the Commissioner of Internal Revenue or the collector in pursuance of law, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 25 per centum of the amount, except that when a return is due after such time and it is shown that the failure to file it was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect, no such addition shall be made to the tax. In case of failure or fraudulent return or list in willfully made, the Commissioner of Internal Revenue shall add to the tax 50 per centum of its amount. The amount of the tax is payable to the collector at any time after July 1, 1922, but penalties for nonpayment do not attach until ten days after notice and demand has been served by the collector upon the taxpayer. (See sections 1400, 1402, and 1411, Revenue Act of 1921, and section 1016, T. R. C.)

9. REGULATIONS.—For further information regarding this tax see Regulations 64.

Perpetual Check List

Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

30-21-1749: C. D. 982.

In accordance with the principle set out in article 857 of Regulations 45, dividends are deemed to be paid from true earned surplus. In carrying the earnings for a proportionate part of the year to surplus account for the purpose of declaring a dividend, the earnings so carried should represent the earnings of the current year less accrued expenses. Where the true earned surplus of the current year proportioned to the date of dividend payment is not sufficient to cover such payment, the true earnings included in the surplus account as of the beginning of the taxable year will be deemed to cover such payment.

This does not conflict with the principle embodied in article 845 of the regulations. It is in accord with the accounting principle that where accounts are kept on the accrual basis, expenses of a year should be charged against the income of that year. In order, therefore, to apply this principle, taxes of the current year should be charged against the income of that year, and only that proportion of the income of the current year is available for dividends which is in excess of taxes and other proper charges against such income.

I('22)-29-416: I. T. 1396.

Revenue Act of 1918.

In computing, under the provisions of article 857, the amount of earnings available for the payment of dividends, all income for the taxable year over and above expenses, taxes, and other accrued liabilities of such year, regardless of whether or not any part of such income is exempt from Federal income tax, should be considered.

In making such computation donations previously paid must be deducted.

SPECIAL TAXES ON OCCUPATIONS REGULATIONS.

ternal Revenue, give notice to each person liable to pay any taxes stated therein, to be left at his dwelling or usual place of business, or to be sent by mail, stating the amount of such taxes and demanding payment thereof. If such person does not pay the taxes within ten days after the service or the sending by mail of such notice, it shall be the duty of the collector or his deputy to collect the said taxes with a penalty of five per centum additional upon the amount of taxes, and interest at the rate of one per centum a month.

7658 Art. 63. Penalties.—Any person who fails to file a return of tax due 8071 within the time prescribed by law or regulations made pursuant to law is liable to an additional amount equal to 25 per cent. of the total tax due except when it is shown that the failure to file the return within the prescribed time was due to a reasonable cause and not to willful neglect. If a false or fraudulent return is filed the taxpayer is liable to an additional amount equal to 50 per cent. of the total tax. A person who fails to pay or truly to account for any tax or to make any return prescribed by law is in addition to the increased tax as set forth above liable to a penalty of not more than $1,000. If he willfully refuses to pay or account for any tax or make any return required by law, or willfully attempts in any manner to evade the tax he is guilty of a misdemeanor and in addition to the increased taxes provided for he is liable to a fine of $10,000, or imprisonment for not more than one year, or both, together with the costs of prosecution. Where a false or fraudulent return is filed it is considered prima facie evidence of a willful attempt to evade tax and the penalties provided by law for such offense will be invoked. Under section 3184, Revised Statutes, a taxpayer who does not pay a special tax assessed within 10 days from the date of the mailing by the collector of a notice and demand for payment is liable to a 5 per cent. penalty and interest at the rate of 1 per centum per month.

7659 Art. 64. Claims for refund of special taxes.—(a) In all cases where special tax has been collected and such collection is alleged to be illegal or erroneous, it will be necessary for the person so paying the tax to file claim for refund on Treasury Department Form 843, obtainable at the office of the collector. The completed claim should be filed with the collector and should be accompanied by the special-tax stamp, or receipt, representing payment of the amount claimed.

7660 (b) No claim for the redemption of or allowance for special-tax stamps shall be allowed unless presented within two years after the purchase of said stamps from the Government. The authority for such redemption or allowance is the act of May 12, 1900 (31 Stat. 177), as amended by the act of June 30, 1902 (32 Stat. 506) [see ¶8024 herein].

7661 (c) Where taxes are paid pursuant to an assessment and not by the issuance of stamps, claims for the refund of amounts so paid are governed by sections 3220 to 3228 R. S., as amended, and must be presented within four years next after payment of such taxes, as provided in section 1316 of the Revenue Act of 1921.

AUTHORITY FOR REGULATIONS.

[Sec. 1309, ¶8009.]

The object of making this inventory was to determine the actual cash value of the physical property as of July —, 1914. A complete inventory of all items of plant and equipment on hand and in active use at January —, 1920, was taken. The date of installation of all items added since July —, 1914, has been determined from the records of the company, careful analysis of plant and expense accounts having been made by accountants. These items were further checked by information obtained from employees in the plant and the remaining items are, therefore, considered to be the items which must necessarily have been in place on July —, 1914. The prices applied to the items acquired from July —, 1914, to January —, 1920, have been actual cost prices taken from the records of the company by the accountants who worked in conjunction with the engineers.

It was then necessary to determine the value of the remaining items of equipment in the inventory as of July —, 1914.

The first step was to determine the reproduction cost of these items as of July —, 1914. This was done by using the records of the previous corporation and the records of the O Company. Preference was given to records of the previous corporation when these were available, with the exception of the buildings of the plant which were acquired at a bankrupt sale. Records of the O Company are made up almost wholly of actual sales to numerous corporations and are not based on quotations or prices given "for appraisal purposes" and are, therefore, we believe, the best evidence of the market price. Every effort has been made to have the prices applied conservative.

The reproduction cost having been determined, the next step was to determine the depreciated value and this was arrived at as follows: Competent engineers made careful examinations of each item of equipment to determine its actual condition and the accrued depreciation as of January —, 1920, was thus determined. Yearly depreciation rates were then determined and the entire plant worked back to January —, 1914, all as shown by accompanying schedules.

In explanation of the method adopted, the appraiser has sworn:

I have investigated the accounts of the predecessor corporation of the M Company and in my opinion it is impossible to correctly determine the plant value as of July —, 1914, from their books of account.

The method of accounting then in use does not show, and it is impossible to determine from the books, the expenditures made for rebuilding, renewals, replacements, and extraordinary repairs. Plant items also were charged to expense in some cases, and no consistent method of depreciating the property was ever used.

It is now contended by the appellant that the value of the buildings and machinery and equipment as of July —, 1914, as shown by the appraisal, should be employed in computing the invested capital and that in addition there should be included the par value of the 10x dollars common stock, for the reason that it represented the value to the company of the five-year agreement with A which was reasonably worth the par value of the stock.

Transmitting the appeal the Unit states:

The Unit has taken the stand that the values established by the corporation and set up on its book should be used in the absence of more definite proof of the value of the property involved. The values shown on the books can not be analyzed and it is a well recognized fact that the assets of bankrupt concerns are very often inflated.

With this in mind, we find that the officers of the new corporation revalued the assets and wrote them down to such an extent that a capital impairment of over 60 per cent resulted. The Unit contends that the officers of the corporation would not reduce the book values of its assets to a figure below the actual worth of the assets, if by so doing a substantial capital impairment was shown, unless the original values of the assets were inflated.

The Committee has carefully examined the appraisal submitted in this case and finds that it has been prepared in the manner stated by the appraisers, that the rates of depreciation used were liberal, and that it complies with the requirements of T. D. 3367 (Internal Revenue Bulletin I-30, p. 17) [¶1288 herein].

It is, therefore, believed that the appraisal constitutes sufficiently definite proof of the value of the property involved as of the date paid in for the purpose of computing invested capital, subject, of course, to check by the Unit as to the particular items and rates of depreciation.

The contention of the appellant, however, that the par value of the 10x dollars of common stock should be added in computing invested capital does not appear to be well taken. As shown by the above recitation of facts, all the capital stock, including the common stock with the exception of w shares which were issued for cash, was issued for the assets of the N Company and not in consideration of services rendered or to be rendered by A. It is expressly provided in the contract entered into between the creditors' committee and A that the common stock was to be turned over to him only upon the redemption of the preferred stock within a period of five years and not otherwise. In other words, it was to be used to pay him a bonus for retiring the preferred stock within the period stated. Until the stock was actually retired, no title whatever vested in A, and the only thing back of it was the assets of the N Company, the value of which as of July —, 1914, for the purpose of invested capital has already been allowed in full in this recommendation.

It is, therefore, recommended, in the appeal of the M Company, that the action of the Income Tax Unit in reducing the appellant's invested capital as of July —, 1914, to 63.29 $\times$  dollars be reversed and that the appraisal as of that date, now filed, subject to check as to individual items, be made the basis of the computation of invested capital.

I ('22)-33-459: I. T. 1420.

Revenue Acts of 1917, 1918, and 1921.

In 1885 certain persons organized a corporation and a certificate of incorporation was issued to them. In 1911, in pursuance of the advice of an attorney, the company was reorganized in order to cure defects in its original organization, and the powers of the corporation were broadened, its capital increased, and its existence made perpetual. In 1914 the name of the corporation was changed and thereupon all of the assets standing in the then name of the corporation were transferred by a deed having a covenant of warranty to the corporation designated by its new corporate name.

Held, that the copy of the original charter of the corporation and of the renewed charter, and the other evidence submitted by the taxpayer, disclose that the amendmen of its charter and the subsequent change in its name did not create a new corporation, nor cause any change in its existing corporate organization. The invested capital of the corporation, accordingly, must be computed in the same manner as though the invested capital of the corporation originally formed in 1885 was being determined. The values of the assets on hand at the beginning of 1917 and later years must be determined by their values at the time of their original acquisition, as limited and defined by the Revenue Acts applicable to the taxable years involved, and their values at the date of the amendment of the corporation's charter or at the date of its change of name can not be considered for such purpose.

I ('22)-49-628: I. T. 1523.

Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921.

If a corporation acquires patents or other intangible assets for cash, such assets may be reflected in its invested capital at an amount equal to the amount of the cash actually paid for them, but if they are acquired for stock they can be reflected in invested capital only to an amount not in excess of 25 per cent of the capital stock of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year. This limitation prevents intangibles purchased with stock from being included at their full cost only when such cost exceeds in amount 25 per cent of the par value of the total stock or shares of the corporation outstanding at the beginning of the taxable year. No expenditures of capital made by a corporation in organization or advertising can be used to increase the value at which the patents owned by it may be reflected in its invested capital, as this amount is fixed by the cost of the acquisition of the patents, subject to the 25 per cent limitation in case they were acquired for stock.

In the case of the reorganization of a corporation which does not involve a change in corporate identity, no change takes place in the value at which its intangibles acquired for cash are to be included in its invested capital, and no change takes place in this value with reference to patents or other intangibles acquired for stock, unless the reorganization involves a change in the amount of the corporation's capital stock which is sufficient to cause a different result when the 25 per cent limitation is applied.

In case the reorganization involves a change of corporate identity through which the assets of an existing corporation are acquired by a successor, the rule applicable to the original corporation will apply in determining the amount at which the intangible assets acquired by the new corporation may be included in its invested capital. If such assets are acquired for cash, they may be included in computing invested capital at their cost price, while if they are acquired for stock they may be included to an amount not in excess of the par value of the stock issued for the same, subject to the 25 per cent limitation, as explained above.

The statements in the preceding paragraph, however, are subject to requirements of sections 331 of the Revenue Acts of 1918 and 1921.

From the foregoing it is apparent that the reorganization of a corporation does not necessarily cause any decrease in its capital represented by patents or other intangibles.

Paid in or earned surplus and undivided profits not including surplus and undivided profits earned during the year.

The questions involved here rest on whether the proportionate amounts of annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus account of the several stockholders were dividends, or in whole or in part earned surplus.

Article 858, Regulations 45, in so far as pertinent here reads as follows:

A dividend other than a stock dividend affects the computation of invested capital from the date when the dividend is payable and not from the date when it is declared, except that where no date is set for its payment the date when declared will be considered also the date when payable for the purpose of this article. * * * From the date when any dividend is payable the amount which the several stockholders are entitled to receive will be treated as if actually paid to them, whether or not it is so paid in fact, and the surplus and undivided profits, either of the taxable year or of the preceding years, will in accordance with the foregoing provisions be deemed to be reduced as of that date by the full amount of the dividend.

The statute of Connecticut as to dividends follows the general form as that of most States. It prohibits a corporation from paying any dividend or from making any other distribution of its assets except from its net profits or actual surplus, unless in accordance with the law as to the reduction of stock or upon dissolution.

While the resolutions referred to do not specifically refer to the amounts credited to the so-called individual surplus accounts as dividends, the purpose is clear that it was intended to make available to each stockholder at least a large part if not all of the amounts so credited. This is evidenced by the large withdrawals without any further corporate action. While the usual and proper way to appropriate corporation profits to stockholders is by formally declaring a dividend, it has been very generally held that there may be a division of profits among stockholders without the formality of declaring a dividend, and that such a division is the equivalent of a dividend. (Smith v. Moore, 199 Fed., 689; Hartley v. Pioneer Iron Works, 73 N. E., 576 (N. Y.)) And it has been held that if the directors ascertain the profits and set apart the portion thereof that is to be divided, a failure to observe the forms prescribed by law as to the time, place and manner of declaring them is immaterial. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., 58 Atl., 313 (N. J.)) This is the law in Connecticut. (Cogswell v. Second National Bank, 60 Atl., 1059, affirmed in 204 U. S., 1.)

In the instant case the directors having ascertained the profits, and set apart certain sums which were actually credited to the individual stockholders, all matters of form are immaterial. The evidence shows that at stated times the specific things necessary to warrant a declaration of dividends were done and that the profits actually made were set apart for distribution among the stockholders. This is the essence of the declaration of a dividend, so far as it results in segregating a portion of the property of the company for the use of the stockholders. Therefore, the corporation, as such, had no property interest in the money thus set apart. (Breslin v. Fries-Breslin Co., supra; Barnes v. Spencer & Barnes Co., 127 N. W., 752 (Mich.); Cogswell v. Second National Bank, supra (Conn.)) The effect of the declaration of a dividend is at once the establishment of a debt due from the corporation to each stockholder. (Boardman v. Mansfield, 66 Atl., 169 (Conn.); Bishop v. Bishop, 71 Atl., 583 (Conn.))

The amounts credited to the accounts of the respective stockholders were freely drawn upon and the amounts so credited reported as income by the individual stockholders when credited to their accounts. These are circumstances which are of great persuasive force in reaching a conclusion as to how the individual stockholders themselves considered the amounts so credited.

It is, therefore, the opinion of this office that the proportionate amounts of the annual earned surplus credited to the respective individual surplus accounts of the several stockholders were dividends, and that such surplus accounts were in effect debts owing at all times by the corporation to its stockholders, any withdrawal by individual stockholders merely being a debit against the proper individual surplus account. It follows that for the years 1917 and 1918 the net credit balances of individual surplus accounts can not be included in the invested capital of the M Company.

In accordance with the above opinion of the Solicitor, in which the Committee concurs, it is recommended that the action of the Income Tax Unit in holding that certain amounts standing as credits to the individual surplus accounts of stockholders on January 1, 1917, and January 1, 1918, represented dividends owing to its stockholders and not, as contended by the appellant, earned surplus which could properly be included in invested capital, be sustained, and, accordingly, that the appeal be denied.

provided in Office Decision 127, S. T. 5-21-250,* that whether or not a given transfer of legal title to stock results wholly from operation of law depends upon the effect given to the particular transaction by the law of the state in which such transaction occurred. Section 270 of the Tax Law of the State of New York (Birdseye's Consol. Laws of N. Y. Vol. VIII, p. 8607) imposes a stock transfer tax identical with that imposed by the Revenue Act of 1921 in so far as the present question is concerned. In construing Section 270 of the New York Tax Law, the following situation was encountered and presented to the Attorney General of that State for a ruling thereon:

"A testator left certain personal property, including shares of stock, in trust to be held by two named trustees, and in case of the death of either the survivor to have the right to nominate a co-trustee to succeed the one deceased. One of the trustees having died, the survivor nominated the Brooklyn Trust Company as successor co-trustee and the latter was duly appointed co-trustee with the survivor by order of the court."

"The stock in question which had stood in the joint names of the two trustees appointed by the will, and upon which stamps had been affixed at the time of the transfer to the trustees from the executors, is about to be surrendered by the surviving trustee for new certificates in the joint names of himself and the Brooklyn Trust Company as co-trustee."

Upon the above stated facts the following decision was made:

"Generally speaking, at least, the word 'transfer' as used in section 270 of the Tax Law has reference to a transaction between living parties and not to cases of devolution of title by death. (Reports of Attorney General 1911, Vol. 2, p. 107; 1912, Vol. 2, p. 211.)

"In cases of this character the title to the stock vests, by operation of law, in the succeeding trustee upon his appointment and there is no transfer within the meaning of section 270 of the Tax Law, but a mere substitution of evidences of title, which is insufficient to subject the transaction to the payment of a tax." Rept. of Attorney General (1912 N. Y.) Vol. 11, p. 352.

The above ruling was subsequently extended by the same authority to apply to the case of where two of three co-trustees resigned and pursuant to the provisions of the will the one remaining trustee appointed a fourth person to serve with him as trustee. Rept. of Attorney General (1914 N. Y.) Vol. 11, p. 345.

4033 In view of the above mentioned opinions of the Attorney General of New York, you are advised in reply to the questions enumerated in your letter that:

(1) No stamp tax accrues on the transfer of stock from a trustee who has died to a substituted trustee appointed by a New York court to continue the same trust.

(2) No stamp tax accrues where there are two trustees and on the death of one the title is transferred from the deceased trustee to the surviving trustee alone.

(3) No stamp tax accrues where there are two or more trustees and one dies and the court appoints a new trustee to fill the place of the

STAMP TAX REGULATIONS.

(T. D. 3417.)

4027 Trust certificates issued under the Pennsylvania Plan held to be taxable as "Certificates of Indebtedness."—Comment: Decision of United States District Court, Eastern District of Pennsylvania, in Fidelity Trust Company vs. Lederer, Collector. Sur trial by the court sitting without a jury. After trial Judge Dickinson says: "This case, although in form assumpsit, raises the sole question of the legality of a tax levy. The very question now raised was raised and disposed of on a rule for judgment. Judgment was refused [¶4010]. This necessitated a trial hearing, but the question to be determined has in no wise changed." And in conclusion: "Our conclusion is on the trial what it was on the rule for judgment, that these car-trust certificates are subject to the tax imposed by this act of Congress." (T. D. 3417, Dec. 16, 1922. Reported in full in Internal Revenue Bulletin No. 52 of the 1922 Series, page 15.)

(Decision.)

Revenue Act of 1918.

August 18, 1922.

Installment purchase agreement contracts even though embodying an "agreement to pay" in terms, are not per se promissory notes, and so, are not taxable as such.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF GEORGIA NORTHERN DIVISION

Haverty Furniture Co.

vs.

United States.

4029 The suggestion that the form of contract, with the alteration of it, is an effort to evade the tax may be laid aside. Where one form of instrument is taxed and another not, one may, if he can so satisfactorily transact his affairs, avoid the form that is taxed and use that which is not. This was held in United States vs. Isham, 17 Wall. 496. Under the Revenue

Act of 1898, which laid a tax upon bank checks, a practice was indulged without censure by which in lieu of a check an untaxed receipt to the bank for so much money as paid to a named person was issued, and taken up by the bank on presentation. If the instruments here are promissory notes they are taxable, otherwise not. As again ruled in Isham's case, the taxability of such an instrument is to be determined by its face alone. Outside facts are of no importance. Nor is the practice of the Internal Revenue Department helpful here. No practice appears that decides this question. The regulations and decisions referred to furnish no test, for there is as much difficulty in applying them to the papers here in question as in applying the words of the Act.

4030 What did Congress mean by the term "promissory notes?" It did not use such broad expressions as "all written evidences of debt," or "all written obligations to pay money." By "promissory notes," used in connection with drafts and checks, was intended commercial paper which generally throughout the United States would be so called and recognized. The exclusion of circulating bank notes illustrates what was thought otherwise to be included. Whether negotiability was contemplated or not, whether an I. O. U. or a due bill is to be included need not now be decided. But there must be an instrument at least whose plain purport is an unconditional and absolute promise to pay a fixed sum to a named or certain person at a fixed time or at sight or on demand, according to commercial usage. This much is included in all the definitions of a promissory note set forth in 7 Cyc. page 532. Instruments which appear on their face to be essentially memorandums of sale, although they evidence an obligation to pay money when the sale shall be consummated, were not intended. Such were dealt with in another portion of the Act, where only those of sales of produce for future delivery on exchanges were taxed. Looking solely to the face of these papers, there is nothing to show that the sale agreed upon therein had been executed by a delivery of the furniture. A suit for the purchase money could not be maintained by merely putting in evidence such a paper. It would have to be supplemented by proof that the seller had on his part delivered the furniture, or tendered delivery. Hence there is here no absolute unconditional promise to pay. Even those forms containing the words "for which I agree to pay" are not such. The meaning is that the buyer agrees to pay on the seller's delivering the furniture. The writings are memorandums of sale which would satisfy the statute of frauds in proving the contract, but they are not promissory notes within the meaning of this statute.

4031 Judgment is accordingly rendered in favor of the plaintiff against the United States, for One Hundred and Fifty-eight and 91/100 Dollars and costs of suit.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS REGARDING TAX ON INCOME DERIVED FROM GOVERNMENT CONTRACTS.

Every corporation which derives during the calendar year 1921 a net income of more than $10,000 from any Government contract or contracts made between April 6, 1917, and November 11, 1918, both dates inclusive, the tax shall be such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1918, using the excess profits credit and the war profits credit applicable to that year, as the portion of the net income attributable to the Government contracts is bears to the entire net income, plus such a proportion of a tax computed at the rates for 1921 as the amount of the remaining net income bears to the entire net income. See Section 301(b) of the Revenue Act of 1921.

Government contracts may include: (a) A contract with the United States, (b) a contract with an agency of the United States, (c) a contract with an agency of each agency, and (d) a subcontract with a contractor under any such contract, provided in every case the contract or subcontract was for the benefit of the United States. Unenforceable contracts subsequently ratified are treated as though made when originally entered into. The Commissioner may require any contractor to file with him copies of his Government contracts entered into on and after April 6, 1917.

Perpetual Check List

Supplementary Rulings Reprinted from the Internal Revenue Bulletins.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word "none," in the column headed "Last Ruling," signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced, and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Revenue Act of 1921.

I ('22) 51-643: I. T. 1532.

On January 1, 1921, the M Company's business was the property of an individual. On September 1, 1921, a corporation having the same name as that under which this business had been previously conducted took over the entire assets and liabilities of the business. The individual income tax return of the individual owner included the income from the business for the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, while a corporation income and profits tax returns was filed by the corporation for the period from September 1 to December 31, 1921. In preparing an amended return in which the income from the business for the entire year was to be returned as the income of the corporation, under the provisions of section 229 of the Revenue Act of 1921, it was found that the withdrawal account of the former owner of the business for the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, included an item paid by him to the collector of internal revenue in settlement of his individual income tax for the year 1920.

The question was raised as to whether the entire withdrawal account of the individual owner should be considered as a dividend paid to him by the corporation or whether the Federal income tax item should be eliminated from the withdrawal account and be considered as an item of Federal income tax paid and not as a dividend.

Held, that the item of the individual owner's withdrawal account representing the amount paid in discharge of his individual Federal income tax for 1920 should be prorated so as to represent amounts which will be proportionate to the amount of his net income for 1920 which was derived from the M Company's business and to the remaining amount of his net income which was derived from other sources, respectively.

The portion of the withdrawal made for income tax payment which is proportionate to the individual owner's net income derived from the M Company's business should not be considered as a dividend received by him from the corporation and it is not subject to tax as such. It is to be considered as a payment from the capital of the M Company's business as at December 31, 1920, and must be excluded from the amount of the assets received by the corporation in determining its invested capital at January 1, 1921.

The balance of the withdrawal made for the income tax payment which is proportionate to the individual owner's net income derived from sources other than the M Company's business, if any, is to be considered as a dividend paid by the corporation during 1921 and will be taxable as such.

All other funds withdrawn by the individual owner for personal use during the period from January 1 to August 31, 1921, must be considered as dividends paid to him by the corporation.

GENERAL INSTRUCTIONS—READ WITH CARE.

1. PENALTIES.—For failure to file return when due, a fine not exceeding $500, or 25 per cent added to the tax, or both. For knowingly making a false statement in this return, a fine not exceeding $5,000, or imprisonment, or 50 per cent added to the tax, or any or all of the three.
  2. This return is required for the estate of every resident decedent whose gross estate exceeds $50,000, and for the estate of every nonresident decedent any part of whose gross estate is situated in the United States. The term "United States" used in this form means only the States, the Territories of Alaska and Hawaii, and the District of Columbia.
  3. This return is due one year after the date of death, and must be filed with the collector of the district in which the decedent had his permanent residence at the time of death, or, in the case of a nonresident, with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, Treasury Department, Washington, D. C.
  4. Regulations No. 37, Revised, 1919, should be carefully studied before making out this return.
  5. All papers used in preparing the return should be carefully preserved for reference or inspection. All estate tax returns are verified by an internal revenue officer before the tax is determined by the Bureau.
  6. If the decedent left a will, a certified copy must be filed in duplicate with the return.
- There should be filed in duplicate and as a part of the return such supplemental data and statements as may be necessary to substantiate the return and establish the correct tax.

  - (2) A certified copy of inventory of the complete gross estate, whether situated within or without the United States. Separate schedules should be made for property within and without the United States, respectively.
  - (3) If any deduction is claimed, a certified copy of schedule of debts and expenses allowed.
7. This form consists of cover sheets, general information sheet, and thirteen schedules. Care should be taken to see that the return is filed complete and that all schedules are included in the proper order.
- The inventory of the gross estate must be set forth upon the schedules provided, and may not be attached in the form of an exhibit.
8. The questions asked under each schedule should be specifically answered, and if the decedent owned no property of any class specified under the schedule, the word "None" should be written across the schedule.
9. If there is not sufficient space for all entries under any schedule, use additional sheets of the same size, numbering them consecutively as follows: Schedule A-1, A-2, etc., and insert them in the proper order in the return.
10. Any property owned jointly or as tenants in the entirety, should be entered under the schedule for the particular kind of property involved, with a statement of the origin, nature, and extent of the interest. Jointly owned real estate, for example, should be entered on Schedule A.
11. Where decedent died subsequent to February 24, 1919, property identified as received from an estate taxed within five years, and subsequent to October 3, 1917, or identified as exchanged for such property, must be entered in Schedule G exclusively and not under any other schedule, whether real estate or other property.
12. Further instructions will be found under each schedule. Returns not in accordance with the instructions upon this form will not be accepted.

revenue tax, as may have been spoiled . . . or in any manner wrongfully collected. . . . Provided further, that no claim for the redemption of or allowance for stamps shall be allowed unless presented within two years after the purchase of said stamps from the Government."

8103 By Section 3226 Revised Statutes [§8049] no suit can be maintained in any court for the recovery of any internal revenue tax alleged to have been erroneously or illegally collected until appeal has been made to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, as provided by law, and the decision of the Commissioner thereon has been had.

8104 The preliminary request to the Commissioner for an informal ruling was in no sense a claim for abatement or refund. Appellant affixed the stamps to the deeds without protest and after that no effort was made to secure redemption of or allowance for the stamps until long after the two-year period had expired.

8105 On the facts alleged in the petition the Court of Claims could not have done otherwise than sustain the demurrer. Rock Island, Arkansas and Louisiana Railway Company v. United States, 254 U. S. 141.

8106 The judgment of the Court of Claims is Affirmed.

The Supplementary Rulings are printed on the pages immediately preceding.

The Foreword to the Supplementary Rulings should be read.

Key.—The word “none,” in the column headed “Last Ruling,” signifies in each case that there are no special rulings bearing on the particular Article of Regulations 45 (1918 Act) or of Regulations 62 (1921 Act).

The numeral, in each case, shows how many serially numbered special rulings bearing on the particular Article have been reproduced, and indicates the last serial number of the group. These serial numbers appear in bold face type at the end of the special rulings themselves, within the Supplement.

Caution.—To the extent of the imposition of the excess-profits tax for 1921, the 1918 and 1921 laws are identical, except that domestic corporations entitled to the benefits of Section 262 of the 1921 Act (§1083) are grouped with foreign corporations for the purposes of the 1921 excess-profits tax. To much the same extent, with like qualifications, the provisions of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) are essentially identical (there are frequent verbal changes) to the provisions of Regulations 45 (1918 Act). The numbering of the Articles of Regulations 62 (1921 Act) is the same as that of the respective corresponding Articles of Regulations 45 (1918 Act), except as noted below. It follows then, that, except as noted below, for the purposes of the Supplementary Bulletin Rulings, the Article reference number is the same under either Act.

Revenue Act of 1921.

Inquiry is made as to whether the cost of rotogravure supplements comes within the purview of A. R. M. 141 [Ruling No. 8, above], which permits taxpayers engaged in the publication of newspapers to include in their invested capital, for tax purposes, moneys expended out of earned surplus or current earnings for the sole purpose of building up the circulation structure. It is stated that newspaper publishers employ rotogravure supplements largely as a circulation stimulant.

The question to be determined in cases affected by the ruling above referred to is whether the amounts claimed as an addition to invested capital can be identified as having been expended out of earned surplus or current earnings for the sole purpose of building up the circulation structure. It is believed that rotogravure supplements constitute a part of the news service furnished by newspapers to their subscribers and are not of such a nature that the expense thereof can be said to be incurred solely for the purpose of building up the circulation structure. It, therefore, follows that the moneys expended therefor may not be added to invested capital.

of 10x dollars for the payment of these notes, and it should have reduced its surplus accordingly.

It might be, as between the stockholders and creditors of the corporations, that the stockholders would be held estopped from denying that they still owe these notes to the corporation, but that is extremely doubtful, and could be determined only upon the happening of that contingency. However that may be, such an estoppel would not set up these notes as valid and legal obligations, but would only estop the stockholders from claiming that they had already been paid.

It is suggested, therefore, that the surplus account of the corporation be reduced each year by the amount which it paid as a dividend in satisfaction of these notes as they fell due. This conclusion necessarily reduced the corporation's invested capital by 40x dollars prior to the year 1917, and requires an adjustment on account of the 10x dollar note paid on June 1, 1917.

In view of the foregoing quoted opinion, with which the Committee is in accord, it is recommended that the surplus account of the corporation be reduced each year by the amount which was paid as a dividend in satisfaction of these notes as they fell due, and that the corporation's invested capital be reduced by 40x dollars prior to the year 1917 and a further adjustment of invested capital be made as of June 1, 1917, on account of the note paid through the medium of a special dividend on that date. Accordingly, it is recommended that the action of the Income Tax Unit be sustained and the taxpayer's appeal be denied.

Revenue Act of 1918.

Section 8632 of the Ohio General Code, which provides that at the time of making a subscription 10 per cent on each share subscribed for shall be paid, and which provides that the residue shall be paid in such installments at the times and places and to such persons as the directors require, has been construed by the Ohio courts as merely marking the time when the first installment shall be payable upon a stock subscription and as providing the mode for determining the time at which the residue shall become payable. (Chamberlain v. Railroad, 15 Ohio State, 249.) Stock issued without the payment of the first 10 per cent at the time of making the subscription is not invalid. (Smith v. Railroad, 15 Ohio State, 336, and Henry v. Railroad, 13 Ohio Reports, 187.) A note given for such 10 per cent is enforceable (Latham v. Insurance Co., 1 Bull., 127.)

In view of the above interpretation, it is held that, under the provisions of section 8632 of the Ohio General Code, promissory notes of subscribers may legally be received in respect of the entire amount of stock subscribed. Consequently, it follows that all the notes received by the M Company upon stock subscriptions may be included in the company's invested capital to the extent of their fair market value at the time paid in under the provisions of article 833 of Regulations 45, provided they were received in absolute payment and not as conditional payment only.

Revenue Acts of 1917, 1918, and 1921.

In 1885 certain persons organized a corporation and a certificate of incorporation was issued to them. In 1911, in pursuance of the advice of an attorney, the company was reorganized in order to cure defects in its original organization, and the powers of the corporation were broadened, its capital increased, and its existence made perpetual. In 1914 the name of the corporation was changed and thereupon all of the assets standing in the then name of the corporation were transferred by a deed having a covenant of warranty to the corporation designated by its new corporate name.

Held, that the copy of the original charter of the corporation and of the renewed charter, and the other evidence submitted by the taxpayer, disclose that the amendmen of its charter and the subsequent change in its name did not create a new corporation, nor cause any change in its existing corporate organization. The invested capital of the corporation, accordingly, must be computed in the same manner as though the invested capital of the corporation originally formed in 1885 was being determined. The values of the assets on hand at the beginning of 1917 and later years must be determined by their values at the time of their original acquisition, as limited and defined by the Revenue Acts applicable to the taxable years involved, and their values at the date of the amendment of the corporation's charter or at the date of its change of name can not be considered for such purpose.
